GRIZZLY GROWLS

(CLARENCE M. HUNT.)

LOOK WELL TO YOUR BALLOTS!

VOTERS OF CALIFORNIA, AND PARticularly those who pay taxes, should, before casting their ballots at the November 2 election, closely scrutinize the twenty-eight propositions that will be submitted by the state. Most of them have to do, directly or indirectly, with taxation, and, of course, are designed to increase the already-heavy load now being carried by the citizens who pay the taxes. As a matter of right and justice, none but tax-paying citizens should be privileged to vote on questions pertaining to taxation. Just as many people are reckless in the expenditure of some one else's money, so the non-tax-paying citizen is prone to vote for bond and exempt-from-taxation measures regardless of their merit.

Analyze proposition 11 on the November 2 ballot. The title, "Exempting Secondary Schools From Taxation," is misleading, giving the erroneous impression that the measure would exempt from taxation secondary public-schools when, as a matter of fact, the proposal was framed and is being sponsored solely in the interests of private schools. Every public-school in the state is already exempt from taxation. There is no earthly reason why the taxpayers of California should be compelled to support two systems of schools, one public and the other private. If you have confidence in the public-school system, VOTE "NO" ON PROPOSITION 11.

One of the biggest fool things the people of this state ever did was to exempt church property from taxation. Successful in that endeavor, the church people then agitated for, and eventually secured, the exemption of their colleges and universities from taxation. Now they want their secondary schools exempted and, if successful in that demand, will undoubtedly next sponsor a state bond issue for the purchase of additional church and school grounds and for the erection of edifices thereupon. In justice to The People, and that church and state may be effectually separated and kept separate, the provisions of the constitution exempting church and private-school properties from taxation should be repealed, and those institutions compelled to pay their just share of the taxes, as they can well afford to do.

It is well to consider these words of Benjamin Franklin: "When a religion is good, I conceive that it will support itself; and when it does not support itself, and God does not take care to support it, so that its professors are obliged to call for help of the civil power, 'tis a sign, I apprehend, of its being a bad one." And President U. S. Grant once said: "Keep the church and the state forever separate. . . . I would suggest the taxation of all property equally, whether church or corporation."

Proposition 12 is another tax-exemption proposal. Some 100,000 citizens, with property valued at approximately $63,000,000, are now exempt from taxation on account of military service. This is another case of giving a foot and a yard will be demanded. A splendid argument against this measure is, "Those most in need of aid (those who have no assets) secure no benefit from this section of the law." VOTE "NO" ON PROPOSITION 12.

Proposition 22, "Exempting Forest Trees From Taxation," has some good points, but the writer believes that all property, of every nature, except that which belongs to The People—property possessed by the federal, state, county and municipal governments—should be taxed. VOTE "NO" ON PROPOSITION 22.

Proposition 25, while entitled "Taxation and Local Assessment Taxation," is, in reality, another attempt to add to the growing list of property exempt from taxation, in this instance that used for burial of the human dead. VOTE "NO" ON PROPOSITION 25.

And then, there are the bond propositions. Students of taxation are repeatedly calling attention to this dangerous situation, but the voters appear to be afflicted with bond-mania, and give little heed to the warnings. Bonds should be voted in urgent cases only, not as a general rule. Between 1911 and 1925 the bonded indebtedness of all governments, state and local, in California increased 549 percent, to a total of $609,549,227, while the assessed value of all property increased but 141 percent!

Give particular heed to proposition 21, "Political Subdivisions Incurring Indebtedness." It now requires two-thirds of the total vote cast to carry a bond issue. If this proposal is enacted, but a two-thirds vote of the total cast on the proposal itself will be required. And that will make it decidedly much easier for promoters of bond issues to "put over" their schemes, thereby adding materially to the property owners' tax-load. VOTE "NO" ON PROPOSITION 21.

As to the state bond issues submitted via the November 2 ballot, consider each and every one thoroughly. If you are certain the state at large, not any particular class of citizens, will be benefited, vote for it. Otherwise, vote no. Take into consideration, too, this statement of Professor Rolland A. Vandegrift, director of research of the California Taxpayers' Association:

"California's bonded indebtedness will be increased 11,161 percent over the state's bonded indebtedness of 1911 if all the bond proposals carry in the November 2 election. If these proposals carry, the state indebtedness will be increased 502 percent over the present figures.

"These proposals would continue the already appalling increase of outstanding bonded indebtedness of the state, which in 1911 was $5,677,500 and in 1924 was $91,439,500, an increase of 1,510 percent. In 1925 the increase over 1911 was 1,650 percent, and in 1926 the increase over 1911 was 1,753 percent. The increase over 1911, if the bond proposals carry November 2, will be 11,161 percent, or more than 100 times as much as in 1911, when the present taxation system went into effect."

The state bond proposals on the November 2 ballot total $528,500,000. Professor Vandegrift points out that, for each bond dollar there would have to be paid back, in principal and interest, $2.53, and that the total to be repaid by the taxpayers would, therefore, be $1,337,105,000, practically one-fifth of the total assessed value of the state!

THE LURE OF CALIFORNIA

LINCOLN SONNTAG.

(Author of "The Holocaust and Other Poems" and "Up-To-Date Animal and Other Fables.")

Here's a tale of the State that is famed for its climes
From the mountains down to the sands of the shore,
Where the waters invite the swimmers betimes
And promise them safe to the land they adore;
Where rising high are the pillars of redwood,
Which bedecked in the groves are the wonders of men,
And the pines and the firs in splendor have stood
For their day, far away, on mountain and glen;
Where the falls plunge and roar on the far-running steeps
And coat them with silver that never is dull,
And the angler smiles as the finny one leaps
And the baskets are filled with nothing to cull.
By the shore are the rocks that are lashed by the sea—
Far-famed as the home of the lumbering seals,
And the mountains and trails that rise from the lea
Have a grandeur of view that climbing reveals.
Off the coast is an isle that the tourist allures
With its fish in the sea and its fish on the wing,
Where catching the tuna sport ever insures
And the gardens below more pleasure may bring.
In the home of the orange you may travel for hours
And be charmed by its blossoms and those of its kin,
And in parks you may see the fairest of flowers,
With treasures that stand your attention to win.
Have you heard of the dahlias and roses—
Which burst to their fullness in beauty's extreme,
Or the orchids and lilies plucked for their poses
On those who are following life's greatest dream?
The seekers of vigor may quaff at the springs
The waters of health that ascend from below,
And the boating at some and various things
So sweeten the days you will be sorry to go.
So come ye—the seekers for brightness and cheer,
Who are hoping for days that seldom have birth!
Ye will find these and more to the full of the year
In this State by the sea—the fairest of earth.

VOL. XL. WHOLE NO. 235

The United States Supreme Court, in February 1923, declared Hindus, no matter what their ancestry, not of the White race and therefore not entitled to citizenship. Being ineligible to citizenship, the Hindus, along with the Chinese and Japs, are affected by the exclusion provision of the Federal Immigration Law.

At the coming session of the Federal Congress, so press dispatches indicate, a determined effort will be made to have passed a bill defining the Hindus as "White persons" and thereby entitling them to citizenship and not subject to exclusion.

The passage of this bill will mean the end of the exclusion of aliens ineligible to citizenship, and there is no doubt that it is designed for that very purpose. It will be vigorously opposed, and should go down to defeat. Get in touch with your representatives in Congress and urge them, in the interest of a White United States, to work and to vote against this bill.

In an address before an Eastern gathering of lawyers the other day a public official, speaking on the Prohibtion Amendment to the Federal Constitution, which is disgracefully violated throughout the nation, held that excuses made by violators can also apply to any other crime, and declared the liquor vendor has no more right to claim infringement of personal liberty than has the highwayman or the murderer. Referring to the citizen who purchases "booze," in defiance of the constitution, he said:

"I am asking you to see that the man who pays another to commit an offense is doing as great or a greater wrong than the one who receives the money and does the act. I am asking you to raise your voices, in public and in private, against such conduct, and in warning the man who, to secure what he wants, pays others to commit crime, that he is teaching others to take from him what they want when and as they can, by whatever force is necessary.

CALIFORNIA HAPPENINGS OF FIFTY YEARS AGO

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

THE PRESIDENTIAL POLITICAL CAMpaign of 1876, which terminated election day, November 6, created a vast amount of interest throughout California. Concluding the campaign in this state, the Democrats had a rally in San Francisco the 4th. Five thousand marchers, with brass bands and fireworks galore, participated in a torchlight procession, and their most prominent speakers orated. The Republicans endeavored to eclipse this demonstration the following night. Betting on the result of the election was at even money and thousands of dollars were wagered.

The closeness of the result, its uncertainty and the contradictory reports, kept the bulletin boards surrounded by anxious, cheering crowds as returns favorable to their parties were posted, during the whole week. Many cheered themselves hoarse, only to go home in the end discomfited by the uncertainty, which finally hinged on the disputed result in one state. At the end of the month it appeared that Hayes, Republican, was to be elected by one electoral vote, but the result was still in doubt and the complications arising gave many a fear that civil war might follow.

The porter, a convivial Scotchman, of the corporation offices where the writer was then employed, was sent on the afternoon of the day after the election to a newspaper office to get the result. He returned three days later with a report that the "collectoral" vote had not yet been counted. He had joined each cheering crowd, as victory ebbed and flowed, and celebrated to his full content.

California was carried by the Republicans, Hayes receiving 79,260 and Tilden 76,464 votes. The Republicans elected Davis and Page as congressmen, the Democrats elected Luttrell, and the fourth district was in doubt, the official returns giving Pacheco, Republican, 19,104 and Wigginton, Democrat, 19,103 votes. The contest went into court, where Pacheco won, but he was finally unseated by the House and both served part of the term. On account of the excited state of the people and their desire for the latest news, extras were sold on the streets in the large cities every hour of the day during the week following election day from breakfast time until midnight.

ANTI-COOLIE DEMONSTRATION.

Thanksgiving Day was observed Thursday, November 30. The churches held religious services, while the saloons served turkey free lunches and Tom-and-Jerry beverages. Turkey shooting matches and raffles prevailed all over the state. Prices of food products for Thanksgiving dinners were very reasonable: Turkeys, 20c a pound; chickens, 50c each; ducks, $4 dozen, with quail plentiful at $1.50 dozen; California eggs, 45c and Nebraska eggs 30c dozen; roll butter, 45c and firkin butter 25c pound; spuds, ½c pound, bacon 15c and ham 17c pound.

The Southern California Fair opened at Los Angeles November 13 under very auspicious conditions. A large attendance was at the races in the afternoons and visited the exhibits in the evenings.

A fifty-mile riding race between J. P. Smith and Senor Ruiz was another American and Mexican partisan contest and the two nationalities divided at the poolbox in a betting furore. The riders rode mustangs, changing at the end of each mile. Smith met with a few mishaps that caused him to be beaten a mile. Ruiz gave the Mexicans the joy of their lives in silver dollars. He won in two hours and two minutes.

A big trotting match at Oakland between "Oakland Maid," "May Howard," "Dan Voorhees" and "Saint James" drew an immense crowd of betting turfites. "May Howard" won the first heat and "Oakland Maid," the first choice of the bettors, took the next three.

A congressional postal committee of three congressmen arrived in San Francisco November 15 and was considering the establishment of a fast mail railroad service, reducing the time from Chicago to San Francisco by one day.

November 15 an immense anti-coolie demonstration was made in San Francisco. After a big parade through the principal streets it entered the Mechanics Institute Pavilion, where Mayor Bryant presided over a mass meeting addressed by Senator Phil. Roach, Congressman Horace Davis and other prominent citizens.

During a meeting of the Chinese congressional investigating committee in San Francisco November 17 the indomitable Frank M. Pixley got into an argument with the Rev. W. W. Brier, a leading clergyman of San Francisco, who had attacked the character of the White labor available and during which he charged Pixley with prevarication. Pixley promptly proceeded to "put a head" on the minister, amid the applause of the spectators.

Russell, the editor of the "Santa Barbara Index," in an editorial named Col. Otis, editor of the "Press," "a broken down newspaper tramp." The colonel procured a horsewhip and, finding Russell in the postoffice, gave him a thrashing. Russell drew a knife and inflicted a flesh wound on the colonel's arm before the gathered crowd separated them.

OPERA HOUSE DISASTER.

Edwin Booth, the great tragedian, with the California theater company began a tour of the interior cities in his Shakesperean roles. He viewed the locality on the Sacramento City river front where he jumped in twenty years before, "to shuffle off this mortal coil" when despondent over his supposed failure to become an actor.

The Royal Marionettes, with two carloads of scenery and twenty-two people, were entertaining audiences in the different towns of the state. The Fabri opera troupe, with Mme. Fabri as the prima donna, was giving music lovers a treat. Frank Mayo and company were touring in the melodrama, "Davy Crockett."

Two actors who were fired by Tom Maguire, the well-known San Francisco manager, after a performance in his theater, called about 4 a. m. on an undertaker, informed him that Tom had passed away and requested him to send his dead-wagon to Tom's late residence and take charge of his remains at once. The undertaker did as he was bid, and proceeded to the residence of Maguire. He was astonished when, after ringing the doorbell, to see it opened by Tom. The undertaker's disappointment and Tom's wrath were about equal.

George Chapman, a veteran of the stage and once an actor of prominence in the early days, died in San Francisco November 16, aged 73. He was the first, and considered the best, "Uncle Tom" the role had found.

An awful catastrophe occurred at Sacramento November 15. Moore's opera house had been constructed out of the upper story of Wilson's livery stable on Second street near I. The opening night it was packed with men and boys numbering about 500. Shortly after the performance began the dress circle and stage crashed to the first floor, carrying a large part of the audience with it. S. W. Perry, Wm. J. Forster, Frank Myers, Michael Tierney, John Callaghan, Wm. M. Massey, T. C. Woodle and C. D. Humphrey were killed, four others were believed to be fatally hurt, and seventy-five or more were injured. A fire alarm, a few minutes later, brought the fire and police departments and several thousand people to the scene, but it took all night to remove the debris and rescue the injured beneath it.

Red Bluff, Tehama County, citizens celebrated November 14 the completion and opening of a free bridge built across the Sacramento River. E. J. Lewis delivered an oration. The members of the board of supervisors were each presented with a gold watch and chain in appreciation of their successful work. The bridge cost $35,000.

STAGE ROBBING GROWING INDUSTRY.

In the Enterprise hydraulic mine at Smartsville, Yuba County, November 1 a blast of 1,700 kegs of powder was exploded and did great execution in shattering the bank.

Dr. Stockton, in Kern County, exhibited a sweet potato he grew that weighed 22½ pounds.

PIONEER LETTERCARRIER MONUMENT

THE MEMORY OF JOHN A. "SNOWshoe" Thompson, poneer lettercarrier of California, is to be perpetuated in a monument to be dedicated at Carthay Circle, November 14.

"Snowshoe" Thompson was born in Norway, April 30, 1827. In 1851 he came to California, landing in El Dorado County. In 1856, hearing of the difficulties encountered in getting mail over the Sierras in wintertime, he volunteered his services as a snowshoe letter carrier, and made his first trip in that service in 1856. For twenty winters he traveled through the Sierras. Knowing that mail could not reach California at the worst season of the year unless he carried it over the mountains, he took pride in the work and, like a soldier in battle, counted each trip a victory. He died in Diamond Valley, thirty miles south of Carson City, Nevada State, May 15, 1876.

The complete history of "Snowshoe" Thompson appeared in The Grizzly Bear for August 1924. Quoting from that article, with reference to his letter carrying: "Mounted upon his shoes, which resembled sled runners, and with a long pole held horizontally in his hands as a balance, he almost flew over the snow and down the mountain sides. On his first memorable journey from Placerville [El Dorado County] to Carson Valley, a distance of ninety miles, with his mail-bags strapped upon his back, he crossed drifts of snow from thirty to fifty feet deep.

"After making the trip back and forth a number of times he became a fixture and a necessity. He was the one man who kept up a chain of communication between the Pacific Coast and the Atlantic states. No matter how terrific the gale, how deep the snow, he generally landed at his destination on time. When others would not venture from their homes, he bravely set out on his journey over trackless, snow-mantled valleys and faced the storm-tossed pines and rugged wilds. There were no landmarks, no wagon roads, no hamlets to guide him, and frequently the tall pines were all but buried. It was often predicted he would never return, but he always bobbed up serenely, none the worse for his experiences.

"The mail-bags weighed from sixty to eighty pounds, and the winter he carried the mails for Chorpenning they weighed over 100 pounds. An ordinary man, wearing shoes and traveling on good roads, would have succumbed under the strain. During the snowy season it took three days to make the trip from Placerville to Carson Valley. The return trip was made in two days, making an average of forty-five miles in a day.

"Thompson never wore an overcoat, packed blankets or carried unnecessary articles of clothing to encumber him. His provisions were of the simplest kind—such as he could eat as he ran—jerked beef, dried sausages, a few crackers or biscuit, and his drink was a handful of snow or a quaff from a rippling brook. He had no use for either a pistol or for liquor. 'Snowshoe' traveled both by day and by night, kept to a general course, and was guided by trees, rocks and moss by day and by the stars at night."

J. Harvey McCarthy, who has done, and is doing, so much to preserve California's past, is the donor of the monument, and the dedicatory ceremonies will be conducted by Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W., with which he is affiliated. A program, in charge of Adolfo G. Rivera, chairman of the Parlor's history and landmarks committee, will be presented by the Native Sons and Native Daughters of Los Angeles County.

HISTORICAL PAGEANT IN PROGRESS.

Plans are being made for the observance, under the auspices of the Southern California Historical Society, of the one hundredth anniversary of the coming of the first American citizen —Jedediah Strong Smith—to California—November 27, 1826. A pageant will probably be presented, in December. A splendid account of Smith's activities appeared in The Grizzly Bear for October 1926.

With this idea in view, a dinner was held in the Chamber of Commerce Building October 21, and was well attended by Pioneers, Native Sons, Native Daughters and others. Among the speakers, who urged recognition of the historical importance of Smith's arrival, were Dr. Rockwell D. Hunt, president Southern California Historical Society, and Dr. Owen C. Coy of the history department of the University of Southern California.

over the proposal to change the name of Figueroa street to Garland avenue, [illegible] not only be heard in Fremont p[illegible] but [illegible] deavor to have the proceedings [illegible].

Figueroa street was so named in memory of Jose Figueroa, Mexican governor of California from 1833 to 1835. He came to the state in January of 1833 and died at San Juan Bautista, San Benito County, in September of 1835.

N.S. GRAND PRESIDENT HAS MESSAGE.

Hilliard E. Welch of Lodi, Grand President N.S.G.W., accompanied by Grand Third Vice-president Charles L. Dodge of Martinez, Grand Secretary John T. Regan of San Francisco and Joseph Berry of Courtland, will be in Los Angeles the week of October 25 and will visit Los Angeles No. 45, Ramona No. 109, Hollywood No. 196 and Vaquero No. 262 Parlors. October 27 they will participate in the installation of Santa Monica Bay Parlor No. 267 at Ocean Park.

Saturday evening, October 31, at 6:30, Grand President Welch and his party will meet with representatives of all the California South Parlors at supper at the Mary Louise, 2209 West Seventh street. Arrangements are in the hands of Grand Trustee John T. Newell.

Grand President Welch has a good of the Order message for the Parlors of the southland, and the get-together supper has been arranged for the purpose of hearing it. Invitations have been extended the membership in general, through the several Parlors, as well as the district deputies and Past Grand Presidents Herman C. Lichtenberger and William I. Traeger.

ANNIVERSARY PARTY.

November 13, Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W. will have been in existence forty-two years. In celebration of its institution anniversary a supper-dance, similar to the delightful affair of last year, will be held at the Elite, 629 South Flower. All Native Sons and Native Daughters and their friends are invited to the event.

November 11 the good of the order committee will put on a surprise feature, a "cuckoo party," and it is hinted that those not present will, when accounts reach them of the doings, regret their absence. A class initiation is on the program for November 18. November 25 being Thanksgiving Day, there will be no meeting.

Los Angeles' history and landmarks committee is functioning. Interesting meetings are held semi-monthly and a mass of history material is being accumulated.

ARMISTICE DAY.

From all sides Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W. is receiving congratulations for securing the attractive new quarters it now has in Patriotic Hall, 1816 South Figueroa. The housewarming October 1 drew a large crowd. Cecil George and Harry Stevens had charge of a program, dancing was provided and refreshments were served. With congratulations, flowers were presented by Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W., Vaquero Parlor No. 262 N.S.G.W., Ray Malburg and Herbert Bateman.

Along with the Flag of the United States, the California State (Bear) Flag will wave above Patriotic Hall. The Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors conveyed word to the Parlor October 8 that that would be done, if the State Flag was provided, and Ruben Schmidt, a member of Ramona, volunteered to provide the flag. Schmidt, a candidate for superior court judge, took occasion, too, to inform the membership about the Community Chest and urged their cooperation in "putting it over."

At the October 29 meeting Ramona voted to participate in the Armistice Day parade at the Coliseum November 11. All Native Sons who care to do so are welcome to join, in civilian clothes, the Parlor's ranks for this occasion. As a feature, an immense American Flag will be carried. Those desiring to participate must be at the northeast corner of Thirty-ninth and Menlo by 1:45 p. m. of November 11.

Ramona's November program includes initiation the 12th, and a sociable sponsored by the good of the order committee: T. Dwight Crittenden, Ralph I. Harbison, Richard S. Milton—the 19th.

SAN FRANCISCO

THE BIG CITY  THAT KNOWS HOW

SAN FRANCISCO INDUSTRY

Ralph B. Koerber

(INDUSTRIAL ENGINEER, SAN FRANCISCO CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

THE EPOCH OF THE INDUSTRIAL ERA of the Pacific occurred on the shores of San Francisco Bay about the middle of the nineteenth century on the threshold of the great western migration in the United States which came with the expanding population in search of new country. Industry was born to San Francisco in the early sixties. Out of the simple and crude beginning evolved the modern manufacturers of today producing a tremendous variety of commodities and seeking the opportunities and advantages offered in this great Western empire amidst the unlimited resources and natural contributing industrial factors which stimulate and develop great trade and commerce. The San Francisco Metropolitan Area occupies the center of the Pacific Coast and is excellently situated and equipped to serve the foreign commerce among the countries on the one hundred and seven thousand mile littoral of the Pacific Ocean.

SAN FRANCISCO THE HUB.

San Francisco is, and indications are that it will continue to be, the hub of the vast trade area embracing forty-three percent of the total area of the State of California, or an area as large as the entire New England group comprising Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut, nearly one and one-half times greater than the size of New York State, and one and one-fifth times greater than Florida, a little larger than one-half the size of the British Isles and about equal to the area of Austria-Hungary.

This area embraces five of the richest valleys in the state—the Santa Clara, directly on the south, is one of the most productive fruit-growing valleys in the world; the Sonoma and the Napa Valleys, on the north, and the Sacramento and the San Joaquin Valleys on the east. The two last named valleys are linked to San Francisco by two navigable rivers and the whole area is connected with adequate railway facilities and unsurpassed highways. An understanding and energetic people working for a greater development comprise an active and potential cultural and industrial empire, incomparable to any other part of the country.

RESOURCES.

The raw materials from these valleys and the adjacent uplands contiguous to San Francisco contribute extensively to the economic and industrial progress of San Francisco and the bay region. In California there are approximately 22,500,000 acres of farming land, 16,100,000 acres, or seventy-two percent, of which are located in the great valleys tributary to San Francisco. Approximately 5,000,000 acres in this section are now irrigable and producing sixty-seven percent of the state's total agricultural output of $420,000,000.

Production groups of this region are represented by the field, fruit and vegetable crops, dairy, livestock, poultry, fishing and lumbering. The minerals produced from this section amounted to fifty-seven and five-tenths percent of the state's total mineral value of $350,000,000.

MANUFACTURERS.

The fabrication of the raw materials into finished products is represented by the leading industries within this area, referred to in the United States census of manufacturers as petroleum refining, lumber and mill products, canning and preserving, slaughtering and meat packing, factory and machine shop products, bread and bakery products, and butter.

The latest figures for the value of manufactured product in this region total $1,900,000,000, or about seventy percent of the entire state.

MARKET STREET, SAN FRANCISCO.

WEALTH.

Of the total estimated wealth of nearly $14,100,000,000 for the State of California, about fifty-seven and four-tenths percent is centered in this section. The total state bank deposits amounted to $2,147,000,000 in 1925, of which $1,919,000,000 was credited to individual savings deposits.

The annual volume of business for this section was indicated at sixty-two percent of the state's total.

square miles, reveals that forty-nine percent of the manufactured output of the entire state is fabricated on the bay's littoral, with a manufactured value of $1,379,000,000 or thirty-three percent of the entire Pacific Coast output of approximately $4,500,000,000.

The diversification of the industrial output is portrayed by the following group classification of products: food, paper, textile, wood, metal, leather, minerals, paint and oil, transportation, chemicals, and miscellaneous, or indeed nearly every activity whose economic minimum is justifiable.

Under "food" are canning and preserving fruits and vegetables; coffee and spice roasting and grinding; confectionery; bread and bakery products; rice cleaning and polishing; slaughtering and meat packing are the outstanding manufactures. Paper products are confined largely to printing and publishing. Textiles to men's and women's clothing, with a large amount of bag making. There are two steel mills operating in this district producing reinforcing bars, wire rods, sheets and many other products which are basic raw material supplies for other industries. The planing mills and furniture manufacturers are the prominent activities in the wood products group. Tanning of leather and the manufacture of shoes and harness are the larger activities under leather. Under the remaining group the outstanding activities are marble cutting and polishing, motor vehicle bodies and parts, chemicals, patent medicines, dental goods, mattresses and bed springs, window shades and fixtures.

While these classiications are merely representative types of the outstanding manufactures, there are a great many other activities of no less importance but too numerous to relate here.

LOCAL MARKET.

The San Francisco and immediate Metropolitan Area offer one of the largest and most attractive local markets of any city on the Pacific Coast. San Francisco is a great city, a seaport, manufacturing and distribution center with a population within its corporate limits of 708,391 at the end of 1925. Its people, its merchants and its manufacturers look out upon the contiguous area, which includes the splendid Cities of Oakland, Berkeley, Alameda, Richmond, Sausalito, San Rafael, South San Francisco, Redwood City, Palo Alto and many others as the Metropolitan San Francisco, whose combined population is estimated at 1,334,000. The city in 1920 had a population of 506,660 and 123,429 families.

A brief outline of the population characteristics of San Francisco is interesting and picturesque. Sixty-eight percent of the population is native White and about twenty-eight percent foreign-born White. The foreign-born population have migrated from practically every nation of the globe—thirty-eight countries are very definitely represented, forming a great Pacific Among the outstanding nations which have contributed to this great development are Italy, Germany, Ireland, England, Canada, France, Sweden, Norway and Russia. The Asiatic and Oriental population comprise about two percent of the total population and contribute picturesquely to the character of the city.

In per-capita wealth, San Francisco now ranks first among the cities in the United States. In buying power, it holds fifth place. Within the fifty-mile trade radius are forty-nine cities or towns of more than one thousand people and many smaller ones, all linked together by a network of highly developed transportation systems including auto stages, ferries, electric and steam trains, which bring the most remote cities within one hour's travel time of the heart of the city.

As an index to the volume of business, the San Francisco bank clearings for 1925 amounted to $9,500,000,000 or fifth in rank in the United States. Savings deposits on the first of January amounted to $758,273,421, while the per-capita wealth of three thousand eight hundred and seven dollars places San Francisco among the wealthiest cities of America.

In San Francisco alone there are seven thousand eight hundred and sixty-two retail outlets, one thousand three hundred and sixty jobbers, also upward of one thousand two hundred national concerns maintaining offices in San Francisco—eight hundred and fifty of which have located their Western headquarters here. The other cities and towns in the Metropolitan Area bring the total jobbers up to one thousand seven hundred and twenty-eight and the retailers up to seventeen thousand eight hundred and forty-three.

The annual value of manufactured product is $529,000,000 for San Francisco. The city has 2,198 manufacturing plants, employing 50,096 workers with an annual payroll of $70,000,000. This does not include many small plants whose production is under five thousand, nor established factory branches carrying stock for distribution only, nor does it include any of the market areas outside of the corporate limits.

In San Francisco's Metropolitan Area above mentioned there are 2,954 manufacturing plants employing 133,433 workers, with an annual payroll of $200,000,000, and with the value of manufactured product amounting to $1,379,000,000 per annum.

San Francisco is the ocean port for the great inland Empire of California, over five hundred miles in length. Forty-five percent of the tonnage of the Port of San Francisco is received from points on the two great rivers, namely, the Sacramento and the San Joaquin, which are navigable for approximately two hundred miles up their courses and serve in draining this great empire and are used in conveying the natural resources and raw materials produced in this section and returning the finished product. In 1925 San Francisco ranked next to New York in net tonnage, with 37,900,000 tons of cargo, of which more than 28,000,000 tons were deep-water commerce. Forty-one modern piers, over fifteen miles of berthing space and one hundred and forty-four miles of spur track are required to handle the tremendous cargoes which pass annually through this port.

SAN FRANCISCO PROGRESS.

The vision of San Francisco's progres is constructively at work as manifested in the prodigious developments that are evidenced at every turn. New projects and expansions of old ones witness the determination of San Francisco to share in the expansion of the world trade of this era. The present office building program of San Francisco is represented in part by three great office building structures in the financial district—the twenty-two story Hunter-Dulin building, the Fnancial Center building of fifteen stories and the Russ building of thirty stories, at an aggregate investment of twelve million dollars. These architectural giants, outside of their capacity to serve the increasing demand for this character of building space, have a historical significance, as they will be just above the old line that marked the water's edge of the Bay of San Francisco in the days of forty-nine. This line has been pressed back until almost one-half mile of business buildings, warehouses and light manufacturing structures, the great Embarcadero and the unexcelled harbor front, now lay between the old line and the new.

The building program is further evidenced in the diversified character of the construction now in progress. The Wearing Apparel building, a new Women's Club building, twelve hotels and hundreds of large and small apartment houses and homes are changing the complexion of the entire city and rebuilding the skyline in every direction. The addition of wharves along the waterfront; the expansion of the state grain terminal at Islais Creek; a new state warehouse of the most modern type on the waterfront just opened for operation; a furniture factory breaking ground for a large new plant, the site for which was chosen by one of the largest furniture manufacturers in the United States. Manufacturers of coffee, paint, storage battery, electric supplies, printing and lithographing, bed and springs, and many others have just completed or are erecting additions or new plants to house their increased productivity.

To continue this development down the San Francisco Peninsula, the possibilities for a tremendous integrative community bespeaks the inevitable story of the future. The deep water of San Francisco Bay touching the level lands suitable for factory sites, intersected by trunk line highways and rail transportation facilities, above which and extending into the rolling wooded hills are many residential communities with ideal living conditions and educational opportunities now sharing in the development of San Francisco. Already the nucleus of industry is established at various vantage points in this area where attractive labor, climatic and living conditions prevail.

INDUSTRIAL AREA.

The industrial area of San Francisco is divided into three classifications or zones: light, heavy and unrestricted. This condition permits manufacturing enterprises ranging from the small loft type to the ones requiring large acreage who find it practical and profitable to fabricate their product in San Francisco. The industrial area is served by over one hundred and forty-four miles of spur track, which brings to industry's door the "trap car" service and carload shipments. Manufactured product, in turn, is distributed more expediently from San Francisco over the network of transportation made up of trunk lines, highways and transcontinental railroads and through the trade channels of water-borne commerce which now reaches around the world from San Francisco.

San Francisco's industrial area is immediately contiguous to an abundant and diversified labor supply. Among the homes are schools, churches, neighborhood houses and community playgrounds, adding attractiveness to the family's betterment and well-being. These conditions will steadily advance under the direction of organized community development plans. Land values in San Francisco's industrial district are comparable to the density of the market and the availability of distribution conveniences at hand. Within the switching limits of San Francisco, hard, level ground contiguous to a good labor supply and attractive living conditions is available at quotations reaching from five cents per square foot, or two thousand dollars per acre, up to two dollars per square foot.

PUBLIC UTILITIES.

The public utilities are the same in all of the leading communities of the San Francisco Bay region. They are on a common base, sharing alike in the power, fuel, oil and gas supplies. Power rates in this section are among the lowest in the country. Large connected loads with a high uniform maximum demand range from fifty-five mills per kilowat hour for the perfect load to one cent and over for the less uniform load factors.

Six of the largest oil refineries on the coast are located in the San Francisco Bay region and consequently refinery prices plus a minimum switching or barging charge are available

SAN DIEGO'S HISTORICAL PRE-EMINENCE

(FROM SMYTHE'S COPYRIGHTED "HISTORY OF SAN DIEGO.")

FROM 1777 TO 1833—A PERIOD OF fifty-six years—life flowed smoothly on at the mission and the Franciscans waxed strong and prosperous. Two other missions were established within the county, at Pala and San Luis Rey, the latter being founded June 13, 1798, by Father Antonio Peyri, and named in honor of Saint Louis, who was Louis IX. of France. These missions also prospered and lent strength to the mother settlement in Mission Valley. The total number of baptisms from 1769 to 1846 at the Mission of San Diego, was 7,126; of confirmations, 1,726; of marriages, 2,051. It would be interesting to know the total value of property accumulated, and the total amount of wealth produced during the same period. These facts are not available, but we know that the half-century of rule by military and ecclesiastical government was a day of material greatness, as it undeniably was of marked spiritual achievement.

The footing of the Franciscans in California rested from the beginning upon the power of Spain. They could not have come at all without the financial and military support of the Spanish monarch, nor could they have remained save with the aid of his soldiers. When the power of the Castilian began to wane, it was inevitable that the Franciscan rule should diminish in proportion, and that even the institutions which they had founded should begin to crumble and, at last, become a mere memory with no monument except mouldering heaps of adobe.

Spain's empire in Mexico lasted for three centuries. It was in 1521 that Cortes virtually completed his conquest, and it was in 1821 that Iturbide wrested the country from the feeble grasp of Ferdinand VII. The Mission of San Diego was then almost at the zenith of its prosperity, and as the good fathers basked in the sunshine or looked out upon their smiling fields, they fondly believed that their works would endure to bless the land and enrich their order for many generations to come. They knew that the internal fires of revolution had been blazing in Mexico for more than a decade, but had little fear that the hand which had held the region for three hundred years would lose its hold, at least in their time.

The Spanish statesmen had given the missionaries the utmost latitude because their scheme of converting and utilizing the Indian population was admirably adapted to meet the political necessities of the empire in this far country. But Mexico had different necessities and naturally proceeded to make different plans. It had no time to lose in strengthening itself against the rising power of the United States. It could not leave so precious a possession as California to the control of an element which, at best, could be but lukewarm toward the new-born power which had overthrown Spanish control, and thus done violence to the great tradition of which the missions were themselves an important part. Moreover, Mexico had friends to reward as well as enemies to punish. Some of the men who had fought its battles, and who would be needed to fight its battles again, looked with longing eyes upon the rich dominions of the missions and began to dream of founding great families and great estates.

It is a very convenient thing to be able to pay your debts with other people's property. Mexico was in this fortunate position and proceeded to take advantage of it. In 1824 the colonization law was enacted. This authorized the government to make grants of unoccupied lands to Mexican citizens to the extent of eleven square leagues. Under this law thousands of acres were parceled out among the supporters of the government. These grants encroached upon the mission holdings and gave the fathers their first shock of serious apprehension for the future. In 1832 the Mexican power mustered the full courage of its convictions, its necessities and its desires. It passed the act of secularization, which was simply an act of confiscation, from the Franciscan point of view. It was the object of this legislation to take all the property of the missions, real and personal, and divide it among those who would use their wealth and influence for the defense and development of Mexico. The attempt of Governor Figueroa to put it into effect in 1833 was a failure, but it was gradually executed, being extended little by little until the day when Mexico lost the country to the United States.

With the adoption of the policy of secularization, the mission fathers knew that their long day was passing into twilight and that it could be a question of but a few years when they must relinquish their hold upon California. Some of them were utterly discouraged and unwilling to attempt the continuance of their work. Some were frankly hostile to the new rulers and went home to Spain. A few persisted to the last and died peacefully at their posts. The effect of the new order of things on the Indians was demoralizing. Their loyalty could hardly be expected to survive the shattering of priestly power. The only government they understood was the patriarchal form, and the very foundation of this government had now disappeared. Nevertheless, the Mission of San Diego lived on for more than a dozen years, after its ultimate downfall was clearly foreshadowed. It was not until 1846 that the ownership of the property was legally and finally taken from the church.

The full force of the blow could no longer be stayed. Mexico was threatened with invasion by the United States and it became imperatively necessary that the country should be put in the best possible condition of defense. Thus the governors of the various states and departments were vested with extraordinary powers and instructed to adopt drastic measures to strengthen the government. Governor Pio Pico sold the missions as rapidly as possible in order to raise money for the war which impended. In June, 1846, he sold to Don Santiago Arguello so much of the property of the San Diego Mission as had not already been granted to Mexican citizens. The deed of sale reads as follows:

"Being previously authorized by the Departmental Assembly to alleviate the missions, in order to pay their debts and to avoid their total ruin; and knowing that Don Santiago Arguello has rendered the government important services at all times, and has also given aid when asked, for the preservation of the legitimate government and the security of the Department, without having received any indemnification; and, whereas, this gentleman has, for his own personal benefit and that of his numerous family, asked to purchase the Mission of San Diego, with all its lands and property belonging to it, both in town and country, he paying fully and religiously the debts of said Mission, which may be established by the reports of the Committee of Missions, binding himself besides to provide for the support of the priests located at said Mission, and of divine worship. In view of all which I have made real sale and perpetual alienation of it forever, to Don Santiago Arguello, according to, and in conformance with, what has been agreed upon, with all the appurtenances found and known at the time as belonging to it, whether consisting of lands, buildings, improved real estate, or cattle."

The reader will not fail to note the pious terms in which the instrument was drawn. The object of the transfer was "to alleviate" the mission, and to avoid its "total ruin." The purchaser was required to provide for the support of the priests and to maintain divine worship. These diplomatic phrases deceived no one, and least of all the priests. The idea of a proprietary mission dependent for its support upon the bounty of an individual, must have been repugnant to their souls. Certainly, such an arrangement could never have proven workable, but it was not put to the actual test. The war came on with swift footsteps, and when it had passed, Mexico had gone the way of Spain and the missionary fathers had gone with them, so far as the dominion of California was concerned.

What was the net result of Spanish dominion in San Diego which nominally began with the discoveries by Cabrillo in 1542 and Viscaino in 1602, and ripened into actual occupation with the expedition planned by Galvez and executed by naval, military, civil and missionary leaders in 1769?

They left, of course, a great memory which will endure to the end of time and which is likely to grow rather than diminish in the quality of picturesque and romantic interest. They left their nomenclature, and this is somehow so pleasing to the ear and eye of the composite race which has evolved into the American population of today that it seems likely to last as the visible expression of the Spanish tradition. Not only does it remain in the name of the city and of landmarks to which it was given by the Spanish explorers and founders, but it blooms perennially in many other forms, including the names of new residences and estates, for which it is frequently preferred to names associated with the racial, national and family traditions of their owners. Nothing could more strikingly illustrate the power of the memories of Spanish occupation upon the popular imagination. The same influence is apparent in architecture, and this seems to be growing and likely to grow more in the future. The Spanish speech still lingers and may do so for a long time, though it tends to disappear and will some day be no more in evidence than the speech of other European peoples who had nothing to do with the early time.

Aside from this virile tradition, expressed in the nomenclature and architecture of the city and its surrounding country, the Spaniard left nothing pertaining to his national life. But the value of this contribution to civilization should not be underestimated. Happy is the land which has memories to cherish! Twice happy when the memories are associated with the pioneers of pioneers! And thrice happy if, as in this case, those memories chance to be sanctified by the struggle to light the lamp of spiritual exaltation in the darkness of ignorance and savagery!

As time goes on, the earliest history of San Diego will be revived in art. More and more, it will supply a rich theme for painting, for sculpture and for literature. But the institutions which it sought to plant deep in the soil have perished almost utterly. English law and English speech have taken the place of Spanish law and speech, and even the religion which the founders brought apparently owes little or nothing of its present strength to their teaching or their building. The Catholic Church is powerful, of course, but by no means as powerful in San Diego, whose legitimate child it was, as in Boston, which was established by those who deliberately fled from its influence.

What shall be said of the missionary achievement? For the most part, the answer to this question depends upon the individual point of view. No mere material conquest is to be compared with the salvation of immortal souls. The mission fathers brought thousands to the foot of the cross and persuaded them to live in accordance with religious ways. Those who believe that these thousands of souls would otherwise have been lost justly place the missionary achievement above the most enduring things done by the soldier, the law-giver or the founder of institutions. Those who accept distinctly modern views of religion may hold more lightly the purely spiritual conquest accomplished by Junipero Serra and his fellow priests, yet even such must credit them with the noblest aspirations and must concede that the Indian population gained much in simple morality from the missionary teachings. Nor has this gain been wholly lost, even after Father Serra has slept for more than one hundred and twenty years in his grave at Monterey. The Indian was unquestionably elevated by his spiritual experience and by his manual training, and, dubious as his condition seems today, is still a better man because the mission once flourished under the sunny skies of San Diego.

SAN DIEGO HAS EVERYTHING

(W. S. CARSON,
San Diego Chamber of Commerce.)

San Diego is rapidly coming to the front as a convention city par excellence and the year now nearing its close is distinguished by the number of gatherings which have been held here. Before the holidays roll around again, there will have been more than a dozen conventions held here, all of state, district or national character.

In these modern times the social side of conventions is being featured more and more and it is because of this trend that San Diego is so popular. It has everything to offer. Regardless of the month of the year, the weather is assured, so that outdoor entertainment can be enjoyed without fear of interference by Jupiter Pluvius.

There are scores of interesting places to visit and see, including a variety that is unparalleled. Seaside play places are at hand; a few miles in the country equally attractive mountain and lake resorts invite attention, while connecting the whole is a perfect system of improved highways over which it is a real pleasure to motor.

Realizing the value of the publicity gained through conventions, leaders in the business and civic life of San Diego are encouraging the bringing of more conventions here, and the years to

SEGREGATE ORIENTALS FROM WHITES

(CLARENCE M. HUNT.)

AT OAKLAND, ALAMEDA COUNTY, A movement is under way, sponsored by the Parent-Teacher Association of the John Sweet public-school, to segregate the White and the Oriental children in the public-schools of that city. Petitions, truthfully declaring the mixing of the non-assimilable races in schools "a menace at the very fountain-head of future citizenship," are in circulation and will be presented to the Oakland Board of Education with a request for action.

The California school law provides, article X: "The governing body of the school district shall have power to exclude children of filthy or vicious habits, or children suffering from contagious or infectious diseases, and also to establish separate schools for Indian children and for children of Chinese, Japanese or Mongolian parentage. When such separate schools are established, Indian children or children of Chinese, Japanese or Mongolian parentage must not be admitted into any other school."

It is a well-known fact that Orientals are infected with contagious diseases peculiar to their race, and the opinion has been expressed by medical authorities that considerable of the sickness in California, particularly that of an intestinal nature, is directly due to the consumption of Jap-grown vegetables and strawberries. For, as The Grizzly Bear has frequently pointed out, the Japs fertilize with human excrement and violate other health laws.

The Parent-Teacher Association of John Sweet school called a mass meeting, and Mrs. Christine Morris declared there was serious danger of the Orientals' diseases being communicated to the White pupils. As evidence of the grave danger, she presented her granddaughter, who nearly lost her sight through contracting trachoma at the school. Claim was made that other children had been similarly infected.

The chief speaker was Arthur Tilton Steele, well-known writer familiar with the Asiatic menace, who spoke on "Asia in Our Midst," interspersing with remarks not complimentary to the Hindus, Chinese or Japs. He concluded his address with this quotation from Madison Grant: "Democratic ideals among an homogenous people of Caucasian blood, as in England and America, is one thing, but it is quite another to share his blood with or intrust his ideals to brown, yellow or black men. This is suicide, pure and simple, and the first victim of this amazing folly will be the White man himself!"

More power to the Parent-Teacher Association of the John Sweet public-school of Oakland. May victory crown its efforts for segregation. Not only does the mixing of the White and the Oriental school-children endanger the health of the former, but it is all wrong from every other viewpoint. For the future welfare of California, the White parents throughout the state should rise in their might and compel the governing body of every school district to provide separate schools for Orientals.

PURITAN FATHER PASSES OUT FOOD FOR THOUGHT.

"In justice to the parents of Oakland who are involved in the controversy now pending between them and the superintendent of schools relative to the segregation of children of Mongolian parentage, will you let an American father answer the criticisms which have appeared in the papers against the movement and leave it to the people to decide whether or not we are justified in our stand.

"The question is one that is of more than local significance. It is, indeed, one of the vital issues of the day, embracing, as it does, the welfare and the progression of coming generations of Californians. And we of the West who have settled down on the Pacific Coast, with the problem right at our very door, should not allow other pedagogic mugwumps whose minds are attuned to the ideas of the nineteenth century or benevolent American foreign traders interested primarily in their profit producing Asiatic connections and constituencies stand in the way of its solution.

"The only remedy is SEGREGATION and the parents of this state with the help of THE WOMEN OF CALIFORNIA, if the men do not realize the menace, will see to it that that remedy is applied without fear of or subservience to the school authorities at present in the saddle.

"Anthropologically, sociologically and, by no means the least, psychologically, the White and the Yellow races are inherently incompatible. And it has been proved beyond doubt or cavil that the latter is incapable of assimilating with the former in all those essential elements that make for spiritual progression.

"Therefore, to place our American girls, during the formative period of their lives when they are the most sensitive to impressions and the most open to influences that surround them, in close and constant touch with unseen elements and forces of distinctly un-American affinities and antecedents, would be detrimental to the best interests of not only the growing individuals of our race and nationality but eventually to the community at large, and to the future citizenship of our state.

"For one thing, we parents of the West want our daughters to rid themselves of the 'inferiority complex' of European tradition. The presence among them of the daughters of Asiatic women, whose psychology is diametrically opposite to that of our American women, would not be conducive to that end. Besides, our American girls have to meet different social and economic conditions, which are the direct antitheses of those that Asiatic girls and women are submerged in. Hence, the 'animated door-mat' example of the Asiatic female, which some pulpiteers and others who have only a partial knowledge of the subject are so prone to hold up for emulation to our modern girlhood, is not what sensible and well-informed American mothers covet for their growing daughters.

"How many of your readers know that, notwithstanding nearly three-quarters of a century of Japanese adaptation to Western civilization, the majority of Japanese women and girls wait upon the men of their household and their male guests on bended knees?

"How many of your readers realize that jazz is a form of music which we have drawn into our social life from the Negroes in our midst? That it is a reversion of our musical tastes to that of the primitive savage, which might take generations to improve or to work out of our already impregnated social system?

"Is it not the height of folly to court further evils? To drag into our social environment elements from regions utterly alien to our civilization and destructive to our individual growth and progress? "A PURITAN FATHER."

CALIFORNIA'S FEDERAL TAXES.

LONG BEACH—ONWARD MARCH

A. A. Miller

(SECRETARY PUBLICITY DEPARTMENT, LONG BEACH CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

THE FISCAL YEAR BEGINNING JULY 1 started off with bright prospects. The citizens of Long Beach are busy. They have made up their minds that 1926-1927 offers definite opportunity to accomplish some worthwhile things. It is everywhere evident that such a spirit of expectancy and purpose possesses them. Businessmen are taking a lively interest in the needs of their customers. Merchants are selling more goods than usual because they have gone out and discovered what the people need and are selling at prices which bring in cash money. Supplymen in the heavier lines indicate the best winter business they have had in a number of years. Buildings are going up in every section of Long Beach.

New high records for summer business were established in Long Beach during 1926. As early as March 1, 50,000 visitors came to Long Beach as their favorite bathing beach. New and improved highways leading from interior points to this city brought Southern Californians and Arizonians here in increasing numbers. Transcontinental touring also gained in popularity, and railroad officials state that West-bound travel is heavier than ever before, while reservations for later months assure a continuation of this big volume of tourist business. With the municipal band and the Amusement League well equipped to do their respective parts, with seven miles of beach front on the outer shore and with nearly as many more miles on Alamitos Bay and in Recreation Park, there are opportunities for a season of pleasure and profit which should inspire a concentration of effort to confirm the highest expectations.

Figures of record substantiate the claim of Long Beach to fame as one of the fastest growing cities on the continent. According to United States census records, the population of Long Beach was 2,252 in 1900, was 17,809 in 1910 and was 55,593 in 1920. The present number of people living in Long Beach is over 140,000, and a fair estimate of the additional number here as visitors, for weeks or months, is 25,000, a total of 165,000 "folks" enjoying life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

For this growth there have been paramount reasons. Three are, the city's attractions as a seaside resort, as a place of residence, and as an industrial and shipping center. To these three has been added a fourth since the census of 1920; that fourth is oil,—detracting not from the charms of Long Beach as a mecca for tourists and an abiding-place for permanent dwellers, but adding to its desirability as a hive of industry, petroleum product itself swelling the payroll in the process of its own development and supplying gaseous and liquid fuel in abundance and at a small cost for manufacturing plants of all kinds.

Incidentally to this, so late as September 12, 1922, came the news from Washington that the Federal Government had seriously set about the task of harbor development here upon a gigantic scale, entailing extension of the San Pedro breakwater eastward to a line east of the ocean entrance to Long Beach Harbor, which is connected with the Wilmington and San Pedro basins of Los Angeles Harbor by inside passage. The result of this will be a world port surpassed in facilities by few others on earth, the twin port of Los Angeles-Long Beach, its outer harbor a common haven protected by the one government breakwater, its inner refuge a triplet of basins united by navigable passage.

Already Los Angeles-Long Beach twin harbor is the greatest lumber-receiving port in the world. Given the expansion promised now through federal aid, and this port will take its place among the greatest in the world for all purposes of commerce, export and import, domestic, coastwise and inter-oceanic, strategically situated to serve and be served from Europe and the Atlantic Coast of North and South America, via the Panama Canal, and located more favorably than any other for trade with the Orient.

In the allocation of vantages to accrue from this united harbor development, Long Beach will profit more than proportionately. Long Beach inner harbor is actually nearer to Los Angeles than is Los Angeles inner harbor at San Pedro, with a network of railroads and boulevards built from tidewater at Long Beach to the metropolis inland.

Long Beach is twenty miles south of Los Angeles, facing the ocean to the south, protected in winter-time from the raw winds of the west coast by the scenic Palos Verdes Hills on the west, cooled in summer-time by the gentler breezes directly off the brine from the south, with warm days in winter and cool nights in summer, and never an extreme of heat or cold the whole year 'round. That's why it is that surf-bathing is enjoyed here every week of the calendar cycle, a stretch of beach seven miles long inviting resident and tourist to Nature's most alluring and satisfying playground of the Pacific. Accessibility is assured by steam and electric railways, and the many miles of the finest boulevards on earth. From an ante-breakfast dip in the surf, one may speed by motor or rail to luncheon in a lodge perched upon a snow-clad slope of the majestic mountain ranges always in sight, perpetually white. Or he may in a matter of minutes only shift the scene from the glittering sands of Long Beach shore to the historic shades of old San Gabriel Mission, the secluded restfulness of Riverside, or the exhileration of Catalina Island, looming always in view to the west and south. Boating is another means of transportation, with craft of every type plying the coast to rival resorts and to the leviathans of the Pacific Fleet anchored just off shore.

Long Beach is a city of homes. For more than three years the value of building operations as authorized by municipal permits issued has averaged a million dollars a month and seventy-five percent of all construction is for purposes of habitation—private dwellings, apartments, flats, hotels.

Long Beach is a city of schools, with 26,000 pupils and students matriculated in the thirty-four common-schools and the high-schools for the fall semester of 1926.

Long Beach is a city of churches, having more than three-score sanctuaries representative of all the leading faiths, a Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A. and the largest Bible class of men in the world.

Long Beach is a city of loyalty. Nowhere else are more steadfast and stalwart organizations, such as the Grand Army of the Republic, American Legion, Red Cross, their auxiliaries and community service.

Long Beach is a city of utilities, with municipally-owned water system, pleasure piers, parks and playgrounds, and now municipally-owned oil royalties, with a by-product of gas sufficient in volume for all the city's needs, industrial and domestic.

Long Beach is a city of industry. There are here 335 industrial plants, employing more than 15,000 people, having an aggregate payroll of $2,000,000 monthly, and representing a total investment of over $67,500,000, not including the oil industry, which represents an investment of approximately $95,000,000.

A hinterland tributary to Long Beach is prospering in livestock, poultry and other allied agricultural pursuits, keeping busy a number of large sugar factories and stockyards, hatcheries and distribution marts for the handling of fruits, nuts and vegetables.

Packing plants in Long Btach Harbor industrial district annually export millions of dollars' worth of canned fish, olives and vegetables. A large woolen mill in that district is thriving.

No city can boast a lower rate of mortality. This is due largely to location and climate, with average temperature of 65 degrees in summertime and 55 degrees in winter-time.

Among the municipally-owned properties is a magnificent recreation park, supplemental to which is an automobile camping reservation offering every comfort and convenience to motorists.

Reverting to figures as the most convincing argument, bank clearings in Long Beach for 1925 were $352,123,723.28, as against $163,595,436.29 in 1910. The total assessed valuation of Long Beach is now $182,095,173, as against $66,741,310 in 1920. Bank deposits run about $60,000,000; in 1920 they were less than $30,000,000. The valuation of building permits in 1920 was $11,120,130; for the year 1925 it was $19,046,766. Postal receipts in 1925 were $518,373; five years before they were $237,418.

Long Beach has a land area of 28.79 square miles, with 111 miles of paved streets and 44 miles of paved alleys. Street paving finished in the past year totaled 12.28 miles, curbs 25 miles, walks 18 miles, gutters 15 miles. Immediately in prospect is the paving of 29 miles of streets. Street improvements completed in the past year totaled $1,217,810.

The city has fourteen parks with a combined area of 449 acres, a gradually increasing acreage of playgrounds back from the ocean supplementing seven miles of beach. And over and above and within all, a genuinely hearty welcome to the visitor, coming first as a tourist, received as a guest, and eventually remaining as a citizen.

POPULAR NATIVE DAUGHTER TO WED.

News of the engagement of Miss Prudence Marie McFadyen of Long Beach Parlor No. 154 N.D.G.W. to Fred D. Monroe of Idaho was revealed to members of the Parlor's thimble club at a delightfully appointed luncheon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar McFadyen October 7. In the center of a beautifully decorated table was a miniature log-cabin surrounded by pine trees, and at each place was a smaller cabin.

Unfolding their napkins, the guests were surprised to find a card announcing the engagement, which comes as a climax to a university romance, begun five years ago, when the bride-to-be and the groom-to-be were students at the University of California, Berkeley. The nuptials will be celebrated late in December. All wished Miss Marie much joy and happiness, but regretted to learn that her future home will be in Oregon, where Monroe is associated with the United States Forestry Service.

NATIVE DAUGHTERS' DOINGS.

The dance of Long Beach Parlor No. 154 N.D.G.W. was a huge success. The thimble club was entertained during October at the homes of Lela West and Violet Henshilwood. Fifteen FEDERAL AID VICTORY INSURES NATIONAL PROGRESS.

Passage by Congress of the federal-aid appropriation, which was recently approved by the president, means the continuation, unhampered, of the American road building program, says "California Highways." Few things will make a greater contribution in the immediate future to the progress, prosperity, and solidarity of the nation. With this encouragement from the Federal Government the states will carry on construction of that great system of national highways first definitely established under the Highway Act of 1921.

The State of California will receive from this appropriation approximately $2,500,000 a year, a small share of what the state undoubtedly will expend for highways during the same period. California eventually could complete its highway system without additional federal aid, but recognizes that progress in other Western states, where great areas are still in federal ownership, would stop almost altogether without the helping hand of the national government; the continuity of the whole highway building program of the country, of far greater importance than actual cash contributions from Washington, would be destroyed.

MORE THAN DOLLAR FOR DOLLAR RETURNED MEMBERS.

Keeping pace with the great strides California is making in population, industry, wealth and development, the California State Automobile Association has concluded the most conspicuously successful year in its history.

This was the declaration made by President Burton A. Towne at the organization's annual meeting in San Francisco October 16. In detailing the association's activities and progress he pointed out that the association has attained its position as one of the two largest automobile clubs in the United States through careful and efficient management, returning to the member more than dollar for dollar in service, protection and savings.

FOUR CHIEF NEEDS CITIES TO COMBAT AUTO ACCIDENTS.

More playgrounds, better parking facilities, through highways and fewer grade crossings are the four chief needs of cities with heavy automobile accident totals, it is indicated in a recent national report received by the public safety department of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

Many cities have not yet grown out of the horse age in which they were built, so that the new means of transportation has to cope with woefully inadequate conditions, it is suggested. The process of building better cities is, however, necessarily gradual, and consequently the need for individual carefulness on the part of motorists and pedestrians at this stage is particularly acute.

Developing local pride so that citizens feel that their conduct as motorists is a reflection for good or ill upon their city, is considered a practical endeavor toward advancing safety.

GETTING THE MOST OUT OF STREETS AND HIGHWAYS.

Co-operation between motorists and the observance of common-sense rules of the road will go a long way toward increasing the efficiency of streets and highways, according to the California State Automobile Association, which points out that the capacity of the highways to carry traffic is cut down materially by the driving habits of certain motorists.

If drivers would universally practice a number of fundamental driving rules they would not only facilitate their own progress but would help their

Making turns at street intersections in the proper manner is referred to as one of the elementary principles which [illegible] should observe, and the practice of [illegible] to stick to the center traffic [illegible] speed highway is cited as an [illegible] efficient movement of vehicles over the road.

SIXTEEN DAILY FATALITIES RESULT OF AUTO ACCIDENTS.

A report covering automobile fatalities in [illegible] eighty-eight cities of the United States for the period from January 3 to September 11, 1926, issued October 7 by the Bureau of the Census, Federal Department of Commerce, discloses that among the 31,878,016 population of these cities there were 4,162 deaths from motor vehicle accidents in the 252 days, or 18.0 per 1,000,000 of population, with an average of sixteen fatalities daily.

The California cities listed, together with the number of fatalities for the period covered, include: Los Angeles, 148; San Francisco, 77; Oakland, 35.

FAMILIARITY WITH CARS WILL LESSEN ACCIDENT TOTALS.

Unfamiliarity with the automobile being driven plays a considerable part in accident totals, it is indicated in a recent report of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

Calculations from recent records revealed that some 18 percent of the operators involved in 37,000 motor-vehicle accidents occurring in Connecticut were driving the cars of friends. Considering that the average owner is the chief driver of his car most of the time, it is evident that there is a very high percentage of accidents when the cars are loaned to friends, say safety authorities of auto clubs.

Since reports of accidents often vary according to whether a friend or the owner is driving a car, this percentage may perhaps be discounted to some degree, but it is considered indicative of the danger that lies in being unfamiliar with the operations of a car when driving it.

ONE LAMP MENACE.

The menace of one lighted headlamp on a motor vehicle was shown in reports of accidents made following the first rain of the season, according to information given out by the State Division of Motor Vehicles.

Those guilty of carelessness and negligence in this matter are going to have cause for regret, for a bulletin issued by the department gives warning that arrests will be made of drivers of vehicles being operated with one lighted headlamp.

Would Restrict Venders—The beauty of the roadside has been desecrated to such an extent that the American Automobile Association finds itself compelled to launch a nationwide campaign to throw restrictions around the operations of "hot dog" venders and their kin along the highways.

To Keep Windshield Clear—To obtain clear vision during rainy weather, motorists should mix thoroughly a solution of two ounces of glycerin, one ounce of water and one dram of salt and apply with a soft cloth to the windshield when wet, stroking up and down.

Check Up Water Hose—Before starting on a long trip, examine the water hose leading from the radiator to the pump and to the engine. The hose may appear in good condition on the outside, but the inner lining may have collapsed, stopping the water circulation.

New Gaskets Cheaper—When replacing any of the gaskets in the exhaust or intake manifold, install an entirely new set. The additional cost is nominal, and it will equalize the pressure on the flanges.

Breaking in New Cars—Many experienced motorists put cylinder oil into the gasoline tank when breaking in a new car, especially during the first few hundred miles. One quart of oil to eighteen or twenty gallons of gasoline is enough; this practice insures positive lubrication of the piston rings and valves.

Inspect Generator Brushes—Examine the generator brushes on a car at least twice a year. The principal troubles to which the brushes are subject include the sticking of the brushes in the holders, brushes fitting poorly to the commutator, weak holder springs and brushes grounded by oil, dirt or carbon particles.

A BIT O' FARMING

PREPARED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY M. H. ELLIS

AGRICULTURE NEEDS GENEROUS APPROPRIATIONS

INTEREST IN AGRICULTURE IN CALIFORNIA at the present time is centering about the preparations for the next Legislature. Many bills were passed two years ago that failed to meet the approval of the governor; and with the change of administration there is hope, on the part of those who sponsored them, that if passed again these bills may become laws. Consequently, they are being made ready for introduction.

The Agricultural Legislative Committee which, on the part of the commodity-selling organizations of the state, not only watches legislation but makes recommendations as to budget appropriations, has as usual been holding hearings in Berkeley, Davis, Sacramento and other places where the state's agricultural activities head. With a surplus in the state treasury that will run around $15,000,000, there is bound to be a contest to see where this money goes.

Agriculture needs generous appropriations, if the industry is to prosper and continue, and those who have the interests of the farmers in mind will make an earnest endeavor to see that agriculture is not neglected.

SULPHUR MAY CURE.

With thousands of acres of California ruined through over-irrigation and lack of drainage, by the rise of the water table and accompanying alkali, it has for many years been the custom of those who are familiar with the situation to speak of irrigation and drainage in the same breath. Drainage will prevent the trouble; but what of those areas already arid through alkali? The white alkali is not so serious, it can be leached. But the black alkali has proved more troublesome, and for some time was thought to present a problem not capable of solution.

However, Dr. W. P. Kelley of the University of California Experiment Station reports that sulphur may be the cure. On one field, he reports, the soil was in such condition that less than 150 pounds of barley hay was produced in 1921. By the application of 3,600 pounds of sulphur per acre, this same field produced more than nine tons per acre of alfalfa hay in 1925, and the crop this year was even better. This is about twice the average yield of the San Joaquin Valley. If the cure can be administered at a cost that is not prohibitive, it appears the problem has been solved.

RED SPIDER PEST.

Red spider does not confine its attacks to fruit trees, as is well known by many strawberry growers. And on the strawberry plant the pest is even harder to control than on trees, since some sprays burn and all are difficult to get on the under side of the leaves which harbor the insects.

Weeds and trash afford splendid hibernating places for this pest, so an early winter job must be made of the cleanup among the vines. Add to this a 3 percent lime-sulphur spray in January or February, and there will be a noticeable dimunition of the pests next summer. There is no place about the farm or the back yard where weeds or trash can be tolerated.

LOOK OUT FOR CHOLERA.

California does not produce its pork. Just now, importations from the Middle West are becoming heavier; and with the winter season there comes cholera. It may be imported here, very easily. Consequently, every precaution should be taken to see that the disease does not get a foothold.

Farmers will do well to quarantine any breeding stock before it is placed in their herds; and if any trouble is noticed, the state authorities should have prompt warning. With indications of a returning interest in the swine industry, there should be no set-backs now that can be avoided.

MANURES BEST FERTILIZERS.

There are no better fertilizers than barnyard manures. Cover crops and inorganic commercial fertilizers have their places, it is true, and are not to be ignored, but nine times out of ten, or oftener, manure will furnish the food elements in the soil that plants need. The California College of Agriculture has found, through experiments, that where barnyard manure was used alone in moderate quantities, analyses showed more available potash than where potash fertilizers had been applied. Nitrogen, nearly always lacking, is of course supplied, as well as other deficiencies.

DON'T WASTE WEEDS.

In the winter cleanup, remember that organic matter is better for the soil than a small pile of ashes. Consequently, where it is possible, plow under the weeds. If they are too rank, disk them down first. It has cost the soil no inconsiderable plant food to raise these weeds, so don't waste them. Make the best of the bad job you have permitted, and get the bulky matter into the soil. Get such trash into the ground early and let the winter rains help to rot it. Another disking in the spring should get the soil in good shape.

DEATH TO BORERS.

If you are going to protect your fruit trees from borers by the use of paradichlorobenzene, be sure your gas is not wasted. Make a ring around the tree with the crystals, and then build a cone-shaped mound of dirt with the trunk of the tree through its apex. Pat the soil down to prevent loss of gas. The gas generated is heavier than air, but wind through the orchard will blow it along unless it is not properly covered. If the operation is well carried out, it means death to the borers.

ENEMIES BESET STATE.

Alfalfa weevil continues to be a menace to California. A. C. Fleury, supervising quarantine officer of the State Department of Agriculture, reports that 218 automobiles would have brought one or more of the insects from Nevada this year, had it not been for close inspection. More than a thousand insects were taken from these cars. Had it not been for this quarantine service, California farmers would have another major pest with which to contend.

From every side the state is beset with agricultural enemies that are seeking a foothold. Already we have scores of them, introduced before inspection became available; and farmers of the state must back to the limit laws and appropriations to make stronger and more effective the barriers against new ones.

Among these threats, is the Japanese beetle. So far it has not made headway enough to get away from the Atlantic Coast. And while its natural progress is but ten or fifteen miles a year, an automobile or freight car could introduce it into California quite easily almost any day. It is particularly fond of apples, as many as 278 beetles having been found on a single fruit. In ten years, despite the efforts of science to combat its spread, it now covers an area of 5,000 square miles in New Jersey, Maryland and Pennsylvania. While it prefers apples, the beetle will attack anything the farmer grows, and it presents a problem of quarantine second only in seriousness to the Mediterranean fruit fly.

THIS YEAR'S OLIVE CROP.

This year's olive crop is running but about 40 percent of normal. However, with a smaller load on the trees, the size has been appreciably increased, and indications are that most of the fruit will be of fancy grade. A steady increase in demand has been noted, both at home and in the East, although California still consumes about half the pack.

ARTIFICIAL LIGHTS FOR HENS.

Artificial lights have been recommended to lengthen the winter day for the laying hen, the theory being that she will lay more eggs because she will consume more food and take more exercise. Eastern experiment stations have been lavish in their advice along this line; but the California station has been slow to conduct experiments, and no recommendations have been forthcoming.

But several farmers have tried lights in comparison with flocks without them. And the disquieting result in cases that have been observed is that the hens without the lights have consumed more food, and laid more eggs. More than that, the egg return has been higher, indicating that the eggs were laid while prices were highest. In view of these few experiments, which are by no means conclusive, farmers will watch with interest any activities the College of Agriculture may conduct.

BLACK MEASLES OF GRAPES.

Sodium arsenite, three pounds to fifty gallons of water applied in March, effectually checked black measles of grapes in Placer, Yolo and Mendocino Counties this year. Here are three climates,—foothill, valley and coast; and the experiment was equally successful in all, with check plots proving the correctness of the treatment. Grapes are a crop common to most California districts, and mealybug is a disease common to grapes in all districts, so the treatment means much to the state. While it adds to the control burden of labor and money, it adds to the harvest return many times over. And that's the object of farming.

WATER NECESSARY.

Without water, no soil can be productive. Plant foods, for the most part, are absorbed through the roots, and only those in solution can be thus taken into the system of the plant. Care must be taken to see that the plant gets enough water, or fertilizers and other agencies will be unavailing. The soil auger is the only sure means of determining soil moisture, and it should be part of every farmer's everyday equipment.

CATTLE OUTLOOK BRIGHT.

Early and copious rains have started fall pastures and winter range grass in good shape. There should be plenty of feed this winter, and indications still point to a return of real prosperity in the cattle industry. Understocking for a few years, careful grazing methods and better stock judiciously marketed will hasten the day of this prosperity.

GOOD SUGGESTION.

Over-production or under-consumption? That debatable subject arises every time the market is over-supplied and prices are reduced. There are two remedies, obviously. Either production must be decreased, or the demand must be increased. There is little desire in California for the former. Methods for the latter lie in two channels. Either existing markets must be stimulated to absorb more produce, or new markets must be found. The latter appears to be the best bet, although perhaps not the easiest.

Professor B. H. Crocheron, director of agricultural extension at the University of California, returning from a trip to the Orient, repeats what many already have known but what few have little considered: that the Oriental produce of the soil cannot be eaten fresh. Hence, there are no fresh fruits or vegetables available unless they are imported. Butter sold there comes from Australia, very inferior in quality. Good beef is rare, and meats, as known here, hardly exist. The only American produce he found on the markets were raisins in small packages put up for the Oriental trade and eagerly consumed by natives and foreigners alike.

Professor Crocheron believes there is a market there, if it is properly developed, and he advocates agricultural attaches for American consulates to bring this about, just as commercial attaches watch for business interests there. Canned fruits, dried fruits and fresh fruits, as well as vegetables and meats, may find a ready and profitable market in the most populous district of the world, if the suggestion materializes.

VEXING PROBLEM BELIEVED SOLVED.

There are few poultrymen in California but who provide runs for their hens on the soil, some alternating between pens on either side of the laying house so that the fowls may pick green feed. There is, however, at least one egg producer in the state who believes the day of the dirt yard has passed. His runs are floored with cement, and the hens get no opportunity to scratch in the soil. This, he claims, removes danger from round worms, which in itself is no inconsiderable item. But further than that, the roundworms leave the flock in a poor physical condition, easily susceptible to pox and other contagious diseases. He has had no disease among his hens since the introduction of the cement floors, and he believes he has arrived at the solution of a very vexing poultry problem.

BACK YARD ORCHARD.

While giving advice to the farmer to maintain his own family orchard, this same advice for the suburbanite or city dweller should not be overlooked. The back yard in the city or suburb may well be put to fruit production. Shade always is desirable, and is furnished quite as readily by fruit trees as by the shade trees themselves. Fruit trees are as shapely, and offer not only the attraction of blossoms in the spring but fruit well worth while in the summer and fall.

In setting out trees, give consideration to good dwarf varieties, if shade is not a major consideration. If dwarf trees are not objectionable from this standpoint, more kinds of fruit can be produced on the lot. But even if big trees are wanted, varieties far beyond the number of trees may be produced.

BOOK REVIEWS

(MARGERY BOYD.)

"LITTLE ABE LINCOLN."

By Bernie Babcock; J. B. Lippincott Company, Publishers, Philadelphia; Price, $2.00.

All of us are familiar with Abraham Lincoln, the man, the "Great Emancipator." Few, however, know very much concerning his early life — the many intimate childhood incidents that went to make up his boyhood. In the story of "Little Abe Lincoln," Mrs. Babcock has dove-tailed historical facts with fiction so cleverly that the completed book stands out clear cut—an integer. It is written principally for children, but it has interest for grown-ups, too. For instance:

Thomas Lincoln, Abraham's father, was a trapper. He was often gone for months, leaving his wife, Nancy Hanks, and little daughter, Sarah, all alone in their log cabin. The Lincolns were three miles from the nearest settlement, Hodginsville, Kentucky. The forest was all around them and almost every night, especially in the winter, wolves howled close to the cabin.

The baby, Abraham, was born the night of a terrible blizzard, February 12, 1809. The father was away trapping at the time, and if it had not been for a neighbor's timely visit the Lincoln family would have perished in the cold. When Abraham was six the family moved to Knob Creek, where he went to school for the first time. Mrs. Babcock writes that, "Teachers in these early days traveled from place to place, much as itinerant preachers did, stopping a few weeks where enough pupils could be secured to teach a school. Few of them had any education, except the rudiments of reading and arithmetic. Several of the pupils who attended a school taught by Caleb Hazel were playmates of 'Abe' Lincoln, then very young." Thomas Lincoln was anxious that his son become a trapper but "Abe" was too "chicken-hearted." He loved animals and could not bear to kill them.

When the children were still quite young, Mrs. Lincoln died. For a year after that they were left much alone at times, with barely enough to eat. During the cold weather they suffered. The following year Lincoln re-married. His second wife was well to do. She had three children of her own, but "Abe" and Sarah were as much loved and cared for as if they had been her own.

The story closes with a pioneer Thanksgiving Day feast. Its happy note of joy and gladness is good to remember. It is pleasant to know that Abraham Lincoln's childhood, though full of hard work, was also a very happy one.

"MONSIEUR OF THE RAINBOWS."

By Vingie E. Roe; Doubleday, Page & Company, Publishers, Garden City; Price, $2.00.

"Monsieur of the Rainbows" is the story of the nomadic wanderings of a little, frail, old man, a gentleman of France. Through the hills and under the Californian skies this vagabond gentleman roamed, stopping to play often on his ancient accordion in the shade of the eucalyptus trees.

The adventures which befell him were many. From the lonely country road to the wide thoroughfare which led to the heart of the Supercraft Pictures Corporation, to the hungry asphalt which led to the court house and prison, Monsieur Bon Coeur trod them all.

In and around the adventures of Monsieur Bon Coeur is another story—a love story of a great picture actress and a poor, but splendid, rancher. Their romance and near-tragedy the

"YOU CAN'T WIN."

By Jack Black; The Macmillan Company, Publishers, New York; Price, $2.00.

Burglars! Are they human, do they have real feelings, have they any code of life, what launches them on their dangerous career, how do they spend their leisure time, and what do they do with their stolen booty? These are questions which the average man or woman ask when they stop to think of the burglar as an individual.

Jack Black, ex-burglar and convict, answers them in the story of his life, "You Can t Win." It is a fascinating tale, one of thrills, excitement, power when his "luck ran high," of wretched despair, pain and misery when luck looked the other way.

For the greater part of his life, Jack Black was a fugitive from the law. He was a thief, a dope-fiend and a jail-breaker, yet withal a man. He suffered untold agonies in the straightjacket and was given twenty lashes in a Canadian jail for a robbery committed there. Many and varied were his experiences, but he never deserted a friend, never left a debt unpaid and never refused to help a needy person in trouble. Now he works for an honest living as librarian on the San Francisco "Call."

The story of his career, captures and escapes, burglaries and adventures on the road, of the queer and remarkable characters he met and knew, of the final turning from "his calling" to play the game straight, is absorbing. The simple straightforward way in which the narrative is written does much to hold the attention and strengthen the veracity of the writer. "You Can't Win" is a page from life. It should be read.

"THE RED-HAIRED GIRL."

By Carolyn Wells; J. B. Lippincott Company, Publishers, Philadelphia; Price, $2.00.

"That red-headed girl has got me worried"—to this tune detectives scratched their heads, frowned, looked wise and gave it up. Every day's delay of finding the mysterious red-haired girl who was the last person seen on the premises of the murdered man, George Converse, brought his brother nearer to the gallows.

Lloyd Converse was the unfortunate victim

HOLLYWOOD REMAINS MOTION PICTURE CAPITAL OF THE WORLD

(ASSISTANT SECRETARY, HOLLYWOOD CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

MOTION-PICTURE PRODUCTION INcreases running into many millions of dollars, together with added millions already expended and still to be spent in 1926 for studio improvements, constitute a double-edged weapon with which the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce is waging a definite and successful warfare in refutation of broadcast statements which claim Hollywood is losing its grip on the motion-picture industry, and is soon to be bereft of its identity as the Motion-Picture Capital of the world.

There are nineteen motion-picture studios in Hollywood, these operating some 250 producing companies. Obviously, it is not possible to acquire an accurate detailed statement of production and improvements planned by all of these. Therefore, for purposes of establishing the tenability of the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce's position that Hollywood, instead of losing its grip on the fourth of all large industries of the world, is annually gaining importance and becoming more firmly entrenched as the center of picture production, facts and figures concerning eight of the large producing studios are taken to provide the example.

These eight are Christie's, Metropolitan, First National, Schenck's, Warner Brothers', Paramount (Lasky), Universal and Fox. Other than First National these have been established in Hollywood since the industry was in its infancy, and even First National has carried on to a considerable extent its production activities in Hollywood, although the institution's chief program has been performed in the East. This year, however, First National is firmly established as one of Hollywood's permanent motion-picture institutions and hereafter will make at least seventy-five percent of its pictures here.

In the year 1925, which comprised a record for production in Hollywood, the eight companies referred to completed films costing approximately $70,000,000. This year (1926) the aggregate cost is more than $99,500,000, an increase of about $30,000,000.

Changes in location of old, establishing of new and important additions to other studios this year will bring a greatly increased value in motion-picture property holdings in Hollywood, a value on par with and appropriate to the increase in production.

In excess of $6,000,000 is to be spent in Hollywood by the motion-picture industry in the expansion of production units during the current year. The largest single project contemplated is a $2,500,000 improvement program for the Joseph Schenck-United Artists' Studio. This is almost a total reconstruction of the former Pickford-Fairbanks institution, to build the plant on a more permanent basis.

First National has recently erected a new plant at Burbank costing in the neighborhood of $1,750,000, the studio standing on a seventy-four-acre site. Famous Players-Lasky is completing a $500,000 improvement program at 5431 Melrose avenue, a plant purchased some time back from United Studios. Work on another $500,000 improvement project is nearing completion.

Warner Brothers will revivify the old Vitagraph place in East Hollywood for production purposes at a cost of half a million dollars. Fox has appropriated a like sum for the construction of new stages and buildings, new lighting and camera equipment, and a Little Fox theatre on the lot are included in this improvement. Columbia Pictures has just celebrated its fifth birthday anniversary with the completion of a $250,000 improvement program.

Expenditures such as these do not intimate early abandonment of Hollywood as the motion-picture capital, and it seems safe to suppose that for the next decade at least the name "Hollywood" will be found emblazoned on the majority of pictures produced throughout the world.

As to production itself, the figures of the eight companies are amazing, and tell a tale diametrically opposed to that broadcast by space writers who have declared Hollywood in the decadence as the center of picture making. The following table summarizes the comparative situation as it refers to production in 1925 and 1926:

Studio	1925	1926	Increase
Christie	$ 1,750,000	$ 1,[illegible]	$ [illegible]

First National	14,000,000	[illegible]	[illegible]
Warners	10,000,000	11,000,000	1,000,000
Paramount	15,000,000	[illegible]	[illegible]
Universal	5,625,000	[illegible]	[illegible]
Fox	30,000,000	[illegible]	10,000,000
	$69,975,000	$90,[illegible]	$20,[illegible]

There exists no doubt among Hollywood authorities as to what particular condition constituted the basis for the erroneous statements concerning Hollywood's status in the moving-picture industry.

The fact that Lasky purchased the old United Studio property on Melrose avenue and has dismantled the old plant at Sunset boulevard and Vine street gave rise to these false articles. The correspondent did not look into or seek first causes, neither did he credit Lasky with remaining in Hollywood, or take cognizance of the fact that First National has come to Hollywood to remain. Lasky's property at Vine and Sunset has become so commercially valuable that it was not good business to occupy it as a studio site when there were other sites to be procured at lower realty values. The old studio property is practically in the center of Hollywood and more to be desired for business subdividing than for its original purpose. As is indicated by the acquisition of the old United Studios on Melrose avenue near Van Ness, and the foregoing statistical summary, Paramount, which is Lasky, not only does not intend to relinquish the value of the name Hollywood, but proposes to build up production to a very large degree, the increase this year over last being at least $5,000,000.

First National has for some years past done an intermittent production business in Hollywood, a large portion of its work, however, being done in the East. The Hollywood work has been done mostly at the United Studios, a twenty-eight-acre property in Hollywood which heretofore has been operated as a rental studio. Primarily it has served as a studio in which any independent producer could obtain space. Recently First National definitely concluded that a location in or near Hollywood, where the entire business of the corporation could be conducted, was the only wise and businesslike method to be pursued. As a consequence a large tract of land within three and a half miles of the center of Hollywood has been purchased and the company is improving the property in such a way as will provide a studio, with equipment, equal to anything at present employed for this purpose in the making of motion pictures. The property will also provide sufficient room for rental purposes.

At the time that First National made the move to acquire its own studio property Joseph Schenck, who is generally looked upon as being among the most influential of the largest motion-picture producers, closed an arrangement with the Pickford-Fairbanks organization to transfer his production organization and activities to the Pickford-Fairbanks property at Santa Monica boulevard and La Brea avenue. These grounds are among the largest in Hollywood devoted to picture making. Up to the present time the Pickford-Fairbanks property has been used very little each year, being devoted almost exclusively to pictures made by Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks, seldom amounting to more than two or three per year. With the Schenck organization in charge production is to reach a volume twice as great as in the previous year.

Warner Brothers' Pictures Inc. has built up production properties since first opening the West Coast Studios at 5842 Sunset boulevard eight years ago with the steady consistency which the growth of the organization demanded, until now the thirteen-acre lot contains a model moving-picture production plant, complete with all the many subsidiary trades and arts which picture making entails.

Although the Sunset boulevard property is so cleverly planned that the entire 1926-27 program of twenty-six features and nine super-features of road-show quality could be produced without crowding, Warner Brothers a year ago procured and greatly improved the twenty-acre Hollywood property of the Vitagraph Company of America, when it absorbed that company in order to allow its productions the greatest freedom in the matters of time and space, so necessary to the production of features of the greatest artistic calibre.

On the average, 750 persons are employed on the Warner Brothers' lots in many different trades and occupations. Since purchasing Vita-

Feminine World's Fads and Fancies

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOERMER.

SATIN FASHIONS MANY OF SMARTEST FROCKS

THE WAY ONE WEARS NOVELTIES, ideas or practical suggestions is the making or the marring of clothes. Just watch the smart girl don her frock, put on her hat, or put the finishing flower upon her scarf or fur. A tilt of the hat above the ear, a pat of the flying bob, and behold, she has accomplished something the dowd cannot attain, however expensive or elegant her clothes may be!

Accessories, in terms of dress, are those parts of the costume which are not actual garments. Of late years, since garments themselves became simpler, accessories have steadily become more elaborate, important, expensive and significant. Ornaments are described in the dictionary as those things which add beauty or elegance. In order to fulfill their high mission they must be beautifully chosen.

Earrings are almost universally worn at present, and are very long for evening wear. Large, round pearls are still worn with the street dress. Necklaces are an almost essential ornament with all types of dress. They range from the choker to gorgeous affairs of historic gems. "Memory bracelet" is the name given to the bracelet of heavy gold links set with large semi-precious stones. These bracelets are worn in groups.

Quality, not quantity, is a good rule for accessories, as well as for almost everything else. Kerchiefs also give an opportunity for colors in the smart costume, and with the neutral sports clothes of the moment those of bright color are used as accessories. The smartest are very large. Even the white linen batiste ones are the size of a man's handkerchief.

Flowers are the loveliest when perfectly chosen for the gown with which they are worn. In daytime, however, the chiffon flower, or group of flowers, is very good.

Gloves have always played a great role in the costume of a well-dressed woman. The plain pull-on beige antelope glove is replaced for winter in the darker shades. It is safe to say that the smarter the woman, the plainer the glove she chooses.

Umbrellas are all short and stubby, with restrained and simple handles of such materials as tortoise-shell or rare woods.

Vanity cases give an opportunity for beauty and luxury. For evening, exquisite jeweled cases are used. Cigaret cases are of lovely semi-precious materials, the most magnificent of all being crystal, ivory, lapis-lazuli or onyx. Rare wood is sometimes inlaid with enamel designs. Chinese lacquer also is used. It is smart to have all of one's smoking accessories match.

One of the smartest frocks shown recently was of satin in crow-wing black. Satin of the same weave as that of the garment formed the bat-winged sleeves, which were of paper white, conferring character upon the frock.

Even though it has many new or time-worn names, satin still remains satin and it fashions many of the season's smartest frocks, gowns, wraps and dresses. Also, be it said, many of the satins are black.

Black satin has come into its own, and more than its own, this season. Vests set off the frocks of black satins. Many depend for enlivenment upon an inset vestee of contrasting color and fabric. Flesh pink is intriguingly used in this way.

Not in years have evening wraps been so glorious as now. The operatic season has brought these into prominence. Pile fabrics, richly enhanced by embroideries of silk metallic thread with chenille or fur trimmings and gay linings, have been much in evidence. Metal brocades are being shown in entrancing designs and glowing colors, and are popular for the more ornate evening dresses.

Hats are small again, and high crowned. The height is not of the severe kind, that is so generally unbecoming, but is modified by being crushed and molded into flattering forms. Millinery ornaments show a penchant for gold and silver, separately and in combinations.

Velvet has come strongly to the front for fall and winter wear. It is shown in printed and scotch plaid effects, as well as in solid colors of the most alluring shades. The very elaborate velvet brocades on chiffon grounds are growing popular for dinner gowns and the more formal type of afternoon frocks.

Brocades are shown in a wide variety of designs, such as floral patterns, spots and checks combined with other fabrics. Velvet lends its gleaming richness to the smooth silkiness of crepe satin and the rougher surface of georgette.

An unusual skirt is made of box pleated georgette, with velvet forming the top of the pleats.

The silhouette is not changing radically, but it is undergoing some very interesting variations. Among these the most noticeable is the bloused bodice. This new softness of line above the waist is brought about in all manner of fashions.

The dolman sleeve is perhaps the most picturesque. These sleeves are sometimes used on a straight-line model and sometimes are arranged so that they merge into a blouse back.

The bolero is also very good. Some frocks show a separate jacket, while others simulate into a bolero effect.

Neck lines are varied, the double outline being one of the more unusual. A double neck line or a repeated "V" is seen on both afternoon and evening dresses. The high neck line, low bertoned standing collar and tie of georgette crayat knotted at the front with ends held by metal slides.

The ensemble will be much in evidence. There seems to be no limit to the variety of materials that may be combined in frock and coat. Wool crepes as well as novelty fabrics, such as black wool velours and wool checks, are used.

One effective model consists of a speckled brown and beige velvet frock worn beneath a straight, full-length coat. Velours and velvets are used for many coats, with the crepe satin, georgette or silk poplin for the dress.

A combination of plaid and plain material is featured in a number of sports ensembles. A loose plaid sports coat is accompanied by a plaid skirt and a knitted sweater.

Skirts are slim and short and straight, or they are flared and short and full.

of circumstantial evidence, and that evidence was quickly weaving a noose around his neck. He was the first to discover the body of his brother, he was known to have had disputes with him over money matters and, most incriminating of all, a telegram hastily stuffed into the pocket of the dead man told that the two brothers had planned to meet by appointment, directly contradicting Lloyd's story. His own lawyer admitted that the prospect was not very bright.

At last, upon the advice of a well-known judge to whom Lloyd's fiancee had at last turned in desperation, Fleming Stone, the great detective, was called. The red-haired girl was found, the murder solved and Lloyd given him life and liberty, all because one man was too clever to be thrown off the trail of the guilty murderer, too clever to be fooled by circumstantial evidence carefully planted.

"The Red-Haired Girl" is a typical Fleming Stone detective story, which statement describes the book completely. If you have read one of these stories you will understand, if not perhaps you would enjoy reading one.

WILMINGTON AS A DISTRIBUTING CENTER

Thos. F. Mason

(WILMINGTON CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

AMONG THE MOST IMPORTANT requirements of any city to make of it a distributing center are first, location, and second, transportation facilities.

Wilmington has both of these, and the knowledge of its geographical location, with reference to the City of Los Angeles, its harbor and surrounding communities, is being capitalized by big business. The oil industry has been using Wilmington for a distribution point for pipe and steel for the past several years; these commodities are shipped in by water and placed in storage yards maintained by trucking companies, which later distribute them to their ultimate destination. One of the most substantial and successful grocery concerns in California has been distributing its goods from Wilmington since 1915, and it is the writer's opinion that its location at Wilmington is one of the main reasons for this success. The notable fact that Henry Ford picked this district as a location for his assembling and distributing plant, advertises to the world what he thinks of Wilmington as a distributing center.

The report of commerce passing through Los Angeles Harbor reveals that we are importing merchandise from every part of the world. All imported merchandise passes through the hands of the customs inspector, in accordance with the rules and tariffs covering imports into the United States; and, as one package on every invoice or not less than one in every ten packages, is appraised for value at what is known as the appraiser's warehouse, it will be only a short time, in the writer's opinion, until Uncle Sam will have an appraiser's warehouse at the harbor and that it will be located in the most central and desirable section, which is Wilmington.

Wilmington is part of the City of Los Angeles, and is located twenty-two miles due south of the city hall. It is closer to the middle central states than any other port on the Pacific Coast, and is practically the same distance from Salt Lake City as the next nearest port. There are five railroads serving Wilmington. There is under way a plan for the unification of rail facilities at Los Angeles Harbor which, when adopted, will facilitate the handling of freight between Wilmington and any point in the harbor, and will be a decided advantage to Wilmington, particularly from the distribution point of view.

In addition to the railroads, we have two through boulevards to Los Angeles, with Avalon boulevard, the third and most direct route, now under construction; and one east and west boulevard, connecting Wilmington with neighboring coast towns and surrounding communities, over which operate big fleets of motor trucks. These trucks, as a means of transportation, are here to graph about $50,000 has been spent upon its improvements, and it is planned to spend approximately $150,000 on the improvement of it and the Warner lot during the present year. While Warner Brothers will make eight less pictures during the coming season they will expend $11,000,000 in their productions, almost half again as much as last season's budget called for.

The net results of the development herein mentioned are these: That Lasky and Schenck Studios, both within two miles of Sunset boulevard and Vine street, will increase their business by a very important degree over any previous record established in Hollywood. That the First National organization, within three and a half miles, will increase past business by more than 100 percent; that none of the lesser independent producers who have heretofore rented properties will be forced to leave Hollywood. In fact, they will be afforded even greater opportunity for operations and possibility for expansion of their business through the establishment of permanent studios on larger acreage and provided with more and up-to-the-minute equipment for them to employ in their endeavors.

In the meanwhile, practically all of the other producing companies are continuing to increase their business, making permanent improvements in their properties and, in every other way, indicating that they have reached the definite conclusion that Hollywood is the place, above all others, in which they can most economically carry on their motion-picture production operations in the future.

The percentage of motion pictures made in Los Angeles County last year was eighty-five, as against eleven percent in New York and four percent scattered over the country. Of course, the great bulk of this production was the output of Hollywood studios, which gave the film fans pictures to the approximate value of $170,000,000. With the arrival of First National, Hollywood's production will be proportionately increased as that of the cast is decreased through the operations of this important company.

To those of us who are thoroughly familiar with local conditions the psychological effect of more permanently locating the industry in Hollywood is to establish Hollywood as a permanent metropolis and guarantee its continued growth in population and enhance its value and importance as a metropolitan commercial center.

stay, and at the present time are handling approximately the same amount of tonnage as the rail lines. Pipe lines, as common carriers, make direct connection between all of the oil fields of Southern California and the five large refineries, the many tank farms and the loading docks here.

Wilmington, from its location at the head of the harbor, derives full benefit from all of the steamship lines entering the Port of Los Angeles, and is fortunate in having, in addition to its present private warehouses, three new, modern fireproof warehouses under way, seventeen modern piers upon which are up-to-date transit sheds for the handling of general cargo, three of the largest lumber wharves in the world, and seven oil-loading docks which serve ships from every port in the world.

Wilmington, from its strategic location, being served by ships from all ports of the world, rail lines, trucking companies and pipe lines, and being equipped with modern warehouses and docks, is not only the distributing center of yesterday and today, but is destined to be the largest distributing center of tomorrow in our great Pacific Southwest.

GOLDEN CHAIN GOODFELLOWSHIP MORE FIRMLY WELDED.

ASILOMAR—THE FOURTH ANNUAL get-together meeting and over-nite party of the Parlors of Santa Cruz, Monterey and San Benito Counties was held October 16 and 17. The opening function was dinner, after which adjournment was made to the administration building. When the goodly number in attendance were all grouped about the cheery fire in the large fireplace, each one present was asked to introduce her right-hand neighbor that all might become acquainted. Introductions completed, attention was then turned to the program arranged for the evening.

With Past Grand Organist Julia K. Larkin of Salinas at the piano, a number of catchy songs, with words fitted for the occasion, were sung by all. Little Mary Jean Darling of Hollister gave a pleasing dance number, after which a group of "two-faced" members from Santa Cruz 26 gave, in costume, an amusing rendition of an original farce entitled "The Dumb-bell Family." Filled with local hits, it aroused much laughter and continued applause.

Mrs. Nichols of Salinas rendered charming vocal solos, while members of Copa de Oro 105 (Hollister) prepared for initiation ceremonies, adding two new members to the Order of "Nifty Damsels Grown Wild." While not in strict accord with the ceremonies of any known organization, the grotesque performance was well received and generously applauded. Miss Juhler of Salinas entertained with two greatly enjoyed vocal numbers.

Members of Aleli 102 (Salinas) appeared in a three-act production prepared and written by one of their members. Screams of laughter greeted their efforts and, at the close of the play, those fortunate enough to witness its production submitted titles for the nameless skit. A committee, to whom the names were submitted, presented a prize to Miss Halsey of Santa Cruz for the title "A Busy Ten Years," considered the most appropriate. Later Miss Halsey read a beautiful poem of her own composition dedicated to California.

Past Grand President Sue J. Irwin of Berkeley gave an inspiring talk on the work of the Order. Past Grand President Bertha A. Briggs of Hollister, acting as chairman of the evening, read messages from many past and present grand officers and a particularly entertaining letter from Past Grand President Stella Finkeldey of Santa Cruz, who is touring Eastern states and visiting many historic spots.

Following the program, refreshments were served, and social conversation and story telling were enjoyed until an early hour Sunday morning. Sunday was devoted to amusements on the beach. After luncheon, adieux were said and all departed for their respective homes, feeling that the golden chain of goodfellowship was more firmly welded through this social and happy gathering.

GRAND PARLOR
NATIVE DAUGHTERS GOLDEN WEST.
Office of the GRAND PRESIDENT.

Thanksgiving

To the Ofifcers and Members of the Subordinate Parlors Native Daughters of the Golden West—Dear Sisters: The great American Day, Thanksgiving, will soon be proclaimed by the President of our Nation for observance, in accordance with a long established custom.

When the year was full and the harvest plentiful and deliverance from famine was assured, our forefathers poured forth their praises of thanksgiving to the Lord.

America is the only Nation that has set aside a day of the year to give thanks for blessings received. So we, dear sisters, on this Thanksgiving Day join in praising the Lord for His wonderful works to the children of men and for all His bounty.

As Daughters of the Golden West we should be more than grateful for the great privilege of having been born in the State of California—a state thrice blessed by Almighty God. We have been given a State with wonderful resources, sturdy people, climate unexcelled in any place in the universe and nature's grandeurs unsurpassed. Great institutions of learning, science, art and all that makes for progress, are within our bounds.

Over and above all this we are a free people born into the Nation on the billows of prosperity when other nations and their peoples were oppressed by the tyranny of selfish rulers. Although we were a baby nation, our ancestry was of that sturdy stock who had their convictions, backed by the courage and a love of freedom, as our history attests.

Let us draw the curtain for a moment and visualize another picture—another Thanksgiving Day. We are so apt to lose sight of that first Thanksgiving Day when came that great man, that messenger sent by God, who could foresee the decline of the nations of the Old World and the desolation of a great people who, through greed, false thinking, false philosophy, were fast disintegrating. Then it was God raised up this providential man, as was raised Moses of old, who led his people out of the darknes into the promised Land. So Christopher Columbus was to lead humanity on to a new land of promise and pave the way for a newer, nobler, more godly manhood in the virgin West.

After the eventful voyage, filled with danger and almost death at the hands of a mutinous crew, the great navigator, unmoved, never faltering, landed on the shores of a new-found world. His first act of homage to Almighty God was to plant the Cross, a symbol of sacrifice, his first words were a prayer of thanksgiving.

It is befitting that we should, as a grateful people, render thanks for the blessings received through the courage of the providential men who have ever held our Nation intact, her ideals high, and are ever in the vanguard of freedom and culture of the highest order.

"This is the day which the Lord hath made; we will rejoice and be glad."

Sincerely yours in P.D.F.A.,
PEARL LAMB,

PALO ALTO—NOVEMBER 7 THE HISTORIC Landmarks Committee of the Grand Parlor will place a bronze tablet at the site of the big Palo Alto tree after which the town was named. Hettinger, N. E. Malcolm, J. F. Byxbee, J. F. Nash, E. C. Waterman, G. W. Tinney.

Gleason; Joseph R. Knowland, Past Grand President; Lewis F. Byington, Past Grand President. The plaque will be unveiled by E. C. Waterman, president Palo Alto Parlor.

Grand Officers Meet.

San Francisco—The Board of Grand Officers met October 9, and in addition to Grand President Hilliard E. Welch, who presided, the following were in attendance: Junior Past Grand President Fletcher A. Cutler, Grand First Vice-president Charles A. Thompson, Grand Second Vice-president James A. Wilson, Grand Third Vice-president Charles L. Dodge, Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Grand Trustees Frank I. Gonzalez, John T. Newell, John T. Skelton, Emmet Seawell, Seth Millington, I. H. Reuter. Being ill in a hospital, Grand Trustee Alfred H. McKnew was unable to be present. In addition to the disposal of many matters of routine, the following business was transacted:

A letter was ordered sent to all Subordinate Parlors calling their attention to the powers and duties of the Board of Control.

The matter of the proposed consolidation of Mountain 126 (Dutch Flat) with Auburn 59 was referred to Grand President Welch and Grand Trustee Millington.

The Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce requested that the Order name someone to represent it among the incorporators of an organization known as the American Green Court, founded by the American Reforestation Association, to take up the duties of reforestation. On motion, Grand President Welch was named and an appropriation, not to exceed $50, for membership fee was voted.

Thirty dollars was appropriated to continue membership in the California Development Association.

Five hundred dollars was appropriated for use by the Native Sons' patrol, recently organized in San Francisco.

A charter was granted to Santa Monica Bay 267, to be instituted at Ocean Park, Los Angeles County, October 27.

Monrovia 266, recently instituted with more than fifty charter members at Monrovia, Los Angeles County, was given a credit of $150.

One share of the Grand Parlor's stock in the Santa Rosa Hall Association was transferred to Grand President Welch and Grand Secretary Regan, that they may legally represent the Order on the corporation's board of directors.

At the request of Past Grand President William J. Hayes, endorsement was given proposition 10 upon the November 2 ballot.

Ballot a Priceless Thing.

"Editor Grizzly Bear: One of the great problems of today is to instill the proper respect for the responsibility of citizenship placed upon us. It is a well-known fact that many people shirk their duty at election time. I have, and so have you, spoken many times to the members of our Order concerning this important matter, as well as urging them as Californians to take advantage of their rights and thereby show by their example that in this state we have a class of people who do their duty and help to bring about the proper administration of state affairs. Recently I saw an article, which clearly defines this subject. I am sure its worth will be appreciated:

"'Your ballot is a priceless thing. Money should not buy it, because it was purchased with blood and tears. It is the free gift of our great nation to its lowliest citizen.

"'Your ballot should be used at every election. Your ballot should help win every moral victory. Your ballot should be your voice of protest against whatever is wrong, and your voice of consent to whatever builds enduring civic and national life.'

"I trust that the members of the Native Sons of the Golden West will pride themselves on being citizens and that they will never fail to register and vote at the proper time. Just picture the value of an organization the size of the Native Sons of the Golden West with a membership standing steadfast in their determination to do their duty as citizens of the State of California—and the respect and consideration that will come from so doing.

"Respectfully submitted,
"ALBERT V. MAYRHOFER,
"Deputy Grand President N.S.G.W.
"San Diego, October 3, 1926."

Musical and dance numbers were on the program, and addresses were made by Superior Judge Peter J. Shields and R. E. Golway, superintendent Sacramento County schools.

Luncheon Club Organized.

Santa Rosa—The first meeting of the Native Sons' and Native Daughters' Luncheon Club was held September 30 at a local cafe. Due to the efforts of Wesley Colgan, Frank Berger and L. S. Lewis of Santa Rosa 28 and Mrs. Ruby Berger of Santa Rosa 217 N.D.G.W., there was good attendance. Officers of the club are: F. B. Berger, president; Mrs. Clytie Lewis, vice-president, L. S. Lewis, secretary; J. Ralph Williams, treasurer.

It has been decided to hold the luncheons twice a month, on the second and fourth Thursdays of each month, at noon, which will allow time for committee meetings of both Parlors between the regular meeting nights. An open invitation is extended any and all Native Sons or Native Daughters who may be in Santa Rosa on that day to attend the luncheons.

Thanksgiving Ball.

Sacramento—Sacramento 3 will give a Thanksgiving ball the latter part of November. Harold E. Williams, Joseph Lannon, Earl Taylor, Arch Drennon, June Longshore and Zelber Pressy comprise the committee in charge.

In conjunction with La Bandera 110 N.D.G.W., the Parlor had a Hallowe'en party October 22. Games, dancing and cards were on the program and everybody had a good time.

Past Presidents Initiate.

Oakland—East Bay Counties' Assembly No. 3 Past Presidents' Association initiated a class of fifteen candidates October 13. Following the ceremonies Past Presidents' Association No. 2 N.D.G.W., headed by Mrs. J. J. Gallagher, president, provided entertainment and served refreshments.

Yosemite Valley Initiation.

Merced—Yosemite 24 is arranging for a large class initiation, to be held in the Yosemite Valley December 1. T. W. Fowler heads the committee of arrangements, which is actively campaigning for recruits, and it is confidently expected that the class will number more than fifty.

Fortieth Birthday Observed.

Ferndale—Ferndale 93 celebrated the fortieth anniversary of its institution with a progressive whist party and program, which were concluded with the serving of a fine supper. Prizes were awarded Mrs. D. F. Kellogg, Christian Rasmussen and I. W. Bryant. Those who contributed to the program were Gertrude Hartley, Grace Eva Tonini, Bernice Mills, R. B. Ring. At the banquet board Christian Rasmussen read the minutes of the Parlor's first meeting.

are called on to perform very important duties. For years they have been considered "just a necessary evil," but today automotive engineers know the life of the motor is governed by the ring used, and are interested in the Cork-sealed because it has less tension and wear on cylinders. It stops Piston Slap and Oil Pumping, Delivers more Power and doubles the life of motors.

was had. During the evening a miniature hope-chest was disposed of. The chest and contents, consisting of small hand-painted pictures, an incense burner, candlesticks, candle shield, a jazz bird and other things, were donated and made by the ever-faithful Mrs. Ella Turner. The proceeds of the party and of the hope-chest will be used to swell the funds for entertaining the Grand Parlor in 1927. Tempting refreshments were served at artistically appointed tables. Pumpkins, filled with fruits and flowers, together with autumn foliage, were used as table decorations.

Royal Welcome.

Etna Eschscholtzia 112 and Mountain Dawn 120 (Sawyers Bar) met in joint session on October 15 and extended a royal welcome to Grand President Pearl Lamb on her official visit. The meeting-place was beautifully decorated with autumn leaves and large baskets of marigolds, electric lights, with orange-colored shades, blended prettily with the decorations. The Grand President most highly commended the manner in which the ritual was exemplified and gave an interesting account of the Order's progress.

In the banquet-room the tables, arranged to form a square, were laid with cut glass, silver and fine linen loaned by the members. Bowls of marigolds and roses decorated the tables, and at each plate was a dainty place card and a nut-basket representing California poppies. Appetizing refreshments were served. For the artistically arranged tables, thanks are due Past President Bernice Smith and Recording Secretary Frances Kappler, and for one of the most successful meetings ever held, to D.D.G.P. Clara Farr.

Good Work.

Alturas—Alturas 159 held a reception October 7 in honor of the faculties of the local high- and grammar-schools. The evening was spent at whist and dancing. At the banquet table the guests were extended a cordial welcome by Past Grand President Catherine E. Gloster. Ross Stephens, principal of the high-school, responded. Other speakers were Dr. E. F. Auble and A. K. Wylie, both of whom paid glowing tributes to the Native Daughters.

During the Teachers' Institute Alturas' committee on California history contest submitted its plan to the Modoc County Teachers' Association. The plan was adopted and the association selected the songs "I Love You, California," and "My Own United States" to be sung at the annual grammar- and high-school meets in April. The association promises to supply every school in the county with copies of the song and has requested the rural supervisor to urge their teaching to every school child in Modoc County.

Thus Alturas works to promote love of California and California's history in the hearts of California's children.

In Memoriam

MARY QUINN McLAUGHLIN.

Whereas, The Great Ruler of the Universe, in His infinite wisdom has called to her heavenly home above our dearly beloved sister, Mary Quinn McLaughlin, thus removing from our midst a loyal charter member of Plumas Pioneer Parlor No. 219 Native Daughters of the Golden West and, from us, a true and faithful friend, therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is but a just tribute to the memory of our departed sister that the charter of this Parlor be draped in mourning for a period of thirty days that we bow our heads in silent prayer for her who ever greeted us with loving words and pleasant smiles, knowing that our lives have been made the richer by the unselfish love of her beautiful character and be it further resolved that a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the bereaved with whom this Parlor shares his loss, and a copy be sent to The Grizzly Bear Magazine and one be spread in full upon the minutes of this Parlor.

I cannot feel that thou art far,
For near at hand the Angels are,
And when the sunset gates unbar
Shall I not see thee waiting stand,
And, while amidst the evening star

PASADENA'S WONDERFUL COMMUNITY PLAYHOUSE

Harry L. Roberts
(MANAGER, PUBLICITY DEPARTMENT,
PASADENA CHAMBER OF COMMERCE AND CIVIC ASSOCIATION.)

THE SPOKEN DRAMA HAS BEEN TRAVersing a rough and tortuous road during the last decade. The movies, of course, are to blame. They have captured public favor to such an extent that the so-called legitimate stage has almost ceased to exist in the smaller cities of the nation.

Shortly after motion pictures got out of their swaddling clothes and began to make everybody sit up and take notice, the alarmists promptly mounted their stumps to inform all who were willing to listen that the spoken drama was definitely doomed every place except in the great centers of population. And it looked like they were right. The movies had taken a firm grip on the affections of the public, and it seemed certain that the intensity of this grip would increase, rather than diminish. Legitimate theatres in the smaller cities were dark or only half-filled. Theatrical producers and road-show owners admitted that they couldn't figure out a way to transport a company of players from one place to another, and feed and lodge and clothe them, for the same amount of money that was required to ship a box of film from one city to the next.

THE PASADENA COMMUNITY PLAYHOUSE.

This little problem still confronts the professional purveyors of amusement, thrills and suspense from the stage. Obviously, it is impossible to send a theatrical company on the road, or maintain a professional stock company, for that matter, and present spoken drama at the same prices that the motion-picture theatres charge.

Nevertheless, the situation no longer seems entirely hopeless. Pasadena, Santa Barbara and several other cities have succeeded in providing spoken drama for themselves—not merely spoken drama, in fact, but spoken drama that is very highly regarded in such erudite and skeptical places as New York and London. The experiences of Pasadena and Santa Barbara are being cited as proof that the solution of the spoken drama problem lies in the community playhouse.

The Pasadena Community Playhouse Association long ago passed through the formative, or experimental, stage. The association is now almost nine years old. In its early years, it was forced to withstand several heavy gales, but it weathered them without perishing, and now it is sailing triumphantly through tranquil seas.

A little more than a year ago, the association moved into a new $400,000 playhouse, said by many eminent authorities to be the finest theatrical building of its size in the country and one of the finest in the world. During the first year in the new building, the association produced twenty-four plays, two plays a month, eleven performances for each play. The total attendance was 104,000. Receipts exceeded expenditures by $11,200. Many of the productions attracted world-wide attention. Distinguished men and women came from the ends of the earth to see what it was all about, and went away lustily praising what they had seen.

"It is one of the most encouraging things I have seen in America," said John Drinkwater, distinguished English poet and dramatist. "There in that lovely Spanish building lies the nucleus of a dramatic impetus which promises great things for the future."

Otto H. Kahn, art patron, president of the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company of New York and owner of the New Theatre in New York, was taken by a Pasadena friend for a brief inspection of the playhouse while he was vacationing for a few days in Southern California. He looked around, and then rushed back to his hotel. In a short time, he was back at the playhouse, bringing with him Frank Crowninshield, editor of "Vogue" and "Vanity Fair", Admiral Ernest Taylor, chief of staff of the British Navy, Colonel Norman Thwaites, military aide to the Prince of Wales, and David Gray, author and playwright.

"Far from merely patting you on the back in encouragement," commented Kahn, "we ought to send our New Yorkers out here to learn a few lessons."

As for just what the Pasadena Community Playhouse is, we shall let Gilmor Brown, producing director, explain:

"This is not an amateur theatre in the usual sense—it is not a professional theatre in the usual sense—it is a volunteer theatre, devoted to giving a varied program of the best in drama, modern or classic, native or foreign, in the best possible way, with the best available talent, and dedicated to the development of community spirit and community art."

Comprising the casts for the twenty-four plays produced at the playhouse during the first year in the new building were 669 players. All served without recompense. In addition, nearly 300 volunteer workers aided in the making of costumes during the year.

Of the twenty-four plays, eight were given original productions, notable among them being "Pharoah's Daughter," by Dr. and Mrs. Allison Gaw; "The Devil in the Cheese," which opened in New York this fall, and "Head Acres," the amusing burlesque melodrama by Colin Campbell Cooper. Yevreynov's fantastic comedy, "The Main Thing," was given its first production in America, being produced later in New York. The list included twelve plays which were produced for the first time in the West, among them being "The Makropoulos Secret," running simultaneously in New York; "The Potters," J. P. McEvoy's successful comedy, and "Hassan," James Elroy Flocker's spectacular poetic drama.

Several successful revivals of old favorites were offered during the year, Shakespeare being represented by "The Merry Wives of Windsor," Ibsen by "Peer Gynt" and "Hedda Gabler," and Bernard Shaw by "You Never Can Tell" and "Major Barbara."

Since the association was founded, in 1918, a total of 214 plays have been produced, forty-seven of them being original plays and two presented for the first time in America.

The Pasadena Community Playhouse Association comprises 965 members. The new playhouse was built by popular subscription. It seats 820 persons, 608 on the main floor and 212 in the balcony. In addition to the main auditorium, there is a recital hall seating 300. There are sixty-six rooms of all kinds in the building. Total value of the plant is more than $400,000.

Underneath the stage is the green room, home of the actors, where cast dinners and other social events are held. In the playhouse wardrobe are 1,000 costumes, valued at $7,000. Each play is rehearsed an average of eighteen times. The production department staff comprises twelve persons, the business department sixteen and the music department three. Casts are selected by a casting committee from a card index of 1,000 volunteer players. Only experienced players are chosen for leading roles.

In approaching the theatre, one finds the main auditorium set well back from the street, affording a friendly paved court flanked on two sides by shops and the recital hall. The foyer faces the street and is approached through three arches leading directly into a covered arcade, which also extends back to the street on one side so as to afford a sheltered entrance in case of inclement weather. An outside stairway leads up from the court and gives access to the recital hall, the director room group and the business offices.

The court is raised a few steps above the street level and paved with rough slate flagging carrying the earth colors in subdued and harmonious tones. The stone pavement in this court is made of petrified sea plants and ferns found 200 miles from the sea in Nevada at an elevation of 5,000 feet.

Within the court a towering native palm stands behind a massive seat and name plate mask, while in the far corner of the court is a fountain

Gilmor Brown, producing director of the playhouse, who has been the guiding genius of the association since it was organized nine years ago, this year was awarded the Arthur Noble medal for "having made the most valuable contribution to the civic advancement of Pasadena during 1925." FARMING

A peach tree may be grafted to three extra varieties, furnishing a good early peach, a later main crop freestone like the Elberta, and a couple of clings of different maturing dates. A plum tree can well carry two varieties of plums and as many prunes. The same holds good with other fruits. And not only will more varieties be raised, but the different varieties of the same fruit aid in pollenizing each other, and stronger fruits, a heavier yield and better quality are induced.

BUYING POWER BELOW PAR.

The American farmer is gaining, but his buying power still is below par. The average farm family last year gained $24 in earnings for labor and management, making the figure $648, but while this shows a bit of an increase, it is 30 percent below 1919-1920.

Factory wage-earners, for instance, can buy 16 percent more than they were able to in 1919-1920, but the farmer can purchase only about 20 percent less than in that period. The farmer last year made 3.5 percent on his investment, as against 3.2 percent for the preceding year.

MONEY POORLY INVESTED.

Fertilization for walnuts does not pay, according to the result of tests carried on over a period of seven years in the southern part of the state. The conclusion is evident, money spent for fertilizer is not well invested. On the other hand, money spent for water has given good returns.

Walnut trees are deep rooted, and when planted on good, deep soils, usually get plenty of plant food. Planted on poor, shallow soils, they are a mistake under any cultural practices. Inorganic fertilizers, barnyard manure and cover crops are of little avail. Cover crops do penetrate the plowpan and make water penetration easier, but a subsoiler is more efficient and cheaper. Get the soil in condition to handle water, maintain moisture at an optimum, and plant only cover crops that are deep rooted, seems to be the summary of results of the test.

SAN PEDRO THE GREAT HARBOR of the GRE AT SOUTHWEST

STAG BARBECUE TO RAISE GRAND PARLOR FUNDS

SEPULVEDA PARLOR NO. 263 N.S.G.W. had a largely attended meeting October 20, the occasion being a housewarming of its new quarters, Friendship hall, Odd Fellows' Temple, where meetings are now held every Wednesday night. Many visitors were in attendance and the gathering concluded with refreshments. Four candidates were initiated.

Among the speakers of the evening were Grand Trustee John T. Newell, Ralph I. Harbison, Sidney B. Witkowski, James Mee and D.D.G.P. Albert Cron. Chester H. Shearer gave a piano selection. Ruben Schmidt, candidate for superior court judge, gave a most interesting talk on the community chest, explaining its workings and telling of the needs for 1927.

Bert Mackley advanced a proposal for a home for Pioneers, aged Native Sons and Native Daughters to be built in the Sepulveda Heights district of San Pedro and named in honor of the late United States Senator Stephen M. White, the "father" of the local port. He said he had discussed the idea with various persons and had received encouraging offers of co-operation from all quarters.

San Pedro has been selected as the meeting-place for the 1927 N.S.G.W. Grand Parlor next May, and Sepulveda Parlor must arrange for the entertainment of the hundreds who will attend. To raise funds for the purpose a "stag" barbecue is to be given October 31 at the August Traub ranch, Watson Station. The roads leading to the scene of action will be marked. Admission is $1. The committee in charge for Sepulveda is: William Reuter (chairman), Ed Reese, Tony Leonardo, August Traub, J. B. Alvarado, Ramon Sepulveda. An out-of-the-ordinary feast is promised, and a large gathering is anticipated.

San Pedro will stage a big Armistice Day celebration, November 11. Among the features will be a parade, in which Sepulveda will enter a typically California float. President Baldwin has named a large committee, with W. F. Durr as chairman, to arrange the details.

NATIVE DAUGHTERS' ACTIVITIES.

Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 N.D.G.W. members and their escorts were entertained with a "mystery night" September 21 by Mrs. Bertha Howard, assisted by President Catherine Ross and Past President Charlotte Bennett. Since coming to San Pedro a few months ago Mrs. Howard, affiliated with Joaquin Parlor No. 5 N.D.G.W. (Stockton), has been an enthusiastic worker for Rudecinda. A short program was followed by games, dancing and refreshments. September 29 the good of the order for the month—Secretary Carrie Lenhouse (chairman), Leota Brucker, Modesta Contos, Rose Buchanan—gave a card party.

D.D.G.P. Bertha Hitt and several members of Long Beach Parlor No. 154 N.D.G.W. were visitors October 7. Two candidates were initiated and a contribution was made to the Florida relief fund. Refreshments were served by the month's good of the order committee — Mary Halverson (chairman), Clara Burbridge, Elsie Anderson, Rose Buchanan.

CALIFORNIA MAY BECOME GREAT RUBBER PRODUCING STATE.

California has potential resources for producing perhaps one-tenth of the world's rubber supply from a native Mexican plant known as Guayule, it is estimated by Professor P. B. Kennedy of the University of California College of Agriculture.

Experiments on the possibilities of this wild shrub, under cultivation in California, show that the desert plant seems to grow better in California fogs than in its native habitat, producing, as a result of selection, 17 percent rubber to the plant in place of the former 10 percent.

Plans are now on foot to place the cultivation of the plant on a commercial basis in units of about 7,000 acres, with an extraction plant for each unit. Further experimentation in twenty-acre plots throughout the state will be continued. Guayule rubber is in every way the equal of the best Para rubber.

"How much California may be able to contribute in the future to the world's supply of rubber cannot be stated at this time," says Professor Kennedy, "but an estimate would be one-tenth of the total. To produce 10 percent of the world's consumption would require 320,000 acres of Guayule under cultivation in California, based on a four-year cycle producing 1,500 pounds of rubber per acre when the plants were four years old."

NATIVE SONS' ACTIVITIES.

October 3, San Dieo Parlor No. 208 N.S.G.W. had an open meeting at which Mrs. John J. Shea read a four-act play woven about the history of San Diego. It began with the burning of San Diego Mission and carried on up to the present time. During the second intermission there was community singing, and at the close of the program refreshments were served. Members of the Pioneer Society, the College Club, San Diego Parlor No. 208 N.D.G.W. and the state societies were guests and greatly enjoyed the evening.

October 6 the Parlor featured a boat ride and beach party, two boats being required to handle the crowd. After cruising about San Diego Bay the party landed at Coronado, where refreshments were served and entertainment was provided. Fred Rhodes addressed the Parlor October 18 on the two-million-dollar water bond issue that was submitted to the San Diego voters October 20 and carried by a large majority.

San Diego's attraction for October 25 was a smoker and boxing exhibition, followed by refreshments. Phil Mata was in charge and presented four fast bouts. November 2 the Parlor will initiate a class of candidates.

FATAL AUTO ACCIDENT.

Santa Ana (Orange County)—Mrs. Anna Schultz-Switzer of San Diego City, passed away in the Orange County hospital October 1 as the result of an auto accident near Oceanside. She was a native of California, aged 55, and is survived by a husband and a son, Joseph Selwyn Switzer (San Diego 108 N.S.G.W.).

STOCKTON, SAN JOAQUIN COUNTY

Industrial and Agricultural Capital of Interior California

STOCKTON

HISTORIC OLD TRADING POST NOW INDUSTRIAL, MARKETING CENTER

S. J. Richard

(ASSISTANT SECRETARY, STOCKTON CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

THE UNCANNY VISION OF CALIFORNIA'S Pioneers accounts for the strategic location of many cities scattered throughout the Golden State. To those who would live in a city of beautiful homes, shaded streets, landscape parks, and be in the center of a vast ampitheatre formed by forested mountain ranges and plumed valleys, the City of Stockton has a decided appeal.

When the early Pioneers located the little trading post that has developed into the metropolitan City of Stockton, they had in mind easy water transportation to San Francisco Bay and a location that would dominate a vast agricultural plain on the floor of the San Joaquin and Sacramento Valleys, and the fertile foothill areas of the nearby Sierra Nevadas and the Coast Range. These early Pioneers founded better than they knew, and today tho City of Stockton is the focal point for California's "Great Valley" extending southward two hundred and fifty miles and stretching a like distance to the north.

With location at the head of tidewater in a favored agricultural belt, and with a wealth of raw materials immediately available from nearby mines and forests, and in crop yields for processing, Stockton has become the agricultural and industrial capital of Central and Northern California.

All industrial cities proudly acclaim that their manufactured products are shipped to the markets of the world; but, back of all production must be substantial factors that permit of low cost of operation, an advantageous location, and the operation of an economical marketing plan to reach a multitude of buyers in a natural trading area.

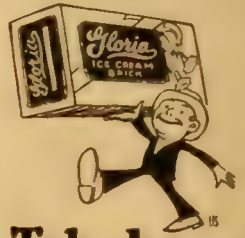
Capitalizing upon the close proximity of commercial and structural minerals and the wealth of timber products and agricultural products to serve as raw materials for industrial purposes, and carrying on a campaign which has visioned in the minds of the nation's industrial leaders the advantages of cheap hydro-electric power, the abundance of dependable labor, climatic advantages, the net work of transportation systems and an ever-expanding market, a variety of industries have located in Stockton to make that city the greatest interior industrial center of California.

Since 1847, Stockton's apparent industrial advantages have been told. One person tells another, and so reputation is made. Today, Stockton's industrial reputation is nation-wide, and her industrial dominance in California is based upon her substantial economic foundation that must lead to further expansion in all industrial lines.

The prosperity of Stockton depends primarily on the stability of industry and commercial enterprise. But, back of these enterprises is the diversification of agricultural production of the great San Joaquin Valley and the multiplicity of raw materials available from farms, forests and mines.

Successful manufacturing plants have acted as a magnet to attract other industries. Today, there are some 200 industries serving natural marketing areas. From Port Stockton radiate railroads, highways and waterways. Three transcontinental railways and two electric lines serve the city. Six hundred miles of improved highways in San Joaquin County, which connect with all main arteries of modern travel, carry their full complement of motor truck and stage traffic. Supplementing the transportation provided by rail lines and highways are Stockton's boat lines, with vessels moving over 300 miles of navigable waterways in the county. The waterways carry from Stockton an outgoing flood of manufactured goods and agricultural products, and incoming cargoes of raw materials and the varied merchandise of commerce.

Back of the industrial prosperity of Stockton is the stabilizing influence of agricultural production in San Joaquin County and Valley. The county ranks first among the 3,065 counties of the United States in combined volume of diversification of farm products, with an annual agricultural yield exceeding $50,000,000. Fifty distinct farm products of commercial importance are grown in the county, with four agricultural crops producing an annual yield of $5,000,000 or more. The county possesses fertile soil, an abundant supply of pure, soft water, and an equable climate, the three essentials for agricultural production and fruit culture.



Immediately adjacent to the City of Stockton are the delta lands of the San Joaquin River, which contribute in a large measure to the agricultural triumph of San Joaquin County. These lands are laced and interlaced with navigable streams. The delta area is the most fertile region of the world, and the famed valley of the Nile does not compare with these soils in production. Recently, there was achieved in the delta section the world's record in potato production, and the county now points with pride to a yield of 962½ bushels of potatoes grown on one acre.

Contributing to the joys of living in the Stockton section are the recreational opportunities which can be conveniently taken advantage of. Stockton is the portal to the great recreational regions of California. The city is located in the center of the vast amphitheatre formed by the Sierra Nevada Mountains, the Coast Range and the San Joaquin Valley. The scenic regions of mountain and forest and the beaches of the Pacific can be comfortably and quickly reached, and the citizens of the Stockton section know the recreational diversions and joys common to California's vacation land. Nearby is the Yosemite Valley, the nation's greatest national park. Lake Tahoe, at the Sierra's crest, is quickly and comfortably reached. And, but a short distance away, are the giant sequoias of the Calaveras Grove of Big Trees—the oldest of living things. Here may be viewed 1,490 monarch sequoias more than twenty feet in diameter.

And, there are the old gold trails which run from Stockton to the nearby Bret Harte country and are dotted with historic mining camps and "ghost cities." In that land of romance have been enacted some of the most dramatic events in the state's history, and the roaring life during the pioneer period has been made called to assemble at Union Hall November 19, had to be adjourned until the next day, because the hall was too dirty and no janitor could be found.

An India rubber tree growing in the front yard of General Redington's residence in Sacramento City was now fifteen feet high and was attracting much attention.

John H. Lick announced in San Francisco his intention to contest the will of his father, Pioneer James Lick, on the ground of insanity and undue influence on the part of the Pioneers and the other benefactors of the estate. He and his father became estranged because of the latter's belief that the son was instrumental in having a legislative act passed prohibiting the devising of estates to charitable purposes. The trustees of the Lick estate announced their determination to deny the legitimacy of the son, and the legal battle in the future promised to be replete with sensational charges.

The steamer for Hong Kong leaving San Francisco November 1 took $600,000 in silver dollars for China from Chinese merchants in this state.

A Chinaman named Ah Wah was married in San Francisco to a White woman, which was cause for great indignation.

A California periodical announced that a new industry, an ostrich farm, was about to be started in California South, where climatic and other conditions were ideal for its success.

Stage robbing was a growing industry. November 12 the stage south bound from Yreka, Siskiyou County, was stopped near Pit River by two men who took the express-box.

November 15 the stage from Downieville, Sierra County, to Marysville, Yuba County, was held up by two highwaymen on Oregon Hill. They shot a horse when a banker from Downieville, named Scammon, shot from inside the stage at one of the robbers with his revolver and received in return a charge of buckshot in his hand and arm that disabled him. The robbers took the express-box and stripped the passengers of their money and valuables.

WOMAN KNOCKS OUT THIEF.

November 15 the Sonora, Tuolumne County, stage was stopped by three masked men two miles from town. One of the robbers accidentally fired his gun and hit one of his companions. The driver took advantage of the confusion resulting, whipped up and got away.

November 16 the stage coming south, near Redding, Shasta County, was held up by three men and the express-box, containing $1,100 in coin, was taken.

November 16 the stage from Weaverville, Trinity County, was stopped by three men and the express-box, with a small amount of coin, was taken. Subsequently John Tony and two companions were arrested, charged with the crime.

Mrs. Allen, living between West Point and Railroad Flat in Calaveras County, went to the latter town on business and while absent her house was entered and a gold watch and several $20-pieces were taken. That night she dreamed of seeing a man commit the robbery and depart in the direction of West Point. In the morning she mounted her horse and, taking her revolver and shepherd dog, started in search of the man. She came upon the identical-looking man that she saw in her dream at an abandoned miner's cabin near the road. She demanded the return of her property, which he denied having. She then set her dog at him and while he was fending it she got a club and, approaching from the rear, gave him a blow on the head that knocked him down and out. She then made a search of his person and found her watch and money in the leg of his boot. She left him to recover his senses when he might.

buck jumped to its feet and made an attack upon him. It raised Kirke on its antlers and in the struggle that ensued Kirke managed to grasp hold of the antlers with his hands and throw the buck to the ground, when he had just strength enough left to cut the buck's throat.

G. W. Bruce and John Hannahan, hunting in Santa Cruz County, came suddenly upon a grizzly bear. As they were armed only with shotguns, they sought safety in flight. The bear pursued Bruce and soon overtook him. It reared on its hind legs, to strike with its forepaws, when Bruce fired a charge of bird shot into its face. This only served to infuriate the bear. It knocked the gun from Bruce's grasp, fastened its teeth into his right arm and began chewing. Bruce, fortunately, succeeded in giving it a stiff kick in the stomach, which caused it to let go and while Bruce ran one way the grizzly went the other. Hannahan had not stopped running from the time he first saw the bear until he reached camp.

Tommy Sloane, 15 years old, near Suscol, Napa County, came upon a yearling deer on a ranch while riding horseback and, pursuing it, finally lassooed and brought it to his home.

POLE CAT PUTS 'EM TO FLIGHT.

Santa Monica, Los Angeles County, was advertised as a sportsman's paradise. Deer, quail and jack rabbits abounded in the surrounding hills; ducks and geese fed in the nearby lagoons; snipe, curlew and plover waded on the beaches, while schools of mackerel and smelt swam about the wharf. Abe Steer was reputed to be the champion hunter. He bagged 102 snipe with eleven shots and had killed eleven geese with the firing of both barrels of his shotgun.

There was a notable decrease in the number of suicides. A young attorney in San Francisco gave as his reason for quitting life the presidential election muddle. He could not stand the strain of the conflicting reports and was going to the other world to find out who was elected.

A man in a Nevada County mining town appeared one afternoon on the street with a box under each arm and announced to some loiterers that he had captured a number of rats for the town dogs to slaughter for the entertainment of the boys. He began whistling for them and soon had a number of curs gathered, expectantly, about him, while the men about town gathered in a ring around him. He disposed of one box of rats in a satisfactory manner to both dogs and onlookers. Then he opened the second box and out came a pole cat. It immediately defended itself, with the weapon nature had given it, against the onslaught of the dogs and they fled in dismay as also did the ring of sports. A score or more of them did not retreat soon enough and they had to have their clothes disinfected. The practical joker, knowing what was coming, made his getaway first and did not stop until he reached a neighboring town.

There was but one light storm during November, giving .23 of an inch of rain and making less than 3 inches for the season to date. It was not enough to start plowing and the grass to growing.

John Conlin, a pioneer miner of Columbia, Tuolumne County, was caved on in his claim and killed. He left a wife and eleven children.

At Hayfork, Trinity County, November 26 the 2-year-old child of David Woodbury fell into a mining ditch and was drowned.

There was a decrease of the smallpox epidemic in San Francisco, but the fatal cases increased in ratio. It was believed that the cleaning up of Chinatown by the health board was having a beneficial effect.

A sloop named the "Jamestown" went ashore on November 20 at Point Bonita, Alameda County, and was wrecked. The crew, consisting of one man, was rescued dead drunk.

N. Vail, formerly pastor of a Presbyterian church in Humboldt County, fell down a flight of stairs in San Francisco, when intoxicated, and was killed.

November 12 three boys, named Thomas and Edward Kent and John Brackett, went in swimming in the vicinity of Harbor View, San Francisco Bay, and were drowned. The calamity was not witnessed by any one.

Mrs. Anna Baugh, November 20 in San Francisco, attempted to start a stove fire with coaloil. An explosion followed and she was fatally burned.

Mrs. Ross, wife of a ship captain whose vessel was at Oakland wharf, while going to it had to dodge a switch engine and in doing so fell off the wharf into the bay and was drowned.

Willie Cronin, 15 years old, at Brooklyn, Alameda County, was standing on a flat car which was struck by a switch engine. He was thrown headlong off the car upon the track, where a wheel went over and crushed his head.

Two brothers named Miles at Redding, Shasta County, November 26 were playing with a shotgun thought to be unloaded, but which was accidentally fired. The charge tore through the arm of the younger, 9 years old, and it had to be amputated.

At Antioch, Contra Costa County, Sunday, November 26, two young men returning from church in their buggies began a race along the road to their homes. One of the rigs upset and seriously injured its occupants.

Richard Collins, alias "Fighting Dick," was hung November 24 at Modesto, Stanislaus County, for the cold-blooded murder of a sheepherder, named Sheldon, a year before.

November 6 the town of Sucker Flat was partially destroyed by fire that caused a $50,000 loss.

A Los Angeles City boy, given the subject for a composition, "The Turtle," wrote as follows: "A turtle is not as frisky as a man but it can carry a red hot coal on its back longer without squealing."

SPLENDID NATIVE SON PASSES TO FINAL REWARD.

Stockton—Alfred J. Turner, long the faithful and efficient recording secretary of Stockton Parlor No. 7 N.S.G.W., died October 20 following an operation. He was a native of Forest Hill, Placer County, aged 67.

"Dad" Turner, as he was lovingly known to Native Sons throughout California, was a veteran of the Grand Parlor and had, it is believed, attended more sessions than any member of the Order. For years, at each recurring Grand Parlor, he was chairman of the credentials committee.

NATIVE SON PARLORS PROGRESSING.

Stockton Parlor No. 7 N.S.G.W. is giving a series of whist parties during the winter months for the benefit of the homeless children. With the firm hand of Ray Dorsey at the helm, continued success is assured.

A bowling team is being organized by Alden Carey and Fred Fernando. They will be glad to hear from any strictly Parlor team reasonably close to Stockton.

Committees from all the Parlors in the district of Grand Trustee I. H. Reuter had an enthusiastic meeting in Stockton October 23. Reuter reported that excellent progress is being made by the Parlors throughout the district.

to manufacturers in this region. To factories interested in a large water supply, industrial water can be obtained from subterranean sources at a minimum cost.

LIVING CONDITIONS.

The living conditions in San Francisco offer a great many educational opportunities and advantages. There are one hundred and fifteen public-schools, several libraries, both public and scientific in character. The Civic Center covers ten square blocks in the heart of the city where the handsome Public Library, the Auditorium, the City and State Administration Buildings confront one another.

There are thirty-four pubilc parks, the largest one, Golden Gate, being notably one of the finest in the world. It contains the Steinhart Aquarium, the deYoung Museum, the Japanese Tea Garden and many unusual attractions to the interested pleasure seeker. The Fleishhacker Playfield, recently dedicated, fronting on the Pacific Ocean, contains one of the largest outdoor swimming pools in the world. There are fourteen golf and country clubs, and the yachtsmen find an ideal setting in the San Francisco Bay and surrounding waters. There are many other inducements which contribute greatly to the life and joy of the San Francisco outdoors.

Contributing to the welfare and betterment of every individual who cares to share in the privilege of enjoying them, is the great community auditorium, seating twelve thousand people, the Palace of the Legion of Honor, overlooking the Golden Gate, which contains a beautiful display of art and a wonderful pipe organ open to the public to visit and enjoy. There are ten legitimate theatres and two hundred and seventy-four churches.

The cost of living comparison, based on United States Labor Department publications for the average wage earner's family in fourteen cities, portrays San Francisco as the lowest of any large city in the United States.

LABOR EFFICIENCY.

It is a matter of statistical fact that labor employed in San Francisco and the surrounding communities is more efficient than labor employed in the same class of work in sections of less favorable working conditions.

A shipbuilder states that it was possible to build a ship of practically the identical size of one built in the East on the Atlantic Coast at a less cost, in spite of the fact that material costs were higher. This is attributed to the class of labor available, and partly due to the fact that men can work all year round without climatic interferences.

A paint manufacturer remarks that under ordinary conditions they have been able to maintain an efficient, steady force. Working conditions appear to be satisfactory to their employees and the climatic conditions are sufficiently comfortable to enable them to do without the expense of heating.

A manufacturer of men's clothing states that their position is very favorable. Through efficiency they are proving that the manufacturers in the East have little or no advantage over them.

A manufacturer of glassware remarks the advantage which they have found is that in this climate it is possible to obtain three hundred and sixty-five full work days per year.

A chocolate manufacturer states that the climatic conditions in San Francisco are superior for their industry, owing to the ideal humidity conditions.

A national concern states that they have been manufacturing in this city for the past seventeen years and have found the labor obtainable always satisfactory.

The labor situation summarized for San Francisco reveals that while the wage scales as a whole are slightly above the other industrial cities, THE UNIT COST OF PRODUCTION IS LESS and is possible because of the favorable contributing factors that make up the unit cost.

The climate in San Francisco for a representative five-year period, based on United States Weather Bureau reports, is dependably uniform with a small range of temperature free from extremes, a uniform relative humidity and an abundance of sunshine. The average summer temperature is fifty-nine and five-tenths degrees and the average winter temperature is fifty two and four-tenths degrees with no freezing weather.

TRANSPORTATION.

Among the many reasons for San Francisco's phenomenal industrial growth stand out prominently the unexcelled distribution facilities. San Francisco is the population center of the Pacific Slope, which extends back to the Rocky Mountains and includes the eleven Western states. It is the railroad terminus for seven rail lines serving this section and is also the port of call for one hundred and thirteen steamship lines offering regular steamship service.

Thirty-five of these lines offer passenger service. Fifteen lines serve the intercoastal points. Eleven lines serve the Orient. Sixteen lines serve the Unitd Kingdom and continental Europe. Thirteen lines go to Mexico, Central America, Canal Zone and South America; one line to Africa; six lines to Australasia; nine lines coastwise; one line to Alaska; four to Hawaii; and two around the world. The remainder are private lines engaged in commerce solely for their own use.

The passenger and freight traffic handled through this port is second only to New York.

REGIONAL MARKET.

There are approximately 10,000,000 people within the market area of the eleven Western states tributary to the Pacific Coast. The manufacturer can reach, at a lower transportation cost, sixty-seven percent more of these people from San Francisco than he can from cities of the northwest Pacific Coast, and eighty-four percent more than from the cities of the southwest Pacific Coast.

Therefore, it is conclusive that in Metropolitan San Francisco, with its enormous resources and tremendous purchasing power, its strategic position as a manufacturing and distribution center with excellent distribution facilities, the manufacturers, exporters, importers, wholesalers and retailers have long considered this section as the natural hub for commerce on the Pacific Coast, evidenced by the large number of wholesalers, jobbers and manufacturers locating each year in San Francisco and the metropolitan area.

SUMMARY.

One looks to San Francisco and the bay region, with its broad and ramifying activities and healthy diversification of interests, to its position in the cultural and economic structure of world affairs, to help span the mighty breadths of the Pacific, with its littoral of one hundred and seven thousand miles connecting a world market of 900,000,000 people situated in the great countries of South America, Central America, Mexico, Australia, Hawaii, China, Australasia, Japan, Siberia and Alaska, where cultural and economic interests in trade and the advance of civilization should bring about mutual understanding with better trade opportunities among nations.

ORGANIZE FOR WORK.

In order to carry out the splendid ideas of Hilliard E. Welch, Grand President N.S.G.W., representatives from all the local Parlors met October 15 and organized by selecting the following temporary officers: Harry W. Gaetjen (Golden Gate 29), chairman, Grand Secretary John T. Regan (South San Francisco 157), secretary.

A committee on permanent organization was appointed, as follows: Harmon D. Skillin (Castro 232), James I. Foley (Twin Peaks 214), Jesse Miller (California 1), George Strohmeier (Golden Gate 29), George Schonfeld (Olympus 189).

One of the first activities of the joint committee will be to launch a campaign for new members, and a special endeavor will be made to get the assistance of the larger Parlors in building up the smaller ones. Much constructive work for the Order can be accomplished from a committee with the enthusiasm displayed at the initial meeting. Prospects are assuredly bright for the doing of big things in the future within the Order in San Francisco.

INTERESTED IN ATHLETICS.

Niantic Parlor No. 105 N.S.G.W. made a good showing during the recent sesquicentennial celebration, being represented in both parades. The drum corps in particular was the cause of much favorable comment along the line of march. The members certainly made a good appearance in their new uniforms of blue and white.

The Parlor is taking keen interest in the various athletic features being sponsored at the present time by the Native Sons of San Francisco. It already has entered a team in the baseball league, the first game of which was played October 18 at South Side Playgrounds, and in which game Niantic defeated Pacific Parlor No. 10 by a score of 11 to 3. The game was closer than the score would indicate, and with the exception of one inning, the fifth, was well worth witnessing.

Niantic congratulates the Order on its entry into organized sport and looks forward to the time when it will be represented in every line of athletic activity.

FOUR BROTHERS INITIATED.

October 7 was a big night for National Parlor No. 118 N.S.G.W. It was "Brennan night," so named in honor of John V. Brennan, one of the Parlor's oldest members, and the occasion of the initiation of his four sons, John V. Jr., Edward H., Eugene A. and William A. Brennan, aged 23, 26, 28 and 29, respectively.

Grand Second Vice-president James A. Wilson, Grand Treasurer John E. McDougald, Grand Trustee Dr. Frank I. Gonzalez and Grand Trustee Judge Emmet Seawell delivered stirring addresses, all complimenting Brennan on his loyalty to the Order. About a hundred members of National were in attendance.

HALLOWE'EN PARTY.

October 27, Olympus Parlor No. 189 N.S.G.W. and Fremont Parlor No. 59 N.D.G.W. held another joint social in the form of a Hallowe'en party. The good of the order committee of Olympus—Dan Sheehan (chairman), Louis Magini, George W. Schonfeld, Harvey Carte, Henry McGowan—had the ballroom decorated in characteristic style.

George W. Schonfeld, floor manager, introduced a number of novel games in addition to the old-gashion games, and also ducking for apples. A great many of the members, their wives and ladies wore Hallowe'en costumes, which added to the gayety of the evening.

Olympus has appointed a committee of fifty to help make a success of the Hilliard E. Welch membership drive, and hopes to be favorably mentioned the night of the big initiation.

"HIGH OLD TIME."

The Grizzly Bear Club will hold a get-together for Native Sons November 19, featuring its annual turkey event. It will be in charge of the entertainment committee, W. H. James (California 1) chairman, and the house committee, George Barry (Presidio 194) chairman, augmented by the appointment of Carl D. Prignitz (South San Francisco 157) and Al Lobree (Castro 232).

Lobree says: "We'll have a 'high old time,' even if we have to use the 'ninth' floor of Native Sons' Building." All Natives are invited to be on hand and enjoy a profitable evening.

BASKETBALL GAMES TO BEGIN.

The Native Sons' Basketball League of San Francisco will open its season November 1. All games will be played at the Park Athletic Club, Page street, near Stanyan.

The games for the opening night are: 7:30—Rincon vs. Guadalupe. 8:30—Castro vs. Precita. 9:30—Marshall vs Niantic.

November 6 the following meet: 7:30—Castro vs. Niantic. 8:30—Alcalde vs. Precita. 9:30—California vs. Twin Peaks.

THANKSGIVING WHIST.

The bathing beauty revue and contest presented recently by El Vespero Parlor No. 118 N.D.G.W. was a huge success and proved a source of constant amusement and delight to the large audience of members present. Later in the evening a sea-food supper was served.

The Parlor is taking advantage of the new Grand Parlor legislation admitting sixteen-year-

PLEASING DECORATIONS.

Grand President Pearl Lamb officially visited olden Gate Parlor No. 158 N.D.G.W. October . This being her first visit in San Francisco, e Parlor feels highly honored. A delicious repast was enjoyed. Too uch cannot be said in praise of the committee charge, for due to its efforts the evening was huge success.

ROYAL WELCOME PROMISED.

Castro Parlor No. 178 N.D.G.W. is making ans to entertain Grand President Pearl Lamb ovember 9. A banquet at a down-town hotel r the grand officers and officers and members the Parlor will precede the meeting. The mmittee of arrangements promises a royal elcome to all.

HALLOWE'EN REVEL.

James Lick Parlor No. 220 N.D.G.W. enter-ined at an old-fashioned Hallowe'en revel Oc-ber 20. A diversion of the evening was a mis-llaneous shower in honor of Mrs. Edmund Em-anuel Block, formerly Miss Edna Pahler, a ember. A reception was also tendered several w members.

Following the revel a midnight supper was served to more than 150. In charge of the oc-casion was the following committee, appointed by President Gertrude C. Smith: Laura Landers (chairwoman), Gussie Ormond, Ellen Bell, Mar-garet Kane, Julia Owen, Irma Grant, Stella Wil-lett, Etienne Schier, Elizabeth Richards, Kath-erine Stefanik, Josephine Silvethorn.

TRIBUTE TO WORTHY NATIVE DAUGHTER.

Mrs. Rebecca Kemp van Ee, affiliated with Alta Parlor No. 3 N.D.G.W., passed away Octo-ber 15, survived by a husband, Dr. F. Kemp van Ee. She was a native of Petaluma, Sonoma County, aged 64. Past Grand President Eliza D. Keith pays this tribute:

"And now she is gone, 'our Becky,' as all who knew her loved to call her in the sweet intimacy of the lodgeroom, social gathering or of simple friendship. Loyally she gave of her time, her talents, her utmost to our beloved Order.

"For years, ending only with her death, has Sister Kemp van Ee been organist of Alta Par-lor. For two terms she held the office of Grand Organist, was several times a delegate to the Grand Parlor, always making and holding many friends. She also was a district deputy grand president some years ago.

"By special request Alta Parlor held the beau-tiful funeral services of the Order over our late sister on Sunday evening, October 17. The fol-lowing morning were the final services, and our dear Sister Kemp van Ee passed from our ken as the joyous comrade, the faithful friend, into a loving and sacred memory."

SESQUICENTENNIAL.

Sran Francisco's sesquicentennial celebration, under the auspices of a citizens' committee head-ed by Lewis F. Byington, Past Grand President N.S.G.W., was a great success.

Following the military parade of October 9 a pageant, depicting Anza's difficulties in estab-lishing the Presidio of San Francisco in 1776, was in charge of George F. Barron (Precita 187 N.S.G.W.).

The parade of October 10, participated in by Native Sons and Native Daughters, moved past Mission Dolores to Mission Park, where literary exercises were held. Among the speakers was Judge John F. Davis, Past Grand President N.S.G.W., whose subject was "The Founding of San Francisco, Presidio and Mission," and who delivered a wonderful address replete with in-formation of an historic nature.

October 11 was children's day and thousands of schoolchildren gathered in the Civic Auditor-ium to participate in appropriate exercises. Su-pervisor J. Emmet Hayden (Mount Tamalpais 64 N.S.G.W.) was chairman of the day.

The final day of the celebration, October 12, was Columbus Day. The San Francisco Native Sons and Native Daughters turned out in large numbers to pay homage to their home-city on the occasion of the one hundred and fiftieth an-niversary of its founding. Their division, of which Harry W. Gaetjen (Golden Gate 29 N.S.G.W.) was the marshal, was conceded the most colorful in the entire parade.

BISMARCK BRUCK, N.S. PAST GRAND, DIES SUDDENLY IN SAN FRANCISCO.

Saint Helena (Napa County) — Bismarck Bruck, Past Grand President N.S.G.W. and for years actively identified with Saint Helena Par-lor No. 53, died suddenly in San Francisco Oc-tober 20 while on a visit to that city. He was aged 56, and is survived by a wife and a son, Dr. Edwin Bruck.

Deceased was prominent in the affairs of Napa County, where he was an extensive landowner. He had served the county as a supervisor, and also in the State Assembly. As a successful vine-yardist, he was known throughout the state. He was recognized as one of the stalwarts in the Order of Native Sons.

CALIFORNIA'S MINERAL INDUSTRIES.

Compilation of the final returns from the min-eral producers of California for 1925 by the sta-tistical division of the State Mining Bureau, un-der the direction of Lloyd L. Root, state min-eralogist, shows the total value for the year to have been $434,519,660, being an increase of $59,898,871 over the 1924 total of $374,620,789.

There were fifty-five different mineral sub-stances, exclusive of a segregation of the va-rious stones grouped under gems, and all of the fifty-eight counties of the state contributed to the list.

ARMISTICE DAY.

Sacramento—Governor Friend W. Richardson has, by proclamation, declared Thursday, No-vember 11, a legal holiday in California, "in commemoration of the armistice that ended the world war."

NATIVE DAUGHTER DANCE.

Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. initiated four candidates October 6, and listened to an address by George Rochester on reapportionment and the fire-equipment needs of the city. Much was accomplished at the sewing circle's meeting at the home of Gertrude Allen.

October 14 a delegation of fourteen Parlor members visited Long Beach Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. and enjoyed a delightful evening and delicious refreshments. October 27 a card party was well attended; seasonable refreshments were served.

Los Angeles' November program includes: 3rd, initiation; 10th, social night, featuring bridge; 24th, dance, Irene Eden, chairman. The dramatic club of the Parlor plans to present a short play at holiday time.

ENTERTAINMENT AND BAZAR.

The membership drive of Hollywood Parlor No. 196 N.S.G.W. is getting under way. Seven candidates were initiated during October "Watch Hollywood Grow!" is the slogan. At the October 18 meeting A. F. Palethorpe was presented, through Henry G. Bodkin for the Parlor, a silver cup for his first-born native son Grand Trustee John T. Newell congratulated the Parlor on its progress, and Harry Jorder reported progress in the organization of a baseball team.

November 15, Hollywood will feature an entertainment and bazar. The womenfolks are specially invited. A splendid program is being arranged by the following committee: H. G. Bodkin, L. G. Hallock, S. R. Bell, H. Jorder, O. Egnew, E. E. Ramsauer, F. G. Riley, J. W. Topham.

SPANISH FIESTA.

Everything is in readiness for the fiesta to be held by Vaquero Parlor No. 262 N.S.G.W. November 13 in celebration of its second institution anniversary. The spacious halls of the I.O.O.F. Temple, where the Parlor now meets, 2705 North Broadway, will be transformed into a Spanish hacienda for the occasion. The streets in the neighborhood will be decorated and the North Broadway Merchants' Association will assist in making the affair a huge success.

One of the entertainment features will be the appearance of a troupe of dancers, under the direction of Captain Eugene Plummer, who will be seen in novel dances of the period ante-dating California's acquirement by the United States. Everything, even unto the refreshments, will be typical of the Spanish days and those attending are requested to appear in appropriate costumes.

October 26, at the request of Vaquero, Past Grand President William I. Traeger, candidate for re-election as sheriff of Los Angeles County, addressed the North Broadway Merchants' Association.

STATE'S "WILDERNESS AREAS" RESERVED FOR RECREATION.

Pursuant to the new policy of the United States Forest Service to conserve and develop national forest lands of outstanding recreational value for the use and enjoyment of the general public, Secretary of Agriculture W. M. Jardine has designated three large tracts of federal land in California to be known as the Mount Shasta, San Gorgonio Range, and Laguna Mountains recreation areas.

The Mount Shasta area covers 29,620 acres in the Shasta National Forest and includes Mount Shasta (14,380 feet), "the Queen of the Siskiyous" and the most beautiful snow-capped peak in the state.

The San Gorgonio Range area embraces 11,800 acres of land within the San Bernardino National Forest, and takes in all the high country above 7,500 feet elevation surrounding San Bernardino Mountain (10,630 feet), East San Bernardino Peak (10,666 feet) and San Gorgonio Peak (11,485 feet), the highest mountain in California South.

The Laguna Mountains area is located in the Cleveland National Forest, fifty miles east of San Diego, and includes 11,495 acres of pineclad mountain land overlooking the Colorado Desert. All of these regions, forest officers state, are exceedingly popular summer playgrounds visited by many thousands of vacationists each year.

In designating these recreation areas, Secretary Jardine states that "all national forest lands therein shall be held for the use and the enjoyment of the general public for recreation purposes, coordinately with the purposes for which the national forests were established. A proper and orderly utilization of timber, forage, water power and other economic resources shall be allowed within the area, but such utilization shall not be permitted to impair the value of the area as a site for public camp grounds, municipal or health camps, sanitaria, club houses, hotels, summer homes, or public utilities requisite for the comfort and convenience of the people using the area for recreation purposes."

REGISTRATION FOR ELECTION SHATTERS ALL STATE RECORDS.

Sacramento—Registration in California for the November 2 election is a record-breaker—1,912,862—and exceeds by more than 58,000 the August primary registration.

Los Angeles County furnishes more than one-third of the total number of registered voters, 688,707. San Francisco has 222,797 and Alameda County 200,081.

San Diego County is credited with the next largest number, 69,271, then come, in order: Fresno County 50,035, Santa Clara 48,967, Sacramento 48,371, Orange 41,726, San Bernardino 39,685, Kern 31,177, San Joaquin 31,059.

WOODS MISNAMED "MAHOGANY."

The name "Philippine mahogany" is being applied to certain woods that do not belong to the mahogany family. Among the Philippine woods to which the name is being applied are tanguile and lauaan.

This loose use of standard terms is not approved by the Forest Service of the Federal Department of Agriculture. It has been quoted as indorsing the name "Philippine mahogany," but, on the contrary, the chief forester says that it is desirable to use standard names that do not deceive or mislead the public.

The name "mahogany," he says, should be confined to the true mahoganies which belong to the botanical genus Swietenia.

"If it is morally justifiable, in order to satisfy one desire, to pay for the commission of one offense against the supreme law of the country, why is it not morally justifiable to commit another offense to satisfy another desire?

"There can be no basis for society on the theory that a person may claim the protection of the laws, and yet refuse obedience to the laws.

"If, for a moment, we concede that the man who takes such an attitude on any question is, can be, a law-abiding citizen, do we not thereby concede he may take the same attitude on any other question, on all questions, and still be a law-abiding citizen?

"The sanctity of duly constituted tribunals must be maintained. Undivided allegiance to public authority must be required. With a citizenship which voluntarily establishes and defends these, the cause of America is secure. Without that, all else is of little avail.

"Always remember, that the sole guarantee of liberty is obedience to law under the forms of ordered government."

Complaint was made at a recent meeting of the Santa Barbara Real Estate Board, that numbers of Japs are securing leases to garden land in that district and are farming it. The leases, it appears, are taken in the names of American citizens and transferred to the Japs.

This condition exists in every part of California where the Japs desire to colonize. Despite the California Alien Land Law, more Japs are today in illegal possession of land in this state than ever before, and their "peaceful invasion" will continue uninterruptedly until the people of the several counties afflicted with the yellow menace put into office district attorneys who will impartially enforce the law.

Speaking before the National Manufacturers' Association in New York, Commissioner General of Immigration Hull said: "Some have estimated the number of aliens unlawfully in this country as high as 3,000,000." And he then advocated that "a law should be enacted that would enable immigration officials to legalize the presence in our midst of the large group of aliens . . . with a view to their ultimate naturalization as citizens of the United States."

Ye gods! And yet, we wonder why defiance of law is so general. The commissioner general would hand out, to millions of aliens already here and millions more waiting to come, for successful evasion of the immigration law, a most-prized reward, United States citizenship. The passage of such a law would be equivalent to extending a world-wide invitation to aliens to come in, if they can, and a great percentage of them can, if they have sufficient influence and money at their disposal.

In an address at Philadelphia, General John J. Pershing well said: "There can be no earthly justification for saving a few million dollars a year on the army during peace, if, as a consequence, we must spend many billions in an emergency in an attempt to make up deficiencies."

The recent world-war created, at the expense of The People, a horde of millionaires in this country from among the dollar-a-year and other swivel-chair patriots. What more "justification" could the general, or any other loyal American, ask? If the country prepares, in time of peace, there would be little excuse, in time of war, for legalizing cost-plus and other graft schemes.

In Los Angeles, a White woman, an American citizen, has applied to the Superior Court for permission to adopt a Jap child, born in Japan of Jap parents.

Probably this is a test case in a plan to have ineligible-to-citizenship Japs become full-fledged American citizens through adoption by American citizens. If the adoption is countenanced, the Japs will have won the greatest victory in their campaign to eventually claim California and the Pacific Coast for their own.

If a registered voter—and you should be, if a citizen of the United States,—do not fail to cast your ballot at the November 2 election.

Most officials are put into office, and most legislation is "put over," by the minority, due to the disinterestedness or laziness of the majority. The minority fulfill their duty as citizens on election-day, while the majority fail to do theirs and then howl about the quality of both officials and legislation and about the tax-burden.

If we are to have, in reality, a government of The People, for The People, by The People, the majority must rule, through the ballot-box.

AUTO-PAS SAFETY LIGHT

AUTO-PAS light on your machine will make the "other fellow" think of you and see you at night.

It is a safety light for automobiles, attached to the left running board opposite the driver's seat to eliminate front, rear and side collisions and side-swiping. Just as important protection as headlights and tail lights. Meets a want never cared for heretofore in successful manner—3 lights in one.

It reflects a white light upward, a green light forward and a red light toward the rear. The white light shows the hand signal plainly for a great distance; heretofore it has been difficult to see the hand at night—it is generally conceded the hand signal is the most practical and safe signal to use. The passing driver realizes that by clearing the green or red lights he takes little chance of running off the highway and passes in safety.

At intersections, the driver approaching from the left sees both green and red lights, indicating your right of way.

¶ The Order of the Native Sons of the Golden West is founded upon the same broad patriotic principles that have been the inspiration of similar organizations in older States of the Union. Each State has its history. Into that history is interwoven a narrative of deeds performed by a mighty race of men who frontiered and pioneered the pathway for the countless thousands to follow. They transplanted the spirit, the life, the institutions of the Colonists, and wherever a State was erected there were established the ideals of the Fathers of the Republic.

¶ Therefore, the membership of our Order is limited to those born within the State, because we believe that pride of nativity is inherent in the breast of every person and moves that person to a consecrated loyalty to his native land. We do not maintain that birthplace alone confers any special privilege; rather do we teach that this casts upon the citizen an increased obligation to become interested in all material matters affecting its development and progress. National strength and national greatness have been commensurate with State strength and State greatness.

¶ California was the thirty-first State to be admitted into the Union. She contributed a citizenship and a golden treasure at an opportune time in the affairs of the nation. The many events connected with its settlement and organization as a State played a prominent part in shaping the destiny of the American people, and geographically she occupies a strategic position in the world-wide problems of the present and the future.

¶ We have taken an active interest in the conservation of our natural resources; the preservation of our scenic wonders and making them accessible to all; the retention of the State and its soil for the White race; all legislation, Federal and State, affecting the State and its interests.

¶ In our Fellowship endowment at the University of California we have expended over fifty thousand dollars in the preparation and preservation of the history of California and the Pacific Coast, and it has become the incentive for the Student Body of that institution and of the high-schools throughout the State to learn and teach that history. In this work we have laid the foundation for a text-book to be used in the public schools.

¶ We visit places where important events transpired and we have identified and marked the same with tablet and monument. Responding to the patriotic objects of our Order, we observe each recurring anniversary day of the Admission of California into the Union by public ceremonies in the various cities of the State. We actively participate in public dedicatory ceremonies of grammar-school and high-school buildings, on which occasions the students and citizens are addressed by officials of our Order on patriotic subjects.

¶ We maintain a "Homeless Children" Bureau and have placed in the childless homes over twenty-six hundred homeless boys and girls, insuring their development into a splendid citizenship amid elevating environments. In this activity we have expended over two hundred thousand dollars, contributed generously and voluntarily by the membership of the Order.

¶ It thus appears that the work of our organization appeals to every citizen of the State, irrespective of place of birth. It matters not where we were born in this land of ours; we are all citizens of a common country, we pledge our allegiance to one flag, and we are best evidencing our love of country and our loyalty to that flag by deservedly wearing the badge of public service wherever we exist and have our home.

¶ We welcome to our Membership the sons of California, and we promise nothing in return, save that compensation which comes to the citizen who conscientiously endeavors to perform his part in the cause of a greater and better civilization.

BIG TASK FOR LITTLE FELLOWS

IVIDE THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA! That's the big task a small Los Angeles organization with the title, previous to the November 2 election, the "All Parties Reapportionment Committee," has assigned unto itself. And, bring about state division, it has, since the ection, changed its operating-title to the "All arties State Separation Committee." Who the ll Parties" are that compose this committee unknown, but not, of a certainty, any great mber of people, for a vast majority of the sidents of Los Angeles are just as much opsed to a division of the state as are those of n Francisco, Alameda, Sacramento, Santa ara, San Joaquin, San Bernardino, Santa Barra, San Diego, Fresno, Shasta, Humboldt, Amlor and all the other counties.

In every community a few state-divisionists n be found today, but that condition has exted since California was admitted into the ederal Union, and it will continue to exist. ne great bulk of the people of the state, howver, never have been, and never will be, in vor of division. Ever since its admission to atehood, there have been periodical attempts divide California into two states. In each nd every instance, political jealousy was the rompter. The attempts have originated both orth and south of Tehachapi, but all have died horning. Past history will repeat itself, insor as the division movement of the present is ncerned.

In the files of The Grizzly Bear is a complete record of the several state-division attempts. In those files, too, can be found, in articles from the pens of prominent Californians, numerous good reasons why California should not be divided. No one, except those who have hoped, and do now hope, to profit politically thereby, has ever advanced a sound and sufficient reason for cutting this great state in two—for the very simple reason that no such reason has ever existed, and does not now exist.

But, back to the "All Parties" separationists: Their "reason" for wanting California divided, came with the defeat of state proposition No. 20 at the recent election. Because The People did not approve of their reapportionment scheme but adopted that provided for in state proposition No. 28, they desire to wreck California via the division-course. Granted that all voters who expressed at the polls a preference for No. 20 are now united for state division, they could not, being in the minority, bring it about. While official totals are not available at this writing, information in possession of The Grizzly Bear is to the effect that nearly every county in the state returned a majority for No. 28 in preference to No. 20.

The election result on No. 28 did not, as the "All Parties" separationists would have the people south of Tehachapi believe, indicate "discrimination against the south by the north." Imperial, San Diego, San Bernardino, Riverside, Orange, Ventura and Santa Barbara are southern counties, and each gave a majority for No. 28, as did several of the communities of Los Angeles County. So, if a majority vote favorable to No. 28 is to be construed as evidence of "discrimination against the south," then the south must be charged with discriminating against itself, for a majority of the southern counties lined up with northern counties in "putting over" No. 28.

The [illegible] by the "All Parties" [illegible] against California [illegible] in the state [illegible] same force as they [illegible] They do [illegible] the majority [illegible] "game" [illegible] those it is to [illegible] citizens to [illegible] could bring about [illegible] approving of the [illegible] "pet" proposition [illegible] the decision of the [illegible] themselves from the [illegible] sible dividing the state of California.

The North Carolina department of the American Legion complains that the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America is [illegible] pacifist speakers, and that its propaganda is [illegible] with "red."

Not only are these charges true, but the Federal Council is also using every means within its power—and they are manifold—to have the Federal Congress repeal the provisions of the Federal Immigration Law excluding from this country aliens ineligible to citizenship, which includes Japs.

From start to finish, the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America is pro-Jap and it would sacrifice any interest of the United States to please the mikado-worshiping Japs. Instead of devoting its untold wealth and unlimited propaganda resources to spreading the Gospel of Jesus Christ in America, it devotes them to promoting the interest of Japan. It should rightfully be designated the Federal Council of American Churches for Making the United States a Dependency of Japan.

January 1, 1879, the stock of money in the United States aggregated $1,007,084,483, and November 1, 1926, it was $8,438,136,239. The estimated population January 1, 1879, was 48,231,000, and November 1, 1926, it was 115,996,000.

These figures are from the Federal Department of the Treasury's recent report, and disclose the fact that, in the period referred to, population increased less than three-fold, whereas the wealth increased more than eight-fold.

THE FOUNDING OF SAN FRANCISCO, PRESIDIO AND MISSION

Judge John F. Davis

San Francisco, during October, as related in The Grizzly Bear for November, celebrated the sesqui-centennial of its establishment with parades, exercises, etc. Sunday, October 10, at Mission Park, Judge John F. Davis, Past Grand President of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West and a student of California's early history, delivered the accompanying address, in which are set forth the history-facts, in proper sequence, pertaining to the founding of San Francisco, Presidio and Mission.—Editor.

MR. CHAIRMAN, YOUR EMINENCE, your Grace, your Honor and you men and women of San Francisco: In the same year in which Philadelphia celebrates the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence, San Francisco celebrates the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of its birth. The early history of this western seaboard is of a relative antiquity not always adequately apprehended by the man in the street. Even a statement of the dates of important events does not always suffice to make him realize it.

"A hundred years before John Smith saw the spot on which was planted Jamestown," says H. H. Bancroft, "thousands from Spain had crossed the high seas, achieving mighty conquests, seizing large portions of the two Americas, and placing under tribute their peoples." Balboa discovered the Pacific Ocean two hundred and seventy-six years before the French Revolution began, two hundred and eighty-eight years before the battle of Bunker Hill. Cabrillo sailed into what were finally called San Diego Harbor and Monterey Bay twenty-two years before William Shakespeare was born. Fathers Palou and Cambon, in a rude arbor or assistencia, a few yards from where we now stand, near the spot where the Mission was built, celebrated Mass five days before the Declaration of Independence was signed. Even to the friends who speak of the decade of 1620 we could, if we were ungracious enough to do so, point out that Francis Drake beached his ship in the vicinity of

JUDGE JOHN F. DAVIS,
Past Grand President N.S.G.W.

Point Reyes and attempted to name the Faralones Saint James Islands and to claim the country for England as "Nova Albion"—the first New England on this continent—June 17,1579, forty-one years before the "Mayflower" reached Plymouth Rock, and—I hardly have the heart to say it in this presence—forty-seven years before the Dutch governor, old Peter Minuit, bought from the Indians a dear "little old island," afterwards called Manhattan, for the equivalent of twenty-four dollars!

The navigators of Spain never discovered San Francisco Bay. Nor did the necessities of Spain's ocean commerce, great as they were, ever lead to the discovery of the Bay of San Francisco. The Philippine Islands, it will be remembered, had been discovered by Magellan in 1521, and by 1565 Spain had established colonies there. The trade with the Indies, which had been the motive of Columbus' original voyage of discovery, had grown apace and had begun to make a sort of clearing house of the Philippines, and had become her most profitable trade in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. Vessels on their return trip ordinarily sailed by the northern circle, which brought them in first sight of land on the California coast in the neighborhood of Cape Mendocino, when they turned south for the Harbor of Acapulo. The run was too long for sailing ships, however, and a harbor of refuge, for shelter and repair, on this "stern and rockbound coast," was greatly desired, preferably not too far from the first land-fall on the return home. The supreme motive was to find a harbor, and it is one of the supreme ironies of history that for nearly two hundred years navigators in search of it passed and repassed in front of one of the finest harbors in the world and never discovered it.

In fact, the Spanish government in 1585 gave direct orders to Captain Gali for a survey of the coast of California south of Cape Mendocino, on his return trip, and a beginning was made, and the survey resumed ten years later by Cermeno, on his return trip, and continued to Point Reyes, the harbor in the lee of which he named and mapped the Port of San Francisco. Here, within thirty miles of San Francisco Bay, when he lost his ship, his pilot and some of his crew escaping in an open boat. In 1596, Sebastian Vizcaino was commissioned by the viceroy, the Count of Monterey, to make the attempt from the south. He sailed up the coast from Acapulco, and his first trip, which was up the Gulf of California, was a failure. In 1602 he again sailed up from Acapulco, with three ships and a launch, with special instructions to survey the coast north from Cape St. Lucas to Cape Mendocino. December 28, 1602, he sailed into Monterey Bay. Although this bay is but an open roadstead, he treated it as the long-sought harbor of refuge, and so reported to his king. Sending back the sick and helpless on one of his ships, he pushed north with the remainder in search of the chests of silk from Cermeno's ship, claimed to have been left on the shore of the harbor in the lee of Point Reyes, and, although he made that harbor, he did not discover what is now known as the Bay of San Francisco. That discovery was not destined to be made for one hundred and sixty-seven years afterwards, and then by accident, from the land, and not from the sea.

When we remember Cabrillo, Ferrelo, Drake, Gali, Cermeno, Vizcaino and the others that passed and repassed the Gate without seeing it, we are tempted to ask ourselves: Was the curtain of fog always lowered as a screen before a vessel passed? Or was the Gate always just below the horizon? Marvelous it is that so many of these landed near Point Reyes and discovered nothing of it. More marvelous, that no member of Drake's crew, in all the thirty-six days stay, ever climbed to an eminence that commanded a view. More marvelous still, that the pilot and crew of Cermeno, escaping in an open boat, which would naturally be supposed to have kept comparatively close to the shore, discovered nothing. Most marvelous of all, that a veteran like Vizcaino, on a voyage of survey with Cermeno's old pilot on his ship, passed and repassed on the trip from Monterey to Point Reyes and return and discovered nothing. Settled it is, as a fact of history, however, that the persistent governmental search made in aid of Spain's commercial ventures in the Orient did not discover the bay. It was a very different motive that led to that discovery.

For one hundred and sixty years after the voyage of Vizcaino, while the commerce with the Philippines steadily continued, and while the organized activities of Spain found occupation at home, no official measures were taken for the exploration, colonization or civilization of California.

In the meantime, in the East, the far-flung colonization schemes of England had occupied the Atlantic coast; the rising power of France had reached the Mississippi, and in the North Bering had carried the Russian eagles across the strait. The more immediate danger appeared on the northern horizon, and Spain at length aroused herself to understand that if the California were to be retained they must be occupied, settled and civilized. As a result of the wisdom of her councillors came the historic expedition of Jose Galvez to New Spain—Galvez, the guiding hand back of the scheme of mission and presidio and pueblo, that has shed over the history of California a perfect halo of Spanish glory—Galvez, one name California should never forget because, without him, or without some one in his place, or without the continental advice that created his mission, there might have been no Anza or Moraga, no Portola or Junipero Serra. Incident to the drive for occupation, settlement and civilization, even here was soon again developed the supreme practical necessity of finding a harbor.

Galvez arrived at the camp at Santa Ana, near La Paz, Lower California, July 6, 1768, as inspector-general, and immediately sent word to Father Junipero Serra, who was then at Loreto, to join him. Serra immediately set out on foot to answer the summons, a distance of nearly two hundred and fifty miles, over a wild, rough and dangerous country. Here the plan for the military, civil and religious conquest of Upper California was conceived and worked out. Galvez was not himself to go, but was to fit out the expedition. With Vizcaino's old maps before them, Father Junipero selected the sites where the first three missions were to be erected: the first at San Diego, the second at Monterey, and a third in between, at San Buenaventura. After the sites had been selected, Galvez approved them and then proceeded to assign the names. Here was where the loyalty of the Francsicans flared up.

"Don Jose," protested Father Junipero, "you have named a mission for San Diego de Alcala, another in honor of San Carlos at Monterey, and a third for San Buenaventura. But is there to be no mission in honor of our Father Saint Francis?" "If Saint Francis desires a mission," answered Galvez, with a smile, "let him show us the harbor." Here again arose that eternal question of a search for a harbor.

No undue time was lost in locating and establishing here these three missions. Under Captain Portola two expeditions by land and two by sea eventually reached San Diego Bay in 1769. After the founding of the mission there, the next objective was to find Monterey Bay, as described by Vizcaino, and establish the mission there. It was for this purpose that the famous expedition of Captain Portola up the coast began. After more than two months of a toilsome march, the expedition, on October 1st, had caught a glimpse of Monterey Bay, but failing to recognize it from the descriptions and maps in hand, they pressed forward further north in search of it until, on October 31st, from heights in view of the Pacific Ocean, looking toward the north, they recog

CHRISTMASTIDE

Esther Crone

(Written Especially for The Grizzly Bear.)

As Christmastide
In California is drawing near,
It brings the same old Christmas cheer
That comes where frost and snow abound
And cover o'er the frozen ground.
Here verdure dresses plains and hills,
The call of song-bird sweetly fills
The air, and flowers their fragrance fling,
Savoring of the breath of spring.
No time so dear in all this country wide
As Christmastide!

At Christmastide
All nature for the season has been clad
In splendor—we could nothing add.
The palms wave branches hailing the day,
And pepper trees their graceful tendrils sway
With rubies clustered in the emerald green,
Enhancing home and roadside scene.
The roses nod and blush in beauty, too,
While sky and ocean blend in color blue.
What more indeed could mortal ask beside
At Christmastide?

At Christmastide
A peace steals in the hearts of all;
A new joy comes to both great and small;
A kindlier feeling distills from above;
Care, strife and tumult give place to love.
Our thoughts turn back to that distant night
When a star shone forth in glory bright,
And angels sang the song of "Peace on earth,"
Telling the world of a Savior's birth.
May this same song with us still abide
At Christmastide!

SAN FRANCISCO

THE BIG CITY  THAT KNOWS HOW

nized Point Reyes and the bay in the lee of it, which had been named the Port of San Francisco by Cermeno. The following day (All Saints' Day), November 1, 1769, Sergeant Ortega, with a detail, left under orders from Portola to survey that bay and bring back a report of it. Within three days, Ortega, pressing forward, came for the first time in full view of the large "arm of the sea," which afterwards became known as the Gate, which he was unable to cross and from an eminence beheld the great bay extending inland beyond it. November 1st was the day, and Ortega was the man.

The following day (All Souls' Day), November 2d, some soldiers hunting on leave from the camp ascended the hills and also saw the vast bay extending to the eastward and, returning to camp, reported in dramatic fashion what they had seen. On November 3rd Ortega's detail returned to camp and made official report of the discovery that had been made by Ortega on November 1st. Portola, himself, intent on following his orders to find the Bay of Monterey, in furtherance of his orders to find the mission at that point, did not seem to grasp the epochal significance of the discovery, and did not himself view the newly-discovered bay until on his return southward, still seeking to find Monterey Bay, he viewed it from the hills. And, again failing to recognize the Bay of Monterey on his return southward, he pressed on to San Diego, and there made the report which electrified Father Serra, who not only was able from the descriptions to identify the landmarks of the Bay of Monterey, which Portola had failed to recognize, but was thrown into an ecstasy by the report of Ortega's discovery, because Saint Francis had now shown the bay which Galvez had made a condition of the founding of a mission to his patron, and he lost no time in demanding fulfilment of that promise from Galvez' successor, Bucareli, the viceroy of New Spain.

Not until two other expeditions had been made to check up Portola's report—one in 1772 and the other in 1774—was the final plan put in force. So carefully did the Spanish military authorities proceed, that not until 1774 did the impatient Serra, then at Monterey, receive from Bucareli the assurance of the decision of the council to establish a fort, garrison and settlement and found a mission at the new Port of San Francisco, and that Lieutenant-Colonel Juan Bautista de Anza would start overland from the Presidio of Tubac, in Sonora, New Spain, to Monterey, with colonists for the purpose of effecting the settlement. This announcement was brought to him by Captain Juan Manuel Ayala in the packet boat "San Carlos," and Ayala then pressed forward under a commission from Bucareli, to enter the bay and make a survey of it. Thus it was that on August 5, 1775, the "San Carlos" sailed through the estero, or gate, into the great bay which afterwards became known as the Bay of San Francisco, the first ship to enter it, and for thirty days thereafter was engaged in a complete scientific survey of the bay and its tributaries.

Not until September 29, 1775, did the great expedition commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel Juan Bautista de Anza, who was accompanied by Lieutenant Jose Joaquin Moraga and Father Pedro Font, leave with its army of troops and colonists the Presidio of San Miguel, in the State of Sonora. In addition to these three, it consisted of a purveyor, ten veteran soldiers as guards, twenty military recruits for Monterey, the wives, children and other persons pertaining to the twenty recruits to the number of 106 persons, twenty muleteers in charge of the pack-train, and four colonist families; in all, therefore, 177 persons. The pack-train consisted of 120 mules, bearing supplies, ammunition, etc., twenty mules bearing the baggage of the commander and his officers, and 450 horses carrying the soldiers, colonists, etc.; in all, therefore, 590 animals. Later on about 350 head of cattle were added for subsistence, and for breeding purposes in the new colonies. That expedition was one of the most heroic in the history of the Pacific Coast, suffering privations and performing exploits of endurance exceeding anything recorded by Xenophon in his account of the "March of the Ten Thousand to the Sea." That march was, in all truth, the Anabasis of California. Not until March 10, 1776, did it arrive at Monterey, where it was compelled to halt because of the hostility of Captain Rivera to Father Serra, but Anza, taking with him Lieutenant Moraga and Padre Font and a necessary detail of soldiers, twenty souls in all, on the 22d pressed on from Monterey to the work in hand.

Some wit has said that history is the consensus of posterity as to what took place. Fortunate are we, through the existence of complete diaries, to know every step taken each day in the founding both of the Presidio and the Mission of San Francisco. Nothing connected with the founding of either of them has been left to mere tradition. The relative perspective of the chief actors in this wonderful world-drama has been too well recorded and has too long stood out in bold relief to be trifled with now. The flaming zeal of the suddenly learned in behalf of lately-made acquaintanceships need have nothing to fear, however. Thank heaven, there's glory enough to go around.

March 28, 1776, Anza chose on the white cliff, or cantil blanco, the site for Fort Point, and on the next day, March 29, 1776, Anza chose the spot for the mission, near where the body of water then existing was called by him, from the calendar, Laguna de los Dolores.

In the diary of Father Font of March 28, 1776, is this authentic entry:

> "The Comandante decided to fix the holy cross which I blessed after Mass, on the supreme end of the steep rock at the exterior point of the mouth of the Port, and at eight o'clock he and I went there with four soldiers and the cross was fixed at a considerable height, to be seen from the entire entrance of the Port and for some distance. At its foot under some rocks, the Comandante left a report of his coming and a plan of the Port."

Then follows in the diary the wonderful prophecy as to the future of this metropolis made by the Franciscan padre. He first describes the view, so well known to every San Franciscan:

> "On departing we ascended a steep hill to a very green and flowery tableland, abounding in wild violets and sloping toward the Port, from which the view is most delightful, for from there one observes a good part of the bay and its islands as far as the other side, and one has a view of the ocean as far as the Farallones."

He then proceeds:

> "I do believe that if this site could be well populated, as in Europe, there would be nothing finer in the world, as it is in every way suited for a most beautiful city, one of equal advantages by land or sea, with that Port so remarkable and capacious wherein could be built shipyards, quays and whatever might be desired."

And here may be noted one slender incident that shows that "there is a Divinity that shapes our ends, rough hew them how we will." Simply because it happened that Anza chose the spot for the mission on the 29th of March, 1776, he named the lagoon then at its site Laguna de los Dolores, the Laguna of the Friday of Sorrows, taking the name from the calendar of that day, the Friday before Palm Sunday, in that year. Here was a mission whose official name was San Francisco de Asis (Spanish), the Mission of Saint Francis of Assisi, and yet, by the mere circumstances of the naming of the locality on an accidental date, poor Saint Francis is today almost in danger of losing the name of his own mission altogether, for, colloquially, it has almost come to be generally called the Mission Dolores. Nor, for that matter, has any great cathedral been named after him on this Franciscan shore. Being a good Franciscan, however, he would not have had either of these things otherwise, because to be a good Franciscan is to be poor and to own nothing. But, for all that, his name has been transferred from the little harbor under the lee of Point Reyes to the greatest harbor in the world; and, instead of being given to a site on the northern shore, his name has been given to the city "that sits upon her seven hills and from her throne of beauty" has become the warder of the continent on our western coast. And so, in fulfilment of the dream of Junipero Serra, in spite of the Franciscan rule of poverty, in fulfilment of the challenge that if Saint Francis was to have a mission named after him he must show them the harbor, even if they shall succeed in taking from him the name of his mission, in all justice nothing shall ever take from him the name of the great metropolis or of the glorious bay.

There now remained the physical work of the building of the presidio and the mission. Anza returned to Monterey April 8, 1776, and turned over the command of the colony to Moraga, April 13th, and on the following day set out for Sonora, meeting on the way his superior, Rivera, who sent to Moraga at Monterey instructions to proceed with the establishment of the presidio on the site chosen by Anza, but to defer the founding of the mission. Lieutenant Moraga, accompanied by Fathers Francisco Palou and Benito Cambon, at once proceeded with the colonists to San Francisco Bay, built the presidio on the site selected by Anza and, in accordance with the approved plans, and finally, on September 17, 1776, on the Feast of the Stigmata of Saint Francis of Assisi, the founding of the presidio was dedicated with a Mass, a Te Deum, the ringing of bells and salvos of cannon, pistols and muskets, to which the transport "San Carlos" in the harbor responded with guns. The diary of Father Palou quietly adds:

"When this function was concluded the commander of the Presidio assembled all the people and displayed all the liberality which the occasion permitted."

Moraga, regardless of the instructions of Rivera, had gone ahead with the construction of the first mission building of Saint Francis of Assisi, and its formal dedication had been planned for October 4th, the Feast of Saint Francis, according to the calendar. It had been formally blessed on the day before, according to custom, but, as Moraga was at that time away on an expedition across the bay, and unable to return upon the following day, the formal founding or opening of the mission was postponed and did not actually take place until October 8, 1776. And it was not until nearly a year afterward, when he quietly slipped into the mission to celebrate the anniversary of his patron, that Junipero Serra had the opportunity of visiting the mission and viewing the bay and seeing at last the fulfilment of his life's dream.

On a day like this it is eminently fit that, in contemplating the founding of this great city, we take stock not only of the material advantages, but also of the spiritual heritage, bequeathed us by its founders. As Helen Hunt Jackson has said:

"It is not in our power to confer honor or bring dishonor on the illustrious dead. We ourselves alone are dishonored when we fail in reverence to them."

While all praise should be accorded to the Spanish authorities for their work in the colonization of these shores, and while through their co-operation with the Franciscan Order they insured the certainty that that colonization would be a beneficient one to the people they found here when they came, still their main object was to increase the patrimony and to extend the prestige of the crown. It was a union of physical and spiritual conquest, soldiers under a military governor co-operating to this end with missionaries and mission establishments. In the end the zeal of the missionary far outran the liberality of the government, for, while but four presidios were established (Monterey, San Francisco, San Diego and Santa Barbara) and but three pueblos were founded (San Jose, Los Angeles and Branciforte, now Santa Cruz,), there were founded twenty-one missions, whose names make a litany from San Diego to Sonoma.

What will forever stand out on the skyline of this period of California's history is not simply the story of its presidios, with their incidents of the life of military barracks and the occasional skirmish between wilful soldier and watchful padre, nor the story of the pueblos with their combination between a kind of homestead law and a sort of city charter, but the attempt to civilize, to uplift humanity—the battle under the standard of the Cross to save the souls of men—by the missions of the Franciscan padres. As stated by Professor Royce of Harvard, "Their motive was as single as it was worthy of reverence." Speaking of their labors upon another occasion, I said:

> "They cannot be held responsible if they were unable in a single generation to eradicate in the Indian the ingrained heredity of shiftlessness of all the generations that had gone before. It is a source of high satisfaction that there was on the part of the padres no record of over-reaching the simple natives, no failure to respect what rights they claimed, no carnage and bloodshed, that have so often attended expeditions sent nominally for civilization, but really for conquest. Here at least was one record of missionary endeavor that came to full fruition and flower, and knew no fear or despair, until it attracted the attention of the ruthless rapacity and greed of the Mexican governmental authority crouching behind the project of secularization. The enforced withdrawal of the paternal hand before the Indian had learned to stand and walk alone, coupled in some sections with the dread scourge of pestilential epidemic, wrought dispersion, decimation and destruction. If, however, the teeming acres are now otherwise tilled, and if the herds of cattle have passed away and the communal life is gone forever, the record of what was accomplished in those pastoral days has linked the name of California with a new and imperishable architecture and has immortalized the name of Junipero Serra.
> "The lonely Mission at Carmel is a restored monument above a grave that will become a world's shrine of pilgrimage in honor of one of humanity's heroes. The patient soul that here laid down its burden will not be forgotten. The memory of the brave heart that was here consumed with love for mankind will live through the ages. And, in a sense, the work of these missions is not dead—their very ruins still preach the lesson of service and of sacrifice. As the fishermen off the coast of Brittany tell the legend that at the evening hour, as their boats pass over the vanished Atlantis, they can still hear the sounds of its activity at the bottom of the sea, so every Californian as he turns the pages of the early history of his State feels at times that he can hear the echo of the Angelus bells of the missions, and amid the din of the money madness of these later days can find a response in 'the better angels of his nature.'"

The record of this spiritual battle is a part of our tradition. It is inextricably interwoven with the history of our commonwealth, and no true Californian, no matter what his affiliation, will permit it to be taken from us, or countenance any action that through plain intent or cold neglect would cheat the Franciscans of their praise. In speaking of it, Henry Van Dyke has said:

> "The real secret of its power lies in the inherent nobility and romance of the missionary idea, incarnate in the person of Fra Junipero. . . . I went on a pilgrimage to his grave at San Carlos in Carmelo . . . . The mission lies in the landscape as a pearl in its shell. . . . It is a jewel on the breast of Nature—a jewel of remembrance, the memorial of Junipero Serra, Little Brother of Saint Francis of Assisi, servant of God, lover of men, founder of the California missions. He lived and died for an immortal idea, and he rests in peace beside the lonely high altar."

Your Eminence, from our hearts we welcome your presence here today. We are more than gratified to have you as a witness of the joy with which we celebrate the foundation of the city of our love. Others have called it "the city loved around the world." We San Franciscans have a human fancy that, in a way, there abides here something of the spirit of the Seraphic Father, "the saint loved around the world." He had in him something unique, something different from all the others. We are enamoured of his charm, his whimsicality, his love of Nature and of beasts and birds, of pageantry, his kindliness and otherworldliness. In him, for all his reverence and zeal, there survived the spirit of the Troubadour. In this 700th anniversary year of his death amid his Umbrian hills, may we not be indulged in the hope that in return for his name we have fallen heir to some small portion of his spirit? In 1906 the world heard something of "the gay courage of San Francisco." This is a people of romance, resilience and resourcefulness. Beside enterprise, here abide charity, reverence, love of art, tolerance, loving kindness. Be assured that, wherever you go in this "no mean city," whether in the blissful calm of its historic Mission, or on the windswept heights above its loved Presidio —everywhere—beneath the benediction of the

N.S. PAST GRAND HONORED.

Mayor James Rolph Jr., affiliated with Hesperian Parlor No. 137 N.S.G.W., appointed Past Grand President Lewis F. Byington a member of the Board of Supervisors to succeed Richard J. Welch, elected to Congress from the Fifth District. Headed by Senator James D. Phelan friends of Byington within the Order gave a banquet in his honor November 11.

Senator Phelan, a member of Pacific Parlor No. 10, reviewed "Lew's" career as a former supervisor and district attorney, as well as a citizen at all times interested in the public welfare, and expressed the opinion that, had Mayor Rolph combed the whole state, he could not have found a better or more capable man for the position.

Other speakers were: Mayor Rolph, Past Grand President Fletcher A. Cutter, Past Grand President Daniel A. Ryan, Past Grand President Judge John F. Davis, Supervisor James B. McSheehy, Past Grand President Byington. Among others in attendance were the following: Grand Second Vice-president James A. Wilson, Grand Third Vice-president Charles L. Dodge, Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Grand Treasurer John E. McDougald, Grand Marshal Hartley Russell, Grand Trustees Dr. Frank I. Gonzalez and Alfred H. McKnew, Past Grand Presidents Dr. Charles W. Decker, William H. Miller, Judge Frank H. Dunne, Louis H. Mooser, William P. Caubu, William J. Hayes and Edward J. Lynch.

GRAND SECRETARY N.S. GUEST.

When the San Francisco Native Sons' Friday luncheon club became aware November 12 that Grand Secretary John T. Regan had a birthday the previous day it was unanimously voted that he be the honor guest. Charles A. Koenig was the toastmaster, and the following eulogized the Grand Secretary, commending him for the able manner in which his office is conducted and for his at-all-times pleasant and co-operative attitude: Michael J. McGovern, Harry W. Gaetjen, Frank Buckley, Harmon D. Skillen, Jesse H. Miller, Eugene H. O'Donnell, Dick Fitzgerald, Dr. William G. Maison, Raymond D. Williamson, George W. Schonfeld, Grand Trustee Alfred H. McKnew.

Grand Secretary Regan responded to the toasts and thanked those who had honored him. But, notwithstanding all the nice things said of him and the numerous good wishes extended, John steadfastly refused to disclose his age.

COVERED WAGON WELCOME.

Grand President Pearl Lamb paid an official visit to Oro Fino Parlor No. 9 N.D.G.W. November 4. Many visitors were in attendance. The hall was beautifully decorated with strands of poppies and ferns, so arranged as to suggest the covered wagon, in compliment to Mrs. Lamb, who ever holds the Pioneers in reverent memory. Mazie Roderick presided and the ritual was exemplified by a very efficient corps of officers.

Following a charming and instructive address, the Grand President was presented with gifts of silver, as was also D.D.G.P. Mabel Scally. Rita Hayden read the following lines of greeting to the Order's head, composed by Recording Secretary Josephine Morrisey:

"We greet you tonight, Worthy Grand President
To our dear California you're a real ornament
We wish you success, and happiness, too
Our vows of allegiance we now offer you
A pearl of great price is our own Golden State
A gem of the ocean is our own Golden Gate
Our sisters are loyal, fraternity's best
With a Pearl at our helm we'll surpass all the rest."

UNUSUAL SOCIAL ACTIVITY.

Buena Vista Parlor No. 68 N.D.G.W. is enjoying an unusually active social season, some special feature being introduced at each meeting. Recently Mary L. Growney, the talented second vice-president, entertained with several dramatic readings. The annual Thanksgiving dinner was a huge success. Mrs. May Noble was chairman of the committee which prepared a full-course turkey feast served in the lodge room. There was a large turnout at the annual turkey whist November 18. D.D.G.P. Agnes Curry has been guest of honor at all events.

BISMARCK BRUCK
PAST GRAND PRESIDENT N.S.G.W.

BISMARCK BRUCK OF SAINT HELENA, Napa County, Past Grand President of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, passed away suddenly in San Francisco, October 20, as briefly mentioned in The Grizzly Bear for November. He was born at Napa City, Napa County, September 7, 1870, and was a charter member of Saint Helena Parlor No. 53 N.S.G.W. Surviving are the widow and a son, Dr. Edwin Louis Bruck (Saint Helena 53 N.S.G.W.).

Bismarck Bruck was a splendid Californian, a citizen whose passing is a distinct loss to the state and to his native county. He was an expert viticulturist and a keen businessman, and through his energy accumulated a competence. Faithfully and well, he had served Napa County as a member of the Board of Supervisors for two terms, Napa and Lake Counties as a State Assemblyman for three terms, and Saint Helena in various capacities. As a Native Son, he exemplified to perfection the precepts of Friendship, Loyalty and Charity. No man in the Order was more highly thought of.

BISMARCK BRUCK, PAST GRAND PRESIDENT N.S.G.W.

Funeral services were conducted in Native Sons' Hall, Saint Helena, under the auspices of Saint Helena Parlor, and the wealth of floral tributes testified to the high esteem in which Bismarck Bruck was held generally. The ceremonies of the Order were conducted by Grand President Hilliard E. Welch, Past Grand Presidents Lewis F. Byington, Louis H. Mooser and William P. Caubu. Past Grand President Judge Henry C. Gesford, a lifelong friend, delivered the eulogy.

Others in attendance at the obsequies were: Grand Third Vice-president Charles L. Dodge, Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Grand Trustee Dr. Frank I. Gonzalez, Past Grand Presidents John H. Grady, Dr. Charles W. Decker, Judge Frank H. Dunne, Thomas Monahan and William F. Toomey.

A DESERVED TRIBUTE.

The "Saint Helena Star" of October 22 paid the following editorial tribute to Bismarck Bruck,— a tribute which is subscribed to by all who knew him in business, civic, political and fraternal life:

"Bismarck Bruck is dead. The loyal, patriotic, upstanding citizen of Napa County, Saint Helena's best friend, has been called to his reward. Death came while he slept, and the man so active in community and state affairs for many years is now at rest.

"It is difficult to pen a suitable tribute to Bismarck Bruck, his death has come to us as such a shock. Our friendship has existed for forty years and it was of such a close nature that the loss to the editor of this paper is indeed great and keenly felt.

" 'By their works ye shall know them;' and how truly these words can be applied to Bismarck Bruck. He was ever engaged in doing some kind act; always unobtrusively, but doing something at all times to lighten some one's burden, to brighten the pathway of those less fortunate than he and to bring cheer to the downcast.

"To Bismarck Bruck, friendship was not a light, sentimental thing, but he valued it most highly. His friends were legion and his regard for them remained unbroken through the years.

"As school trustee, town trustee, supervisor and assemblyman, his services to the community and the commonwealth were of untold value and while, for the past few years, he has not been quite so active as formerly, his good works continued until the end.

"Bismarck Bruck stood four-square. One always knew where to place him. In fraternal circles he was a leader; in business his word was as good as his bond; and in politics and government affairs he always advocated with vigor those principles he believed to be right."

LEGISLATURE ADOPTS RESOLUTIONS.

The following resolutions of respect to the memory of the late Bismarck Bruck were introduced by Assemblyman Frank L. Coombs, Past Grand President N.S.G.W., in the State Assembly at the extra session of the Legislature and were adopted by unanimous vote:

"Honorable Bismarck Bruck, a former member of this House, passed beyond this life on the 20th day of October, 1926, and the members of this Extraordinary Session convening on the 22nd day of October, 1926, desire to pay some tribute expressive of their love for his character and worth and their appreciation of the fine things for which he stood.

"Bismarck Bruck was born in the County of Napa, this state, and, at the time of his death, was fifty-six years of age. He was liberally educated and always took an active and leading part in the public concerns of his country and more especially in those of the county where he was born, reared and spent his life. His father was of German descent, and as Bismarck was ushered into life about the time when the world echoed to the triumph of German arms, he named his son after the iron chancelor. Bismarck's mother was pure Spanish, carrying upon her cheeks and in her manners the gentle graces of her Spanish ancestry. She was a niece of General Vallejo, who played a great part in the transition period of California in 1846 when these lordly domains were transferred to the sovereignty of the union.

"Bismarck Bruck was a member of this House in the Sessions of 1915, 1917 and 1919. He was formerly the Grand President of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West. During his active career he was known as a man of sincerity, of courtesy, of truth, and of the highest courage. Whenever he thought a proposition was right, he became committed to it. Truth was his creed.

"In the pursuit of his aims he was fair and courteous, yet he never hesitated in his purpose because of the fact that it might, perchance, antagonize a friend or an interest. He never sought the even tenor, never avoided frictions, for purpose was his ideal. He was fond of his friends, and they were legion. He had a foresight which fitted him for life's highest aims.

"Even now, while the body of which he was once a member is engaged in the consideration of a great national problem, the friends and acquaintances of Bismarck in the Town of Saint Helena where he has lived, are gathered around all that remains of him now, the sad reflection of a soul that was great in all the qualities of manhood, and these, though he is gone, cannot pass away.

"Resolved, That the members of the Assembly of the State of California, on this 22nd day of October, 1926, in Extraordinary Session assembled, extend their sympathy to the relations of our deceased friend: the wife and the son, who live to mourn a loss for which Earth has found no repair; be it further

"Resolved, That when the Assembly adjourns it be out of respect for the memory of Honorable Bismarck Bruck, once an honored member during the sessions of 1915, 1917 and 1919."

DEFINITION OF A FRIEND.

The first person to come in when the whole world goes out.

A bank of credit on which we can draw supplies of confidence, counsel, sympathy, help and love.

A jewel whose luster the strong acids of poverty and misfortune cannot dim.

One who multiplies joys, divides griefs, and whose honesty is inviolable.

One who loves the truth and you, and will tell the truth in spite of you.

The triple alliance of the three great powers: love, sympathy and help.—Exchange.

CALIFORNIA'S "MAGIC" CITY

"SNOWSHOE" THOMPSON PLAQUE DEDICATED

NOVEMBER 14 A CONSIDERABLE NUMber of people gathered at Carthay Center to witness the ceremonies attendant on the dedication, by the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, of a bronze plaque imbedded in a huge granite boulder. The plaque was dedicated to the memory of John A. "Snowshoe" Thompson, the pioneer mailcarrier of California, and the inscription upon it reads:

" 'Snowshoe' Thompson, a Pioneer who for twenty winters carried the mail over the mountains to isolated camps, rescuing the lost and giving succor to those in need along the way." The plaque also bears a likeness of Thompson, a native of Norway who arrived in El Dorado County in 1851.

The plaque was presented by J. Harvey McCarthy, and given into the keeping of the Los Angeles Lettercarriers' Association. Adolfo G. Rivera presided over the program, which included addresses by Postmaster P. P. O'Brien, William T. Aggeler, Rev. St. John O'Sullivan, J. L. Shaw and Dr. Owen C. Coy. Grove T. Vail sang "I Love You, California."

Preceding the dedication ceremonies there was a colorful parade, marshaled by Glen J. Packer and participated in by the Native Sons and Native Daughters of Los Angeles County, the lettercarriers and their band, the firemen's band and several gaily-costumed riders, among them Marco S. Hellman, mounted upon beautiful horses. F. H. Chaffee impersonated "Snowshoe" Thompson in the line.

The enactment of a Spanish-California wedding of the period of 1830 concluded the afternoon's program. Eugene R. Plummer was the padre, Amparito Ontiveras the bride, Gabriel Ruiz the bridegroom, Manuel Duarte the best man and Jose Sepulveda the governor.

LAST YEAR'S RECORD ECLIPSED.

More automobile tourists entered California South during the first ten months of this year than during all of last year, according to a report of the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

Since no check is made on cars coming by way of the Pacific highway routes, the obviously large total of machines that come from other states over these roads can only be estimated. Exclusive of these routes, however, the official count by state forces at all other highway ports of entry show that 154,574 foreign cars entered the southland during the first ten months of 1926 as compared with 154,604 machines during the entire year of 1925. Every car carries an average of three persons, who spend $5 apiece per day during an average stay of six weeks, according to estimates of the automobile club.

AN EASY TASK.

Victor McLaglen, who portrays Captain Flagg in Fox Films screen version of Laurence Stalling's and Maxwell Anderson's great war comedy, "What Price Glory," now being shown at the Carthay Circle theater, finds commanding a company of soldiers an easy task.

And no wonder, during the war McLaglen served as a captain in the British army, and at one time acted as assistant-provost marshal of Bagdad. This position virtually gave him control of approximately 50,000 men, in addition to the Arab and Indian populations of that city.

MESSAGE POINTED THE WAY.

Grand President Hilliard E. Welch of Lodi, San Joaquin County, Grand Third Vice-president Charles L. Dodge of Martinez, Contra Costa County, Grand Secretary John T. Regan of San Francisco and Transportation Committee Chairman Joe Berry of Courtland, Sacramento County, officials of the Grand Parlor N.S.G.W., spent the week of October 25 in Los Angeles. They were in charge of Grand Trustee John T. nardino and Orange Counties. This gathering was for the purpose of discussing the Order's welfare in the southland. After listening to remarks from several speakers, including Past Grand President Herman C. Lichtenberger, Sidney B. Witkowski, Grand Trustee Newell, Leon Leonard, Henry G. Brodek, Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer, John Andreson, J. E. Dorsey, Richard W. Fryer, Dr. S. T. Luce and R. W. Brazelton, Grand President Welch delivered a message which, if heeded, cannot fail to advance the interest of every Subordinate Parlor as well as the Order as a whole.

NEW NATIVE DAUGHTER PARLOR.

A parlor of Native Daughters of the Golden West, organized by Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas, will be instituted December 14 at Glendale by Grand President Pearl Lamb, assisted by Past Grand President Sue J. Irwin, in charge of organization work for the Order.

The ceremonies will be held at Hahn Hall, 109 North Brand boulevard. The ritual will be exemplified by the officers of Los Angeles Parlor No. 124, and the acting grand officere during the institution ceremonies will be members of Long Beach Parlor No.154, Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 (San Pedro) and Santa Ana Parlor No. 235.

The parlor will probably be named after a member of the old Verdugo family, Mrs. Ramona Verdugo-Mendibles, one of the first to sign the charter petition. The membership will include some of Glendale's most prominent clubwomen, among others Mrs. Margaret Kaeding, Mrs. Clytelle Hewitt, Mrs. Doria Phillips, Mrs. Ida Farrand, Mrs. Ella Madden.

WISE VOTERS!

At the November 2 election approximately 57.6 percent of the registered voters in Los Angeles County performed their duty as citizens—voted. In Los Angeles City the total vote was 214,532 and in the county outside the city 182,615.

There were several city and county propositions on the ballot having to do with public funds, and most of them were voted down, which result is evidence that the voting taxpayers are distrustful.

And why shouldn't they be, in view of the charges of graft that have been publicly made? They had in mind, when they voted, the publicity concerning the new county Hall of Justice and the "extras" for city improvements, and certainly displayed intelligence in, under existing circumstances, swatting the more-funds proposals.

Those who bear the tax-burdens will do well to assume the attitude—and to stick steadfastly to it—of voting no more bond issues and of concurring in the creation of no more public-improvement assessment districts until they know beyond the peradventure of a doubt that one hundred cents of every dollar—not a portion—are expended for the purposes for which paid into the public-coffers.

When that attitude becomes a fixed policy, charges of graft will not be heard, and men of

FOR MORE THAN A HUNDRED YEARS Old Town was San Diego. It began with the founding of the fort and mission in July 1769; it ended, as a place of real consequence, with the fire of April 1872 which destroyed most of the business part of the town and turned the scale decisively in favor of the new settlement which had sprung up at Horton's Addition, or South San Diego, as it was then called. It is rare that two historical eras are so clearly marked on the face of the earth as in this case. The site of Old San Diego is a thing apart from the location of the present city, just as the life of the older time is separated from that of the present by a space of years. And yet, it was in the soil of Old San Diego that the seed of the present city was planted and took root, and it was in that mother settlement that civilization began on the Pacific Coast of the United States.

From 1769 to about 1830—a period of over sixty years—San Diego lived within the adobe walls of its garrison on Presidio Hill and became a famous dot on the map of the world. Nothing now remains on Presidio Hill to show the casual observer that it was ever anything but a vacant plot of ground. Looking more closely at the mounds, beneath their covering of weeds and earth, one finds the foundations of old walls built of thin red tile and adobe bricks. These remains are all that is left of the Spanish Presidio of San Diego. Standing on this historic spot, one is moved to wonder how the manifold activities of the ecclesiastical and military affairs of the Southern District, and of the political and social center of one of the four important towns in Upper California, were ever carried on for so many years upon this little space.

The visit of the famous English navigator, George Vancouver, in the "Discovery" in 1793, was the most important event breaking the monotony of these early years. His was the first foreign vessel that ever entered San Diego Harbor. He arrived on the 27th day of November and remained twelve days. His presence disturbed and alarmed the Spanish officials, who did not relish the sight of the British flag in California waters. The most valuable results of his visit, so far as this history is concerned, are his shrewd observations upon the Presidio of San Diego and the whole Spanish military establishment in Upper California. He says the soldiers "are totally incapable of making any resistance against a foreign invasion, an event which is by no means improbable." The Spanish officials knew this; the relations between England and Spain, too, were strained and war broke out not long after. It is no wonder that Vancouver was regarded with dread and suspicion.

The end of the eighteenth century was now close at hand and it brought a few events of unusual interest to the quiet community. In 1798 the soil of San Diego was first trodden by Americans. Four sailors had been left by an American ship in Lower California, whether by accident or design is unknown. They tramped to San Diego and applied at the presidio for food and shelter, as well as for a chance to take the first opportunity to sail in the direction of home. They were not very hospitably welcomed by the Spaniards, who regarded them with some suspicion, but there was nothing to do except to care for them until a ship sailed for Mexico. In the meantime they were given a chance to earn their bed and board by working on the fortifications. Later, they were sent to San Blas. The Americans bore the names of William Katt, Barnaby Jan and John Stephens, and were natives of Boston. They were accompanied by Gabriel Boisse, a Frenchman, who had been left behind, like themselves, from the American ship "Gallant," a treatment hardly in keeping with the name. The next year the English sloop-of-war "Mercedes" paid a brief visit to San Diego, but sailed away without any hostile demonstration.

With the year 1800 the Yankee trader began to cast his shadow before him. It was the palmy day of Boston's captains of commerce, when they used to load their ships with the products of New England ingenuity and send them forth upon the seas bound for nowhere in particular, but looking for good bargains in exchange for their cargoes. About all that California had to offer at that time was the trade in furs.

The first American ship to enter San Diego Bay bore the good old English name of "Betsy." She arrived on the 25th of August 1800, in command of Captain Charles Winship. She carried nineteen men and ten guns, remained ten days, secured wood and water, and then departed for San Blas. In June, 1801, Captain Ezekiel Hubbell came in the "Enterprise," of New York, with ten guns and twenty-one men. All he asked was wood and water, with which he set sail after a stay of a few days. If either of these earliest American captains succeeded in doing any illicit trade at San Diego, they kept the secret successfully, leaving not so much as a rumor of scandal behind them. Such was not the case with those who came shortly after.

Captain John Brown arrived February 26, 1803, in the "Alexander," of Boston. He was bent on getting otter skins, though he failed to mention the fact to the Spanish commandant. On the contrary, he told a touching tale of sailors down with the scurvy, on the strength of which he was permitted to land, though required to keep away from the fort. He was supplied with fresh provisions and, in view of the condition of his crew, granted permission to stay eight days. In the meantime, the wily captain was buying all the skins offered by Indians and soldiers. On the fifth evening of his stay the commandant sent a party on board the "Alexander" to search for contraband. The search was rewarded, 491 skins coming to light. The Yankee was invited to leave San Diego without ceremony; also without the otter skins. There was nothing to do but to comply, unless it was also to grumble, which the captain did. He complained that his ship had been visited by a rabble before any demand was made for the surrender of the furs. He also complained that the soldiers relieved him of other goods to which they had no rightful claim. The evidence seemed clear, however, that Captain John Brown, of Boston, abused the Spanish hospitality by perpetrating the first Yankee trick in the history of San Diego.

The "Lelia Byrd" dropped anchor in the bay March 17, having sailed by the fort on Ballast Point without arousing any protest. But promptly the next day the commandant of the presidio appeared on board with an escort of twelve soldiers. He made himself acquainted with the captain, William Shaler, and with Richard J. Cleveland, mate and part-owner of the ship, a character who gains much additional interest from the fact that he was a relative of Daniel Cleveland, a prominent citizen of San Diego. Captain Cleveland left a good account of the exciting events precipitated by the presence of his ship. Among other things, he described the commandant as an offensively vain and pompous man, but it is possible that the captain's unsatisfied desire for otter skins may have prejudiced his opinion in the matter. The commandant agreed to furnish needed supplies, but informed the visitors that when these were delivered they must promptly depart. They were expressly forbidden to attempt any trading and five men were left as a guard to see that this injunction was enforced. Three days later the commandant again visited the ship, received his pay for the supplies, and wished his visitors a prosperous voyage.

The Yankee crew, in the meantime, had been ashore, visited the fort at Ballast Point, and made the acquaintance of the corporal in charge of the battery, Jose Velasquez. Thus they learned that the commandant had on hand something like a thousand confiscated otter skins, which he would not sell. The corporal hinted, however, that he might be able to deliver some of the forbidden goods, obtained from other sources. Captain Cleveland was ready for the trade and sent a boat ashore that night for the skins. The first trip was successful, but a second boat failed to return. When morning came the Yankee captain decided on vigorous action. He disarmed the Spanish guards who had been left on his ship, sent them below, and went ashore with four armed men. It was found that the crew of the second boat, which had failed to return the previous night, had been captured by a party of mounted soldiers, headed by the commandant himself. They had been bound hand and foot and compelled to lie on the shore, where they were captured, all night under guard.

In his account of the affair Captain Cleveland says: "On landing, we ran up to the guard and, presenting our pistols, ordered them instantly to release our men from their ligatures. . . . . This order was readily complied with by the three soldiers who had been guarding them; and, to prevent mischief, we took away their arms, dipped them in the water, and left them on the beach."

It was now necessary for the Americans to make their escape as quickly as possible. The men were full of fight, but their situation seemed desperate. There were only fifteen men, all told, in the crew, and the armament consisted of six three-pounders. Their inspection of Fort Guijarros had shown that it contained a battery of six nine-pounders, with an abundant supply of powder and ball. The force was probably sufficient to work the guns, although Cleveland is doubtless mistaken in thinking the ship opposed by at least a hundred men. He remarks that while the preparations for flight were making on board ship, all was bustle and animation on shore, and that both horse and foot were flocking to the fort; and it is a fair inference that most of this crowd were mere spectators.

The difficulties in the situation of the Americans were much increased by various circumstances. It took time to hoist the anchor and get up sail. There was only a slight land breeze blowing, and the Spaniards were able to fire two shots at the ship, one a blank shot and the second

PRACTICE RECIPROCITY BY ALWAYS PATRONIZING GRIZZLY BEAR ADVERTISERS

CALIFORNIA HAPPENINGS OF FIFTY YEARS AGO

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

CHRISTMAS DAY 1876 COMING ON A Monday was the cause of Christmas tree entertainments in California being held on Saturday evening and of a Sabbath-breaking Christmas Eve on the part of the children who received presents.

This Christmas was not one of unmixed joy and merriment, for the rainfall was deficient and indications of a dry season were manifest. Grass was drying, grain fields were withering and placer mining was dormant. Besides these adverse conditions, a slump in the stock market caused by an unconfirmed rumor during Christmas week that the Bonanza mines would pass their January dividends made prices break nearly fifty percent. California street, San Francisco, was filled with anxious investors who spent a gloomy Christmas season watching the market fluctuate.

December was a month without a cloudy day or a drop of rainfall. It was considered a phenomenal month as regards weather conditions and the season rainfall at the close of the year amounted to only 2.89 inches.

Con. Virginia and California both declared their regular monthly dividends of $2 a share for December and other mining companies put out enough more to distribute about $3,000,000 to stockholders. This was, in part, offset by the assessments of other mining companies which amounted to more than $1,000,000.

Trade-dollars were in great demand by Chinese merchants who desired to ship them to China and follow the Chinese custom of paying their debts before the Chinese new year, the latter part of January. A San Francisco bank, taking cognizance of this state of affairs, deposited for coinage at the mint a large amount of silver bars, said to be over 1,000,000 ounces, and thereby shut out competitors for trade-dollars and controlled the rates of discount. While silver dollars sold at a seven percent discount, trade-dollars were being bought at a premium.

That the presidential election of November was still a question of doubt, is shown by the fact that December 9 the Republicans of Marysville, Yuba County, fired a salute of a hundred guns in honor of the election of Hayes, while the Democrats of Stockton, San Joaquin County, did likewise in honor of the election of Tilden. Both of the jubilations were the result of conflicting reports of the balloting of presidential electors in the different states.

Wm. M. Lick, claiming to be a nephew of Pioneer James W. Lick, asked for letters of administration on the latter's estate December 2. He asserted that John was not a legitimate son of the deceased and that he, the petitioner, represented the heirs.

LOS ANGELES' FIRST AMERICAN.

Miss Mary A. Kennedy sued C. W. Brewster in the El Dorado County district court for breach of promise. The plaintiff and defendant were of the elite of Placerville and the court-room was filled at each daily session during the eight days of the trial with the society leaders of the town. The jury gave the deceived woman a verdict for $9,000 damages.

Parrott & Co., San Francisco bankers, filed a suit against Bill Briggs, the noted gambler and faro king, for $35,000 and attached his game and bank. It was alleged that the absconding young Ver Mehr had lost that amount bucking Briggs' game. The latter created some furore by declaring his intention to prove, by a number of prominent citizens as witnesses, that Ver Mehr quit winner oftener than he did loser after a session. Ver Mehr was captured in Mexico and brought back to San Francisco this month, but he was minus the money he had appropriated.

In a civil suit tried in a Los Angeles court a witness stated that the first American to settle in Los Angeles was Joe Chapman, a New Englander and a sailor, who was brought there a prisoner by the Spanish commander after being captured near Santa Barbara while buccaneering in 1818. Chapman later married Senorita Guadalupe Ortega of Santa Barbara and fathered a family of red-headed Yankee-Castillians.

Over 1,000 more Chinamen left California for China this month than came into it. This was gratifying to the anti-coolie agitators.

The North Pacific Coast railway was completed to Moscow, on the Russian River in Sonoma County, eighty-five miles from San Francisco, and the Amador branch railway was put into operation from Galt, Sacramento County, to Ione City, Amador County, this month.

A city election in Los Angeles December 4 resulted in the selection of Dr. F. A. McDougall as mayor.

An excursion train—the first to be run—from San Francisco to Los Angeles December 28 gave vacationists three days to visit that section. It returned December 31.

In the Santa Anita Valley of Santa Barbara County, near Gaviota Landing, a 12,000-acre tract of land had been subdivided into 100-acre farms that were being advertised to be sold at auction in January.

Mayor Beaudry of Los Angeles announced his intention to plant 25,000 eucalyptus trees on a tract of land adjoining Alameda street in that city.

The Georgia Minstrels, still in the amusement world, were making a tour of the state.

Smallpox was decreasing rapidly in San Francisco, but it had spread to Victoria, B. C., on the north, and to Los Angeles on the south. Diptheria broke out in San Francisco during Christmas week. There were 141 cases, and more than a quarter of them were fatal.

AUSTRIAN COUNTESS RUNS AMUCK.

The authorities of San Francisco found at a home on Ritch street the worst case of squalor yet unearthed there. The mother, dead from smallpox, lay in a bed on which the father was lying asleep, dead drunk, and their five young children, half starved and half naked, were wandering about.

December 3 Alvinza Hayward, the multi-millionaire mining man, was remarried to his divorced wife at San Mateo, San Mateo County, much to the surprise of their friends and the public.

Suicides kept up an astonishing ratio this month. A sensational one was that of Emerson Johnson, in Sacramento. He entered a K-street saloon, invited everybody to have a drink with him and then, while standing at the bar, announced that it would be the last time he would "treat the house," drew a pistol and fired a bullet into his brain.

Another was that of August Knoak, an old and esteemed citizen of Healdsburg, Sonoma County. He was found December 6 with the muzzle of a shotgun in his mouth, his foot in the guard on both triggers and the top of his head blown off by the double-barrel discharge.

December 30 a young woman was saved from drowning herself in the bay at the foot of Beale street, San Francisco, and taken to the hospital in a hysterical condition. She gave her name as Dora Levy and stated she was a domestic employed in a home on Pacific street near Hyde. A messenger was sent there and obtained clothing to replace her wet garments; on donning them she was allowed to depart. The afternoon of the 31st in a lodging-house on First street, the landlady, unlocking the door of a room occupied by Christopher Jacobson, found him lying on the floor dead from a pistol bullet fired into his mouth and the weapon on the floor nearby.

For some time it was supposed to be a case of suicide until there was found, in a pool of blood, where his head had laid, a note written in German stating that it was desired the pistol be returned to its owner, named in the note, and adding: "My bloody vengeance has followed his vile serpent tongue." It was signed "Antonia Appronig," who was discovered to be the Dora Levy that had attempted suicide. It developed she claimed to be an Austrian countess, spoke little English, and had worked for a family

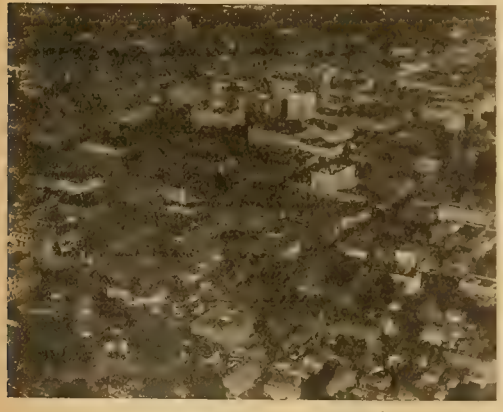
STOCKTON—LOOMING INDUSTRIAL HUB OF THE WEST

G. L. Fox

(INDUSTRIAL ENGINEER, STOCKTON CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

GOLD, TRADE, FARMS AND FACTORies have all played important roles in the romance, the glamour, the toil and the successes that have made history for Stockton—Looming Industrial Hub of the West.



Founded in 1847 by Captain Charles M. Weber as a shipping center to serve California's great central valley which extends for 225 miles to the north and south, Stockton was soon fanned into a booming source of supply for the great Mother Lode mining region. This era of riotous expansion was followed by agricultural development and then came factories, the earliest using products of farms in making various food products and feeds and others catering to their needs for tools and implements.

Mining, timbering and agriculture were soon intensified and contributed to Stockton's steady growth while more and more new factories took root until today Stockton, in terms of production for the international market, is one of the leading manufacturing centers on the Pacific Coast and the community's advantages with regard to production and distribution will unquestionably cause its greatest future development.

CITY OF DIVERSITY.

Stockton is a city of diversity, with a colorful past, a prosperous present and a promising future. Existing enterprises have long presaged an industrial era on the Pacific Slope and plain facts about material availability, transportation, labor, markets and other factors prove that factory expansion at this hub is bound to occur.

Already over 180 manufacturing establishments are prospering here in the employment of an average of more than 5,200 persons and the annual production of $30,000,000 worth of highly diversified commodities.

Many of Stockton's plants are among the most notable in the West, some having grown with the community, others having chosen this location within recent years due to operating and distributing advantages. One of these plants is the largest in the world, devoted exclusively to the manufacture of combined harvesters. Another turns out the biggest combined harvesters made anywhere, while a third is the world's leading producer of pencil slats. A fourth is the first completely electrified foundry west of the Mississippi River, and a fifth is a leader in the production of fiber shipping cases and cartons.

NOTABLE GAINS.

The strides being made by Stockton industrially are indicated by the fact that the following are among the concerns which have located in this city since the first of 1926: Western Harvester Company, Gaylord Bros. (also of Syracuse, N. Y.), Tractors Parts Corporation, Taylor Milling Co., Poultry Producers of Central California, Stockton Feed Yards Inc., Sperry-Drake Grain & Milling Co., Electric Vacuum Lawn Mower Co., Geer Manufacturing Co., Terminal Paint Manufacturing Co., Stockton Kadota Fig Products Inc. Graham Bros., a division of Dodge Bros. Inc., which has been operating a motor truck plant at Stockton for nearly two years, has leased another property and is more than doubling its production.

The products of Stockton factories range from delicate toys to tremendous earth moving machinery, and include artificial hands, paving machinery, steamboats, toilet preparations, trucks, standardized watercraft, tractor parts, plows, scrapers, beverages, structural iron and steel, wooden specialties, brick, refractories, paints, medicines, stock and poultry feeds, flour, creamery products, bakery products, fertilizer, canned fruits and vegetables, sole leather, castings of iron, steel, aluminum, brass and alloys, centrifugal pumps, wooden containers, wallboard and many others.

Characteristics of Stockton are such that products from local plants compete in markets throughout the world, the marketing fields of individual concerns ranging from the city proper to the world at large.

FUNDAMENTAL FACTORS.

It is becoming almost characteristic for progressive and modern cities to clamor for factory development. Some will secure it; others will not, despite promotional efforts. Never before was the slogan "Let's Get Industries" so popular. The spread of this intent, however, has been accompanied by an awakening on the part of manufacturers to the importance of correct plant locations. Today their analyses before sites are chosen are complete and penetrating and only those cities where fundamental factors are sound will attain the factory payrolls their citizens desire.

Advantageous fundamental conditions have been and now are responsible for the prosperity of Stockton manufacturers. These same factors will wield a strong influence in the future industrial development of California and it is due to this significance that they merit the attention of the proponents of a prosperous state.

CENTRAL LOCATION.

First of all, Stockton's location at the hub of California's great central valley—the Sacramento-San Joaquin—is a point of substantial importance. This gateway situation is reflected in many of Stockton's operating and distributing advantages and will be tremendously enhanced by the development of the San Joaquin River and Stockton Channel to accommodate deep-water vessels.

Existing plants in the county turn out sugar, flour, stock and poultry feeds, canned fruits and vegetables, preserves and other tasty food products in demand throughout the world. Production is constantly expanding and Stockton is headed for international prominence as a food center.

Stock feeding yards constitute one of the community's newest industrial projects and they promise to make this city one of the leading livestock and packing centers of the West. Local conditions with regard to stock availability, feed costs and market connections are unrivaled and wide attention is being gained by opportunities to process the various materials made available by the yards.

GAS WELLS PRODUCING.

Mines directly tributary to this city are now yielding various industrial minerals, including copper and other metals, clays, limestone and other non-metallics. Natural gas wells in Stockton have been flowing for twenty and thirty years and the surface of mineral and fuel potentialities has hardly been touched.

Forests to the east of Stockton, in Amador, Calaveras and Tuolumne Counties, contain over eighteen billion board feet of commercial timber, much of which will find its way to users through Stockton re-manufacturing plants. This timber includes western yellow pine, sugar pine, red and white fir, incense cedar, lodgepole pine and hemlock, uses for which are constantly increasing.

Electric power from hydro-electric sources is available for as low as $.006 a kilowatt-hour in Stockton and water from subterranean sources is obtainable at exceptionally low costs. An existing plant is using over 4,500,000 gallons daily and practically any industrial demand for water may be satisfactorily filled.

CLOSE TO CONSUMERS.

San Joaquin County has over 107,000 inhabitants; Stockton, 55,000; while 46 percent of California's population of 4,000,000 lives within 100 miles of this center.

Local factories are ideally situated to serve the California market, and, inasmuch as this market constitutes about 40 percent of that available in the eleven Western states, they are well able to serve the entire Western territory. In addition, they have the advantage of close connections with deep-water carriers serving Atlantic and foreign ports.

MANY FREIGHT SERVICES.

Stockton's proximity to material sources and consumers would be of little significance, however, if the city was not served by a multiplicity of railroad, waterway and highway transportation lines. Stockton is on all of the principal railroads serving California—the Southern Pacific, Western Pacific and Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe—is the operating base for three other railway companies, and is the center of a vast system of highways and navigable waterways.

Forty-one percent of the state's population is within twenty-four hours of Stockton in freight time and local producers have the advantage of serving a maximum number of buyers at minimum cost.

These exceedingly favorable transportation conditions will soon be greatly intensified by the Stockton ship channel and harbor project which will make this city an inland port—a terminal for ships of the world at the hub of California's great central valley.

$3,000,000 VOTED.

By a vote of twelve to one, the people of Stockton have provided three million dollars for this proposition. The United States House of Representatives has passed a bill authorizing the proposed improvements and providing for federal participation in the project. This bill will be presented on the floor of the Senate in December 1926, and it is hoped that the work of widening and deepening Stockton Channel and the San Joaquin River may begin next year. "Deep water" has been recommended by the board of engineers for rivers and harbors, the chief of engineers U. S. A., the secretary of war and various congressional committees and is favored by representative cabinet members who have been over the ground.

Plans call for harbor facilities to handle over a million tons of freight annually and the channel will have a minimum depth of twenty-six feet, sufficient to accommodate over 90 percent of the vessels entering San Francisco Bay.

This port will save hundreds of thousands of dollars annually for all of interior California, will build Stockton's importance as a trans-shipping point and will enhance this city's advantages as a factory center, permitting manufacturers to locate with diversified material sources at their back doors and the markets of the world at their front.

CONTENTED, EFFICIENT LABOR.

Skilled and unskilled labor is readily available at reasonable wages in Stockton and many manufacturers will testify to its efficiency, due to comfortable home conditions, excellent recreational opportunities and general contentment. Production per man day is high and labor turn-over in Stockton plants is low. These are advantages which every manufacturer must consider, because if one does not, his competitor will and they mean lower costs of production, better service and higher quality.

Building conditions at Stockton are favorable and site prices are small, ranging from $500 an acre upward. Moderate site costs are reflected in limited taxes—low fixed charges, the objective of manufacturers seeking greatest economy and profits.

CULTURAL BACKGROUND.

In addition to the factors directly pertinent to factory operation which have been mentioned, Stockton is characterized by a cultural atmosphere sponsored by its elaborate educational system, its fraternal and service organizations, its literary and social clubs, its excellent home opportunities and its churches. There are various gymnasiums in the city and golf links are maintained by the Stockton Golf and Country Club and the municipality. Pleasant week-end trips may be made to Yosemite Valley, Lake Tahoe, Del Monte and other scenic attractions surrounding Stockton.

The pubic school system is second to none and its size is shown by the following figures as to attendance: kindergartens, 600; grammar-schools, 7,291; part-time classes, 484; night high-school, 1,966; day high-school, 2,069.

There are various parochial and private schools in Stockton as well as the College of the Pacific, with an enrollment of 1,000 students in engineering, the arts and the sciences. This institution is situated on a beautiful forty-acre campus in new buildings made possible by gifts aggregating $600,000 from the people of Stockton.

Many religions as well as leading sects of the Christian faith are represented in thirty-five churches, many of which are housed in new edifies.

The people of Stockton have evidenced their progressiveness through the adoption and support of a city manager form of government which is highly efficient and they have been generous in their provisions for public improvements such as a civic auditorium, city hall, streets, bridges and many acres of parks.

Stockton is a city of beautiful, detached, occupant-owned homes. Many of them are located in artistically arranged subdivisions where lot prices are attractive. The various residential districts are amply served by street car service, this company recently having made two important extensions. The city's rate of growth is indicated by the following figures showing the number of dwellings, single and multi-family, erected recently: 1921, 504; 1922, 361; 1923, 485; 1924, 430; 1925, 396.

All in all, Stockton is a community of which all California may be proud. Its present diversified industries are prosperous and its characteristics are such that factory development, auguring good for the state as a whole, is inev-

STOCKTON NATIVE SONS WANT HISTORIC HIGHWAY IMPROVED.

The Native Sons of Stockton are backing a proposition to improve the Stone Corral section of the Valley Springs-Bellota road, on the old historic Mokelumne Hill road, leading from Stockton, San Joaquin County, to Mokelumne Hill, Calaveras County, one of the largest of the mining towns of the '49 period. The Mother Lode highway, beginning at Auburn, Placer County, on the north, and extending to Mariposa, Mariposa County, on the south, passes through this historic old town.

At a meeting of Stockton Parlor No. 7 N.S.G.W. November 1, a resolution—presented by George F. McNoble, historian of the Parlor, George E. Catts and G. Elmer Reynolds—favoring this improvement was unanimously adopted and its introducers were named a committee to present it to the Boards of Supervisors of San Joaquin and Calaveras Counties. The resolution, in part, follows:

Whereas, An earnest effort is now being made by citizens of the Counties of Calaveras and San Joaquin for the early improvement and pavement of the Valley Springs-Bellota road, consisting of a section of a public highway about ten miles in length lying between the east line of San Joaquin County, to which point it is already paved, and the Town of Valley Springs in Calaveras County; and

Whereas, The respective Boards of Supervisors of said counties have appointed committees thereof to take up the consideration of the paving of said section of highway during the coming season, if the doing of the work is deemed advisable in the public interest; and

Whereas, It appears from a careful consideration of all of the facts that the improvement of said section of road would be for the mutual benefit, interest and convenience of the people of both counties; . . . now, therefore,

Stockton Parlor No. 7 N.S.G.W., after having fully considered all matters pertaining to said proposed road's construction, does hereby go on record and declare that it is in favor of the early building of said section of highway, and as an organization gives its hearty support to the consummation of said road project, believing that the construction of the same will make for the comfort and convenience of the people of both counties, augment business, bring about better trade relations, and make for better health and more abundant traffic and travel.

GRUMBLERS SET AT REST.

The recent announcement of the policy of the regents of the University of California regarding the College of Agriculture, has set at rest, and quite definitely, those who have grumbled that the university has little interest in the farming industry in the state. In the first place, the regents expressed their interest in agriculture and pledged their every effort to aid research that will solve agricultural problems.

Then, as a practical demonstration of this interest, they announced a building plan for the branch of the College of Agriculture, or the University Farm, at Davis, Yolo County, where the more practical work is done. An agricultural engineering building, costing $140,000, is under way, a new campus plan and arrangement of buildings has been approved, and an animal science building to cost $300,000 is to be asked of the next Legislature.

TO PRESERVE CALAVERAS TREES.

The Calaveras Grove Association, a non-capital, non-profit organization, has filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state. Among the incorporators is Hilliard E. Welch of Lodi, Grand President N.S.G.W.

The purpose of the association is to preserve the famous big trees of Calaveras County and the formation of a state park which will include the Calaveras, North and South groves. Headquarters of the association are in Stockton.

Sportsmen To Gather—In the intereset of perpetuating the state's wild life and forests, the associated sportsmen's clubs of Caliorfnia will hold their second annual convention in San Francisco, December 9 and 10.

"USE THE HORN, BUT USE IT INTELLIGENTLY!"

An appeal to motorists generally to aid in the elimination of senseless noises and to take the raucous notes out of those that seem relatively useful has been made by D. E. Watkins, secretary and general manager of the California State Automobile Association. While the automobile has brought innumerable blessings, he points out, it also has brought innumerable noises that should be eliminated.

"Every motorist is compelled to use the horn on his car. It is a vital bit of equipment," says Watkins. "However, there is an intelligent standard in this aspect of driving that every motorist can try to reach. Certain classes of motorists, entirely through thoughtlessness, of course, never find themselves in any sort of traffic predicament that their first thought is not for the horn button.

"When approaching a street intersection, regardless of the fact that the pedestrian has the right of way, they resort to the horn in a seeming attempt to blast the walker out of his legal rights. That is only one instance of this sort of careless horning.

"There are dozens of times when use of the horn is absolutely imperative. When passing another vehicle, one is legally compelled to give a warning. A warning is enough. There is nothing to be gained from pushing on the horn button until one has passed the vehicle ahead. Still, thousands of motorists do it. They are not satisfied with a mere warning.

"Rounding curves usually calls for the use of the horn. Here is another case when there is a reasonable limit to the use of it. A signal is a signal only so long as it does not become acutely annoying to the person whose attention one is trying to attract. After that, too often, it becomes a distinct challenge.

"One of the most annoying of noises is that created by the automobilist who wants to attract the attention of some one inside a building.

"Use the horn, but use it intelligently!"

REFERENCE TABLE THAT MAY PREVENT ACCIDENTS.

If motorists realized the tremendous amount of ground they cover per second, even when going within the speed limit, fewer automobile accidents would occur, it is stated by the Automobile Club of Southern California. While many drivers have a hazy idea of the space in which their car will stop at different speeds, few realize the exact limits even when their brakes are in perfect condition.

The following table shows the distances covered at various speeds and is handy for reference: Ten miles an hour covers 14.66 feet per second, 15 miles an hour covers 22 feet per second, 20 miles per hour covers 29.33 feet per second, 25 miles per hour covers 36.66 feet per second, 30 miles covers 44 feet per second, 35 miles per hour covers 51.33 feet per second, 40 miles per hour covers 58.66 feet per second, 45 miles per hour covers 66 feet per second, 50 miles per hour covers 73.33 feet per second.

HARTZ 1926 "SPEED KING."

Harry Hartz, who has been within striking distance of the speed crown for the past four years, is certain winner of the title this year, according to an announcement from the contest board of the American Automobile Association. Should Hartz fail to place at the remaining events at Charlotte and at Los Angeles, and should Frank Lockhart, second place man, win both these races, Hartz would still lead for the season by 59 points, totals show.

Lockhart, the young Los Angeles flash, in his first year of big league competition may finish second if he can maintain his lead over Peter

OVER HALF-BILLION FOR ROADS

The Federal Department of Agriculture Bureau of Public Roads announces [illegible] penditures by state highway departments in 1926 for road and bridge construction [illegible] 101. The total incomes were $565,424,[illegible] percent of that sum being derived from motor vehicle license fees and 13.5 percent from gas taxes.

California is listed as having expended $18,090,728 during the period referred to in the report. The figures do not include outlays by county and local authorities for road purposes.

OILING OPERATIONS SUSPENDED.

Oiling of highways in California has been suspended for the present season and all roads previously oiled have dried to such an extent that there is no longer any danger of splashing cars or skidding.

If oiling operations are continued next year they will be carried on by improved methods. It is planned either to arrange suitable detours, closing the sections of the road being oiled, or to oil the roads in very short sections which will be immediately screened, thus eliminating the possibility of splashing expensive cars and other annoyances to motorists.

1927 LICENSE PLATES.

Motorists will not be able to obtain new license plates before January 1, 1927, according to the license department of the Automobile Club of Southern California. Advance reservations will not be made as in the past, and no special numbers will be reserved for anyone.

The new license plates are maroon and buff, and the present lettering system will be done away with. All numbers will be complete in figures and the word "California" will be spelled out on every plate.

No advance reservations will be made for "trick" numbers, as all of the plates to be distributed in California South will run over one million from 1,175,000 to 1,375,000. The highest number of license plates ordered for next year by the State Motor Vehicle Department is 1,750,000, indicating that the state will reach a motor population of a million and three-quarters.

YOSEMITE GROWING IN POPULARITY.

With a registration of 274,209, California's gorgeous Yosemite—now open the year round—had more motor visitors this year than any national park in the country, according to the Federal Department of the Interior. The number exceeds the 1925 registration by 65,043. The official park travel year terminates the end of September.

Travel to all of the national parks and monuments of the nation registered more than a 36 percent increase for the last two years in this year's total of 2,287,828 visitors.

California's Muir Woods led all other national monuments in the 1926 travel total of 97,426 visitors, according to the annual report.

CHEAP TIRES COSTLY.

Motorists are advised to buy tires with the maker's name and serial number upon them. A good tire, selling at full rates, will give a minimum of 8,000 miles. Keep a record of the tires on the car and when it is necessary to get an adjustment the dealer will always be found at his old address.

A "gyp" manufacturer can make the worst tire in the world look like the best product by using the poorest grade of rubber, even reclaimed rubber vulcanized on a carcass made of rotten fabric. These tires can usually be bought at "cut-rate" prices.

Why Fear Rain?—Why avoid the rainy day for fall traveling? It has a number of unsuspected advantages. Wet pavements keep the tires cool and save tire trouble. There is no dust. The engine runs better. One takes fewer risks. There is less traffic on the road. There is no sun glare.

Eraser for Distributor Points—Do not use emery cloth or sand-paper to clean the distributor points, as these materials will leave the surfaces uneven. A rubber eraser will leave a much cleaner and smoother surface.

Put Safe in "Safety Zones"—As a result of the national conference on street and highway safety, an appeal is made to motorists to make "safety zones" absolutely safe.

named Levy in New York and assumed their name. She had returned from the hospital to her place of employment and there made an unsuccessful attempt to poison herself, then made an effort to hang herself in her room, but, being frustrated, had disappeared and was now being searched for all over the city.

Mary Rhinehardt, drunk, was asked by a little Italian boy, selling flowers, to buy a bouquet at the door of her room in the third story of a Broadway hotel in San Francisco. It so angered her she seized and threw him out of a window, and it was believed the fall had fatally injured him.

LOOKING FOR TROUBLE—FOUND IT.

A woman named Genson fled to the home of a German named Fritz Wetzel a few miles from Los Angeles, December 3, and appealed to him for protection. Her husband had beaten and shot at her and threatened to kill their children. Wetzel accompanied her back to her house to act as peacemaker. The husband became enraged and attacked him with a knife, stabbing him numerous times about the head and shoulders, and he was thought to be fatally hurt.

December 21 Gideon M. Barber, finding his mistress was intimate with his best friend, A. J. Conrow, went to the latter's room on Market street, San Francisco, and shot him dead. He then sent two bullets into his own body and died the next day cursing, with his last breath, the man he had killed.

Joseph Gardilla, a saloonkeeper under the influence of liquor and looking for trouble, found it upon entering the saloon of Charles Kruters on Dupont street, San Francisco, December 22. Drawing a knife he attempted to carve the barkeeper but was prevented by Kruters. He then turned upon him but Mrs. Kruters came upon the scene and diverted his attention. This awakened Charles Smith from a snooze in a corner of the barroom and when he arose to see what the disturbance was he received a serious stab in the neck. Armond Austill, a prominent brewer, entered the saloon at this moment and was stabbed in his prominent abdomen, receiving a mortal wound. The police then arrived and subdued the crazed knife wielder.

Thomas Smith, at Michigan Bar, Placer County, December 10, opening a keg of powder in his mining claim, caused an explosion which burned off his whiskers and hair. In jumping into a ditch to extinguish the fire he received a fatal injury.

E. W. Burrows, justice of the peace at San Andreas, Calaveras County, going to his home the night of December 13 fell off a footbridge over a gulch and broke his neck.

Tom Mulligan, a Los Angeles sportingman corpulent enough to weigh 260 pounds, went with a companion to have a hunt on Catalina Island. He was riding a mule around a mountainside. Thinking it safer afoot than astride, he dismounted and proceeded to lead the mule, which balked, and in the tussle that ensued Mulligan fell off the trail, down a precipice 400 feet and received fatal injuries. It required four men to carry him up on a blanket from the bottom of the cliff.

Wm. H. Lynch of Sacramento while hunting ducks near that city December 3 leaned upon the muzzle of his gun when conversing with a companion. The gun was accidentally fired and the shot tore through his side and shoulder, killing him.

DISCOURSES ON "MASHING."

M. A. Brooks, a Pioneer of Tuolumne County, was walking through the woods near Sonora December 1. He stopped to rest beneath a pine tree that soon afterward toppled over and killed him.

Mrs. Johanna Kolhucky, while entertaining some friends at her home on Bush street, San Francisco, December 28, playfully pointed a revolver at a man named Decker. It went off and the bullet, hitting him in the chest, mortally wounded him.

At Cuffey's Cove, Mendocino County, December 10, John Bishop, Frank Scott and his son, A. W. Hall, Miss Carrie Smith and her sister, Jennie, were riding in a wagon down the Elk Creek grade when the team ran away. The wagon finally went off the road and struck a bank that caved upon it and buried the party. Carrie Smith was dead when taken out and Jennie was dangerously hurt. Bishop was found dead and all the others were injured.

The Capital flour mill on Sacramento street, San Francisco, burned December 14, causing a $25,000 loss.

December 29 a Central Pacific railway snow-shed fire near Summit, Placer County, destroyed a mile of the sheds and 700 cords of wood.

W. O. Green, living near Jackson, Amador County, December 1 built a fire in his kitchen stove of sticks of wood that were a few inches too long for the fire-box and the ends protruded beyond the door. He was called away temporarily and while absent the sticks burned so that the flaming ends dropped upon the floor and set the house on fire. The place and its contents were destroyed.

A writer to his home-town paper, told of his experience with the fair sex in San Francisco as follows: "I was going along the street the other day when a bewitching creature threw her langurous eyes and a smile of ineffable sweetness at me. A little boy was nearby and I asked him, 'Do you know the lady,' for I thought the female might be looking at him. 'No,' said he, 'she's mashing you.' It is very general here, and it's very nice and flattering to be mashed. They say that many respectable girls indulge in the pastime, and it is considered harmless to flirt into an acquaintance that sometimes ripens into matrimony. I like it and would find it a pleasure to be mashed as flat as a pancake half a dozen times a day, but by some other fellow's sisters. If I had a sister who mashed I would mash her."

A Sunday-school class in Auburn, Placer County, was given this question, to be answered the following Sunday: "How many letters does the Bible contain?" The correct answer, 3,000,523, was given by several of the scholars, but "Jimmy" shook his head, which caused the teacher to ask: "Jimmy, isn't that right?" "No sir," was the prompt reply. "Will you please tell us how many there are, then?" "Twenty-six," answered "Jimmy."

FAITHFUL "BILL" MARIS ANSWERS THE FINAL CALL.

William H. Maris, affiliated with Santa Barbara Parlor No. 116 N.S.G.W., died October 25 at Santa Barbara City, where he was born January 11, 1863. Surviving are two sisters, Mrs. Alonzo Crabb of Santa Ynez and Mrs. George Gifford of Santa Barbara.

"Bill" Maris had a host of friends, both within and without the Order of Native Sons, for he was always faithful. He was a past president, and for years—even unto the day of his regretted passing—the financial secretary of Santa Barbara Parlor. He was also a familiar figure in Grand Parlor circles, having represented No. 116 at many sessions. In his passing the Order has lost one of its most loyal members.

Indicates Progress—With an increase of 18.59 percent, Los Angeles led all cities of the United States in increased postal receipts for October, according to the November 5 announcement of the postmaster-general. The comparative figures are: $825,001.76 (1926), $695,672.85 (1925).

PASADENA SAYS IT WITH ROSES ON NEW YEAR'S DAY

Harry L. Roberts

(MANAGER, PUBLICITY DEPARTMENT,
PASADENA CHAMBER OF COMMERCE AND CIVIC ASSOCIATION.)

THAT CALIFORNIA'S SNOW-FLAKES are rose-petals will be strikingly and convincingly demonstrated in Pasadena a month hence for the thirty-eighth time on as many consecutive New Year's Days. With three-quarters of a million persons packed along the streets of Pasadena to view the spectacle, and countless millions of others looking on through the eyes of newspaper correspondents and the lenses of newspaper and motion-picture cameras, a hundred or more gorgeous floral floats, fashioned from millions of fresh, natural flowers, will pass in review on New Year's morning to prove all over again that California's climate is the finest on earth.

Ever since the first day of January, 1889, Pasadena has regularly observed New Year's Day by staging a Tournament of Roses. The late Dr. Charles Frederick Holder is credited with conceiving the idea which resulted in the birth of the tournament. Dr. Holder suggested to the members of the Valley Hunt Club that a "fiesta" be held on New Year's Day, with a parade of rose-decorated carriages and tallyhos terminating at some suitable place, where a picnic lunch would be enjoyed, followed by a program of early California sports. The club promptly endorsed the suggestion and set about working out the details.

It was first proposed that the festival be called "The Battle of Flowers," for a battle of flowers it was to be. Those riding in the carriages and other vehicles in the parade were to pelt the onlookers with flowers, and be pelted in return. Later, "The Tournament of Roses" was adopted as the name of the event, but the pelting with flowers continued in vogue until after 1901. In that year the battle waxed so fierce that many of the horses in the parade became unmanageable, and more than one bareback rider was summarily unhorsed. The "battle" thereafter was dispensed with, but the name was retained, and the Tournament of Roses continued to prosper and grow until it became famous throughout the civilized world.

After being sponsored by the Valley Hunt Club for eight years, the tournament grew to such proportions that a separate organization, known as the Tournament of Roses Association, was formed to conduct it. This organization has since continued to manage the tournament each year. The association is strictly a non-profit organization.

This year a woman's division of the association was organized. It comprises two representatives from each of fifty California cities and towns. Two general meetings have been held by the division, and many innovations to be seen in the 1927 tournament have resulted from ideas conceived by the women. The woman's division is to be a permanent part of the tournament association, meeting regularly twice a year, once in April and again in October.

In the early days of the tournament, Spanish sports comprised the afternoon program. Later, chariot races were introduced, and in 1916 the first of the East-West football classics was held. Since that time, football elevens representing the East and the West have battled for supremacy in Pasadena each New Year's Day afternoon, and the game has come to be one of the nation's outstanding athletic events of the year.

As when the tournament was very young, the morning parade of floral creations through the sun-splashed, tree-lined streets of Pasadena continues to be the outstanding event of the day. Police estimated that approximately 800,000 persons witnessed the parade this year. Preparations are being made for handling a crowd at least as large next year.

In the 1926 parade were 253 units, comprising 70 huge floats, 19 flower-adorned automobiles, 23 horse-drawn vehicles, 116 mounted horsemen and horsewomen, and 25 bands. The line of march was five miles long and the length of the column was five miles. More than 600 regular and special traffic officers were required to handle the crowds.

Describing the parade, one of the many newspaper correspondents wrote, in part: "Under a dazzling golden canopy of California sunshine, a gorgeously beautiful procession, alive with millions upon millions of exquisitely colored and perfumed flowers, towering with marvelously decorated floats and resplendent with glittering bands and flashing flags, surged majestically through the broad streets of Pasadena today.

"It was Pasadena's greatest Tournament of Roses, for the huge crowd not only outnumbered any previous New Year's Day crowd, but the parade itself was the most beautiful of any of the famous pageants of the past thirty-seven years. Wave after wave of handclapping and cheers rolled out from the hundreds of thousands of spectators as the winding procession of bloom-covered floats poured through the heart of the immense throng. The parade started exactly on time, 10:30 a.m., from South Orange Grove avenue, where it formed between the two rows of palatial millionaires' mansions. In addition to approximately one hundred giant, blossom-bedecked floats, there were scores of other great attractions, gaily caprisoned bands, troops of horsewomen and horsemen on prancing, quick-stepping steeds, horse-drawn vehicles and decorated automobiles."

The tournament long ago ceased to be a local event. It is now regarded as belonging to the entire State of California. November 15 of this year, thirty-eight California cities and communities had notified the Tournament of Roses Association that they intended to participate in the annual mid-winter pageant next New Year's Day. Tournament officials said that this was about twice the number of definite entries on the same date last year.

At the same time, many other cities had written that they were considering participation in the festival. Of the thirty-eight communities which had definitely decided to join in the pageant, eighteen had advised the association that they would bring along bands, drum corps or other musical organizations.

This early interest in the fete was taken by tournament officials as an indication that cities other than Pasadena would share in the pageant next New Year's Day to a much greater extent than in the past.

Announcement has been made by the tournament association that one hundred sterling silver trophies have been ordered for awarding to prize winners in the various divisions of the tournament parade. The trophy list in past years has comprised about half this number of awards.

Next New Year's Day, for the first time since the tournament was founded thirty-seven years ago, there will be a specific theme underlying the gorgeous floral pageantry. "Songs in Flowers" will be the general motif of the fete. Each entry will depict in flowers the central thought conveyed by the title of a well-known song.

A few of the song titles already selected are: "I'm Sitting on Top of the World," by Beverly Hills; "Bells of the Sea," by Long Beach; "Home, Sweet Home," by Los Angeles; "Valencia," by Pomona; "Hearts and Flowers," by Culver City; "Dearest Spot on Earth," by Arcadia; "Trees," by Sierra Madre; "The Garden of My Heart," by San Dimas; "In a Little Town Nearby," by Temple; "Old Oaken

SUGGESTIONS FOR CHRISTMAS

ONE MAY CHOOSE A GEORGETTE scarf of copenhagen blue, tan or boisde-rose with a deep border of roman stripes, or with oriental embroidery. Some are hand painted and all four edges are hand rolled to prevent raveling.

Imported handkerchiefs of white linen have blocked designs in bright colors, outlined with embroidery. These hems are also hand rolled. All-white linen handkerchiefs are edged with real or imitation lace and show a novel animal design, each little motif being outlined in color.

Crepe de chine handkerchiefs have plain centers with printed borders to look like net and show a bud and flower in the corner. Georgette handkerchiefs showing a hand-painted floral design, which is outlined with tinsel, come in an assortment of colors. Cardboard dolls dressed in handkerchiefs of chiffon and trimmed with a border of lace are packed in envelopes ready for holiday mailing.

Knitted novelties are shown for holiday gifts in scarfs of every description. Imported cashmere scarfs come in the gayest colors, in plaids, stripes and plain colors.

Sweaters are shown for young and old. A youngster's sweater costume combines a skirt of zephyr with a fiber striped sweater. The wool of the sweater matches the color of the skirt and the fiber stripe is a contrasting color.

A brushed wool child's costume consisting of leggings, sweater, cap and mittens may be had in a choice of colors. Silk braid outlines the jacket cuffs and leggings.

Flowers for daytime and evening are suitable holiday gifts. Chrysanthemums are sold mostly in pure white. Velvet boutonnieres come in attractive round bandboxes covered with gold paper and are to be had in all colors. Violet boutonnieres are made of deep violet muslin, with three shiny leaves bound with three-inch green stems. Evening flowers come with velvet and satin petals and gold centers. The leaves are also of velvet, with a gold loop stem, which drops about ten inches. These are available in american beauty, rose, amber and all black, with gold centers and stems.

Accessory buying proves that the gift may carry a fashion appeal. Gifts that match are always sought by shoppers who like to carry a good idea to the finish. The hat band of silver kid is complemented by a silver kid rose for the shoulder.

The spirit of Yuletide gift-making encourages the luxury of tempting boudoir accessories. A china figure of colorful fashioning forms a boudoir lamp. A circular tray of metal-framed glass has a design beneath worked out in butterfly wings of rich colorings.

A plump china woman is in reality a powder box, the top lifting up to reveal a section for powder. A cigaret case has a sunken design of colored stones with black and gold touches. A Mosaic picture frame is studded with jewels. Jewel boxes of every description are made, and handkerchief holders come in satin and lace. Shoe buckles for every occasion are of genuine cut steel, jet, old gold and silver.

Hosiery is always acceptable. The era of elegance in hosiery has arrived, marking rapid progress from the days when the universal wearing of silk stockings was itself considered a luxury. Chiffon silk hosiery has risen to popular demand despite the evident impractibility of the sheer textures.

Gunmetal hose, with black heels, has come to stay, at least for the winter. Metallic hosiery is expected to complement metal cloth gowns with gold and silver shades. For general wear, a peach shade between yellow and pink is good. This tone will lend itself to harmonizing with the pastels in sports as well as with evening apparel.

The return of the colonial shoe gives a combination of leathers in black suede and patent leather, or two-toned brown kid. Some very high tongues and attractive buckles are shown. Black and biege combinations are good for dressy street wear.

At no time since women bought corsets as a matter of course have they been so receptive to the idea of body grooming garments as now. Even the most frivolous girl will be converted by the charms of the newer confines as soon as she realizes that the corset she revolted against is no more and relinquishes her prejudice from the flapper point of view.

The extensive development of the sports idea in all types is finding its counterpart in corsets. Dance sets consist of lace girdles and bandeaux for slender figures, and satin and lace one-piece garments, for women who need an unbroken line.

Proper grooming is more than ever dependent upon underlying principles of design, for as fashions become more simple emphasis is placed upon line, and as women grasp this fact they begin to appreciate the relation between costume and foundation.

The lace dress has come to the fore. It appears in most groups as the all lace development, or as a combination of chiffon or georgette with lace, and either type may find itself with long sleeves for afternoon wear. The lace dress is invariably simple in style, but if it chooses trimmings they are always restrained. Metallic cloth, ribbon and velvet are the ornamental devices used, not omitting, however, flowers placed at the shoulder or waist to contribute a brighter note. Metal cloth slips are sometimes used.

The shawl prolongs its vogue as a wrap for formal wear, whether the occasion is the theater, dinner or supper. Up to last year practically all style expression in shawls was monopolized by the type familiarly known to everybody as "Spanish," and chiefly identified through huge decorative embroideries.

But now the vogue has come in the form of new mediums, such as brocades in fringeless squares. The coolness of the evening makes evening wraps necessary for warmth, but in addition to the wraps that are worn, women carry the shawls folded upon their arms for wear indoors.

The straight line maintains its favor in coats, with a few imported coats serving as an inspiration for the domestic designs. The straight coat silhouette is the demand. The blouse, the dolman and the many other innovations to vary the straight line have all been modified so that they are merely means of alienating a too-tubular appearance.

Despite the many predictions that black furs would come to the fore when the season opened and that they would lead the procession before the season ended, the colored pelts are in great demand for trimming. Gray is spoken of in many quarters with favor and is believed capable of gaining an equality with brown. The light silver tones are favored in caracul.

There is a rumor that broadcloth will continue its vogue and that black will be the chic color note. Cashmere weaves again take precedence over the hard twilled fabrics and flannel and jersey for sports togs.

The heavy silk crepe kasha and wool crepe are the leading fabrics. These stress the two-piece mode and employ gay embroideries, belts of leather, tucks, pleats and contrasting fabrics for trimmings.

Sleeves are long, close fitting and wrinkled at the wrists. Scant bishop and narrow bell-shaped sleeves are wide at the ends or buttoned closely around the wrists.

Shoulders have fine tucks made on the underside or three to four rows of fine close shirring concentrated at the center of the shoulder.

High collars are buttoned under the chin in front. Turned-down collars are caught together with linked buttons. Many shallow, round and "V" neck openings are shown. Evening dresses, as a rule, show a round neckline in front and a deep "V" in back.

Skirts are marked by the novelty of plaits, stitched or gathered sections. Back sections are more often plain. Circular and tierred skirts are featured, and many are fringe trimmed and have narrow belts with buckles and narrow strings.

SMALL BOY'S LAMENT

(ESTHER CRONE.)

The man who made the almanac,
I think was awful queer.
He put it down in white and black,
One Christmas Day a year.

Now, two at least would suit me best,
And that could easy be,
For that would give us all the rest
To make the year, you see.

But since he had to do it so,
And couldn't fix no other way,
I'd like to have old Santa know
He's welcome here on any day.

HOLLYWOOD'S CHRISTMAS PRESENT

Harry Barratt

(ASSISTANT SECRETARY, HOLLYWOOD CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

THE LOS ANGELES CITY ENGINEERing department's Christmas gift to Hollywood this year is 100 miles of completed permanent pavement. This program, initiated at the beginning of the year, includes a large number of minor projects which, as a whole, constitute a major program. In addition, and including Western avenue between Los Feliz boulevard on the north and Fountain avenue on the south, there are several units of a major character. Completion of the Western avenue unit in Hollywood will make that artery a paved street from the north limit to approximately One Hundred and Twentieth street on the south.

Cost of the paving program in Hollywood this year is approximately $8,000,000, with considerable work held over for the coming year, according to Deputy City Engineer W. E. Brown, in charge of the Hollywood branch office of the engineering department. Engineer Brown explains that some fifty-three miles of projected paving will have to be held over for the coming year. This amount is under city council orders, with designs completed for thirty miles. The rest is being held for conclusion of plans for storm and sanitary sewers which are at present interfering with paving construction.

Most of the paving completed in and that ordered for Hollywood is of a heavy type, the report not taking account of any light or non-permanent types. In fact, according to Engineer Brown, the bulk of the street surfacing is of heavy type, some solid cement concrete, some asphaltic concrete, some bitulithic and some a combination having cement concrete as a base with a bitulithic or asphaltic cushion top.

Construction of extensive and important systems of storm water and sewage drains has been the chief contributing factor in delaying the construction of the fifty-three miles which will be carried over for 1927 operations, according to Engineer Brown. These drains cover practically ever foot of Hollywood and contemplate a service appropriate to demands for many years to come.

Among the most important projects of street improvements given to the Hollywood branch to work out in the past year was the so-called "Five Finger Plan." This involved not only street paving but took into account considerable street and roadway widening, and the opening of new arteries. The project includes the widening of Cahuenga avenue from the junction with Highland avenue and Cahuenga boulevard over the pass, to Hollywood boulevard, and cuts the avenue through new property directly south of Sunset boulevard to a point near De Longpre avenue, where it branches east and west to make connections with old Cahuenga and the new Cole avenue. Wilcox avenue is to be cut through to a south connection with Sunset boulevard, while Yucca and Argyle will be widened.

In the coming year the Hollywood office will be required to work on two important street improvement projects on which several million dollars will be expended one way or another before they are completed. One of these is the Sunset boulevard improvement, the other the Highland avenue improvement. The former includes not only paving of an extra heavy type but the widening of the entire artery from Cahuenga boulevard, or pass, to a point below

Wilshire boulevard. Considerable abutting property will have to be condemned before a contract can be engaged in. This improvement will cost several million dollars.

The Sunset improvement extends from Normandie avenue on the east to Laurel Canyon on the west, and involves widening of the roadway with the pavement. Curbs are to be set back five feet on each side of the street and a heavy type of pavement, suitable to hard traffic, will be laid. The Sunset Boulevard Improvement Association has recommended an asphaltic concrete for the roadway on this project. No conclusion has as yet been reached as to a type of material for paving Highland avenue.

The 1925-26 annual report of the engineering department shows 20.08 miles of street improvements of a value of $1,153,901; 54.19 miles of sanitary sewers of a value of $552,246, and 15 storm drains, 4.99 miles, of a value of $167,200 improvements forwarded to the city council. In addition to this the Hollywood engineer had designed forty miles of improvements during the year which were held up pending the installation of storm drains. During this first fiscal year the engineering department of Hollywood also received ten storm drains to be designed, and designed five, in addition to assisting the storm drain division at the central office in the design of five large storm drains.

In view of the fact that property owners must bear the heavy expense connected with these important street improvements, the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce has gone before the city council with a recommendation that may result in the adoption of a municipal ordinance which will protect all pavement against damage through cutting for the installation of public utility services. There exists no such ordinance today, and the chamber has suggested that such law be enacted following lines laid down by the Detroit municipality, which requires that any concern or individual cutting paving within one year after it is originally laid must pay twice the cost of replacement. If cutting is done the second year, the full cost must be defrayed by the person or company cutting. After that an adequate fine will be levied.

In addition to planning pavement for Hollywood, the local engineering department has designed many miles of sanitary and storm sewers, much of which has already been installed, more under contract, and still more to be carried over into the coming year for contract. The year 1927 in Hollywood promises to be equally important with 1926 in [illegible] improvements in Hollywood [illegible] and engineering authorities.

Bucket," by Compton, "Land of the Sky Blue Water," by Lake Arrowhead, "O Promise Me" by San Bernardino, "Old Black Joe," by Covina, and "La Paloma," by Alhambra.

Another new feature of the 1927 tournament will be the choosing by each city of some particular flower as its emblem. Everyone who attends the tournament will be urged to wear the flower of his or her city as a floral badge. Pretty girls from the various cities and communities will vend the flowers of their respective towns on the streets of Pasadena during the pageant.

Flowers already chosen include: orange blossom, by Pomona; lily, by Anaheim; red carnation, by Culver City; sweet pea, by Arcadia; wisteria, by Sierra Madre; pansy, by Temple; rose carnation, by Compton; forget-me-not, by Beverly Hills; calendula, by Covina; orange spray, by San Bernardino; rose, by Pasadena.

Harlan Hall, veteran Pasadena newspaperman, who has been associated with the tournament for many years, will manage the 1927 pageant.

A feature of the coming fete will be the singing by a huge chorus of the new rose song written by Carrie Jacobs Bond and Francesca Falk Miller. Mrs. Miller's poem, "Roses Are in Bloom," was chosen by five nationally-known judges as the best of 5,000 rose poems submitted in a contest held during the last summer by the Tournament of Roses Association with a $500 prize as the first award. It has been set to music by the famous writer of "A Perfect Day" and other great songs.

"ROSES ARE IN BLOOM."

Following are the words of Mrs. Miller's prize-winning poem, copyrighted by the Pasadena Tournament of Roses Association:

"There's a rambler on the trellis
And a wild rose in the hedge;
With a gay and golden Marechal Neil
Upon the arbor's edge.

"There's a Sweetheart bud a-tapping
At the window in my room,
And my heart is singing—singing
For the roses are in bloom!

"Oh, the crimson of each sunset
And the glowing pink at dawn,
Royal colors of the roses
Holding court upon the lawn.

"Oh, the joy, the smiles, the fragrance,
Of a land that knows no gloom;
Just a peaceful, sun-kissed haven
When the roses are in bloom!"

BENEFIT SPONSORED BY NATIVE SONS.

Under the auspices of Pasadena Parlor No. 259 N.S.G.W., pupils of Pearl Keller, director of the Pearl Keller School of Dancing at Glendale, presented a children's society vaudeville for the benefit of the N.S.G.W. and N.D.G.W. children's home-finding agency. The benefit was held at the Shakespeare Club November 17, and the splendid program was thoroughly enjoyed by a large crowd.

At the program's conclusion Vincent Savory, secretary of Pasadena Parlor, briefly outlined the efforts of the Native Sons and Native Daughters in behalf of California's homeless children, and extended thanks to Miss Keller, the youthful performers and their parents for their appreciated co-operation.

PASADENA FOUNDER DEAD.

Pasadena (Los Angeles County)—John Hamilton Baker, one of the three survivors of the band of Indianans who, in 1874, founded this city, died November 8. He was a native of Louisiana, aged 89.

Baker constructed the second house in Pasadena which, in a half-century, has grown to be one of California's most beautiful and thriving cities.

WILMINGTON'S COMMUNITY SPIRIT

Geo. Leonard

(SECY. CHRISTMAS TREE ASSN.)

TO OBTAIN A GLIMPSE OF ITS HEART and spirit is to convince one that Wilmigton is indeed a city with a wealth of sympathy for the other fellow and with a manifest realization of its neighborliness and hospitality, so much more often than not lost in the rapid course of growth from village to city. Like all other towns, Wilmington has its problems of social and charitable nature. One is that of the needy at Christmas—the boys and girls and families in such circumstances that Santa Claus is more than likely to overlook them.

As Christmas shopping days became fewer in 1925, P. J. Picherie of the Wilmington Exchange Club, himself an excellent double of the jovial old Santa except for the whiskers, arose in a meeting of the organization and explained his ideas of the way Christmas should be handled as a community public project. The famous "buck" was immediately passed to him, with his appointment as a committee of one to see what could be done in the matter. (This is not a "Who's Who" article, but certain names are essential and will have to be uncovered to tell this story.) That is the discouraging feature connected with making suggestions, and in many cases of this kind the suggestion dies its natural death; but Captain Picherie is one of those rare persons who attempt, nearly always successfully, to put over their suggestions, and he immediately got busy.

Appealing to other Wilmington organizations to send representatives to a meeting to discuss the idea was his first step, and the response to the invitation was so cordial that committees were formed and steps taken to finance a gigantic community Christmas celebration along with the work of furnishing a satisfactory substitute for Santa Claus for the children, who could not understand why Santa had so often forgotten them even though their letters had been sent to him in plenty of time.

Wilmington has the usual number of fraternal and benevolent orders, churches, Sunday-schools, its P. T. As., its American Legion, its lodges and social clubs, its Chamber of Commerce, booster organizations and luncheon clubs, and when the delegates from the entire list assembled the group represented a most democratic and talented, as well as a very unique, cross-section of Wilmington's population.

Naturally, a guiding-hand such as Captain Picherie, who was chosen to head the group, with such an army to put to work, soon accomplished what was set out to do. There were obstacles encountered, to be sure. The churches had to be interviewed, with a plea to consolidate their Christmas festivities with that planned by the group; the representatives were sent to enlist the interest of their organizations and to ask them to donate the usual amount they spent on Christmas affairs toward financing the plan; and finally, a place had to be secured in which to hold the public celebration that would accommodate thousands.

Sub-committees set to work to obtain statistics from the school authorities relative to the number of children attending school; to assemble Christmas bags; to obtain names and addresses of needy families and to investigate the cases; to provide a Christmas tree and trimmings; to form a community chorus from the various church choirs, and to provide a Christmas pageant and arrange for moives of the Christmas story.

To shorten a long tale, when the arrangements were completed the evening scheduled for the program, a few days before Christmas, witnessed the assembly of the largest crowd Wilmington ever gathered. The Wilmington Bowl was filled to capacity. Large Christmas trees had been set up and trimmed, the massed choir was placed in a reserved section and the excellent twelve-piece Salvation Army band was accorded a place of honor.

Over three thousand children were present with their parents, and at the close of the entertainment, as they filed out, the children were given bags of candy, nuts and oranges. Later, nearly one hundred well-filled Christmas baskets were distributed to needy families in and around the Wilmington district on Christmas morning.

Upon the basis of the experience gathered last year, plans for this year's celebration were started early. A permanent organization, comprised of one representative elected from each of the thirty-two Wilmington organizations, was formed last August, and it has sponsored two money-making entertainments with such success that the program this year will be somewhat enlarged in scope without any request for contributions of money.

However, the program for the public entertainment will be shortened to prevent the nodding of the youngsters' heads. Santa Claus will have plenty of helpers, and time will permit the securing of regular Christmas stockings instead of the paper bags of last year. It is also planned

MUSEUM EARLY DAY RELICS RE-OPENED AT HISTORIC SUTTER FORT.

Sacramento Sutter's Fort museum, which has been undergoing needed repairs, was re-opened October 31 with exercises sponsored by the local Parlors of Native Sons of the Golden West—Sacramento No. 3, Sunset No. 26 and Sutter Fort No. 241. The historic fort property was purchased by the Order of Native Sons and presented to the state, and the last Legislature appropriated $10,000 for the purpose of providing an adequate museum, where relics of the early days may be safely and properly housed.

Assemblyman Percy G. West presided and said that he purposes to ask the coming Legislature for additional funds for further restoration work. George G. Radcliff, chairman State Board of Control, told of California's interest in the fort.

Past Grand President Clarence E. Jarvis outlined the work of the Order of Native Sons in the preservation and marking of historic places and trails. Miss Mabel Gillis, assistant state librarian, spoke on "Sacramento's Debt to General Sutter." H. C. Peterson, curator of the fort, explained plans for the fort's complete restoration and made a plea for relics of early California from 1839 to 1869 for the museum. The Sacramento boys' band rendered several selections.

Additions to the museum, presented at the reopening ceremonies and accepted by Frank H. Killam, superintendent of state buildings and grounds, are: Articles from the prison brig "LaGrange," which came around Cape Horn from Salem, Massachusetts, in 1850, and made another round thrip in 1852. It was moored in the Sacramento River until sunk during a flood in 1861. The brig collection was presented by Charles Hall of Rio Linda, grandson of John T. Hall, commander of the "LaGrange." Collection of personal articles of the Sutter family from Charles Hartmeyer, whose family came into possesion of the relics through Louis Keseberg, Hartmeyer's grandfather, a member of the Donner party and a distiller for General Sutter.

The joint committee of the Sacramento Native Son Parlors in charge of the museum reopening ceremonies included: Thomas W. McAuliffe, Frank E. Michel, Ray Rosendahl, Judge Malcolm C. Glenn, George L. Popert, Assemblyman Percy G. West, Joseph L. Knowles, F. J. Schlink, C. Wulff.

PAY YOUR DEBTS.

"Always pay; for, first or last, you must pay your entire debt. Persons and events may stand for a time between you and justice, but it is only a postponement. You must pay at last your own debt. . . . He is great who confers the most benefits. He is base—and that is the one base thing in the universe—to receive favors and render none. In the order of nature we cannot render benefits to those from whom we receive them, or only seldom. But the benefit we receive must be rendered again, line for line, deed for deed, cent for cent, to somebody. Beware of too much good staying in your hand. . . . Pay it away quickly in some sort."—Emerson.

This was the assembling point for their reconnoitering parties. Here in 1774 Padre Palou erected a cross to mark the site of a proposed mission (which later was built at Santa Clara). The celebrated Pedro Font topographical map of 1776 contained the drawing of the original double trunked tree making the Palo Alto the first official living California Landmark. part, will greatly advance the interests of the Order and the individual Parlors.

It was decided, among other things, to conduct a membership campaign from January 1 to March 18. The fourteen Parlors in the district have been divided into two teams, as follows: No. 1—Stockton 7, Lodi 18, Tracy 186, Oakdale 142, Calaveras 67, Angels 80, Chicpa 139. No. 2—Yosemite 24, Fresno 25, Modesto 11, Selma 107, Orestimba 247, Tuolumne 144, Columbia 258. The Parlors of the losing team are to banquet those of the winning team at the most central point in the district, and Past Grand President William F. Toomey of Fresno will present a silver loving cup to the Parlor registering the largest percentage gain.

In a letter to the several Parlors calling attention to the district's plans Grand Trustee Reuter says: "I am willing to give you all the time I possibly can, but our Order cannot be made by the work of any one man—we need organization. 'It ain't the individual or the army as a whole, but the everlastin' team work of every bloomin' soul'."

Visitors Well Entertained.

San Rafael—More than fifty prominent members of South San Francisco 157 were guests of Mount Tamalpais 64 November 8. At the clam supper following the meeting Grand Secretary John T. Regan addressed the gathering. He called attention to some of the Order's splendid achievements and paid high tribute to the magnificent spirit displayed by the Los Angeles and other southern Parlors in building up the Order in their districts.

Charles T. Redding, treasurer Marin County, sang the praises of the "Metropolis of Nicasio." Grand Trustee Alfred H. McKnew and Richard M. Hamb delivered stirring addresses on the homeless children and other activities of the Order. "Sunshine" Pete Sundberg sang an aria from the comic opera "Ikey," his own composition. Others rendered vocal selections or related anecdotes. President Robert Hoare of South San Francisco extended thanks to the Mount Tamalpais boys for the wonderful time given the guests, and expressed the hope that No. 64 would soon return the visit.

Hallowe'en Dance.

Fresno—Fresno 25 and Fresno 187 N.D.G.W. had a Hallowe'en dance October 29. Decorations appropriate to the occasion adorned the hall and refreshments were served. In charge was the following committee: Jeanette Hansen, Helen Baker, Dora Nunes, Maude Davis, Frances Oliver, E. A. Hansen, M. R. Vierra, Ed Burke, Dr. G. H. Sciaroni, George Pickford, L. N. Barber.

Livermore—Las Positas 96 will have its annual Christmas tree for the children of the community December 22. Harry Johnson will impersonate Santa Claus, and Harold Anderson will be the bear. From an elaborately decorated tree candy, nuts, fruits and toys will be distributed.

Croak, L. Gardella, J. M. Beazell, J. M. Baughman, H. Johnson, G. Barber, W. Twisselman, C. G. Clarke.

Las Positas celebrated the fortieth anniversary of its institution with a turkey supper. Among the speakers were Grand President Hilliard E. Welch, D.D.G.D. Adolph Crellin and Grand Secretary John T. Regan. At the meeting following the supper two candidates were initiated.

Past Presidents Initiate.

Auburn—At a meeting here October 22 of Fred H. Greeley Assembly No. 6 Past Presidents' Association sixteen past presidents of Auburn 59, among them many Placer County officials, were initiated.

BEAR FLAG FLOAT A PRIZEWINNER

SAN PEDRO'S CELEBRATION OF ARMISTice Day, under the auspices of the local Chamber of Commerce and American Legion, was in every respect a success. The main event was a parade, witnessed by 50,000 people, in which numerous attractive floats were featured by various organizations.

In the civic and fraternal division, first prize went to the California State (Bear) Flag float, entered by Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 N.S.G.W. and Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 N.D.G.W. The central figure of the float, designed by William F. Durr, was the flag, fashioned out of flowers made by the Native Daughters. At one side was a stuffed bear, while the Flag of the United States and the State (Bear) Flag were on either side of the driver. The base of the float was banked with pepper tree boughs. Riding on the float were Catherine Ross, Agnes Hruza and Juanita Beckstead of Rudecinda. Ed Reese was marshal of the division.

Following the flag float was a covered wagon, entered in the parade by members of Sepulveda and Rudecinda who rode in it—Messrs. Preciado and Romero, Past President Charlotte Bennett and Second Vice-president Hazel Raines—and the accompanying horsemen—J. Alvarado and W. A. Traub. All are descendants of California Pioneers.

Much of the credit for the construction of the Parlors' flag float belongs to President Catherine Ross of Rudecinda and her faithful committee: Secretary Carrie Lenhouse, Gertrude Buchanan, Dora Baly, Agnes Hruza, Katherine Mooney, Juanita Beckstead, Elizabeth Kelley, Juanita Brooks, Mary Doyle, Ida May McNamara, Mary Halverson, Elizabeth Jorgensen, Margaret Schaefer, Mary Grannis.

GRAND PARLOR PLANS DISCUSSED.

Officials of the Grand Parlor N.S.G.W.—Grand President Hilliard E. Welch, Grand Third Vice-president Charles L. Dodge, Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Grand Trustee John T. Newell and Chairman Transportation Committee Joe Berry—visited San Pedro October 28 and were entertained by the following representatives of Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 N.S.G.W.: President Edward E. Baldwin, Recording Secretary James V. Carroll, Past President William Reuter, Bob Snodgrass and James W. Mee, Chairman of the Parlor's Grand Parlor arrangements committee.

Plans for the entertainment and housing of the 1927 Grand Parlor, which meets at San Pedro in May, were discussed and the proposed meeting place inspected. All arrangements outlined by the San Pedrans were given hearty approval by the visiting officials. The gathering will bring to San Pedro the largest crowd of visitors in its history, and they are assured a royal time.

N.D. GRAND PRESIDENT TO VISIT.

November 17, President E. E. Baldwin and W. F. Durr of Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 N.S.G.W. visited Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 N.D.G.W. and presented the latter with two pictures of the prize-winning Armistice Day float, together with the ribbon of award, beautifully framed. Nine applications for membership were presented. The following committee was appointed to meet with the committee of Sepulveda that is arranging for next year's N.S.G.W. Grand Parlor: Rudecinda Dodson, Florence Schoneman, Margaret Dever, Anna Spickler, Mildred Walzer.

Grand President Pearl Lamb will officially visit Rudecinda December 10. A banquet will be served at 6:30 and a large class of candidates will be initiated. All Native Daughters are invited. The Poppy thimble club is planning a bazaar for December 2. To raise funds for the tree which the Parlor has pledged itself to purchase in the Grand Parlor's Humboldt County memorial grove of redwoods, a food sale will be held December 4.

The Parlor was well represented at the homeless children benefit ball in Los Angeles October 30 and also at the "Snowshoe" Thompson plaque dedication in Carthay Center November 14. Several members attended the supper meeting of Long Beach Parlor No. 154 N.D.G.W. October 27.

NATIVE SONS PLAN "STAG."

The barbecue given at White Point by Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 N.S.G.W. October 31 drew a good-sized crowd and netted several hundred more dollars for the Grand Parlor entertainment fund. An excellent feast was spread. In charge was a committee composed of William Reuter (chairman), Ed Reese, Tony Leonardo, August Traub, J. B. Alvarado, Ramon Sepulveda.

The Parlor's membership continues to grow, initiation being held nearly every meeting night. Plans are under way to increase the social activities, and to this end a dance is to be given the last Wednesday of each month.

December 15, Sepulveda will stage one of those "stags" for which it is famous and wants all the Native Sons in Los Angeles County to partake of its hospitality at that time. An exceptional program is promised, and No. 263 never "falls down." The committee that is arranging for the event is made up as follows: J. A. Brannen (chairman), J. J. Kaveney, R. Snodgrass, P. Sabano, H. E. Fairall, M. A. Bennett.

CASSIDY STILL LIVES.

"Just a line to let you know I am still in the land of the living, out here where the West begins, but many miles from God's country," runs a letter received by the Grizzly Bear from Charles Cassidy, well known in San Pedro. "I am here in the Federal Government's service, recruiting for the navy.

"I received The Grizzly Bear today and it was like getting a Christmas present. Remember me to the bunch of Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 N.S.G.W.," to which Cassidy belongs. The letter was dated Aberdeen, South Dakota, November 3.

OLD TIMER PASSES.

Captain Michael Duffy, for forty-two years a resident of San Pedro, died October 26. He was a native of Ireland, aged nearly 85, and is survived by seven children, among them Mrs. Dora Duffy-Olds (Rudecinda 230 N.D.G.W.).

Native Daughters of the Golden West

VETS TO HAVE FINE CHRISTMAS, THANKS TO NATIVE DAUGHTERS.

SAN JOSE—IN ORDER THAT THE PATIents in its ward at the United States Veterans' Hospital at Palo Alto, Santa Clara County, may have a specially fine Christmas, the Thursday Afternoon Club of Vendome 100 entertained at whist October 21. Observatory 177 N.S.G.W. is joining with the Parlor's hospital committee, headed by Mrs. Charles O. Deau, to see that the veterans enjoy the season thoroughly. Vendome has a special ward of boys to look after at the hospital and, incidentally, recently discovered a member of Castro 232 N.S.G.W. (San Francisco) in another ward and he is included in the good times provided. His letters to the Parlor always express appreciation to the Native Daughters.

A class of candidates were initiated November 18, and a birthday party for the November girls, with Mrs. Dorothy Mancini as chairman of the evening, was featured. Past President Marian Dellwig recently entertained the officers who served during her regime with a dinner and reception at her home.

Everybody in and around San Jose is cordially invited to attend the dancing party, sponsored by the four Parlors in this city, in Scottish Rite auditorium, December 4; the proceeds will go to the homeless children agency. To help further its activities Vendome will have a day and evening bazaar December 9. Christmas gifts and novelties will be on sale, and there will be a program and dancing in the evening. Mrs. Lotta Koppel is the general chairman.

Benefit Whist Nets $300.

Centerville—Grand President Pearl Lamb officially visited Betsy Ross 238 November 5. The guests, numerous in number, were greeted by a four-piece orchestra and a cheerful fire. Baskets of red and yellow chrysanthemums, interspersed with potted ferns, were everywhere in evidence. From tables decorated with holly-berries, chrysanthemums and red, yellow and white candles, delicious refreshments were served.

So large was the crowd that attended the homeless children benefit whist given jointly by the Parlor and Washington 169 N.S.G.W. the hall was unable to accommodate them, seventy tables being the limit capacity. Forty prizes, donated by the business people of the community, were awarded. The benefit netted $300.

Betsy Ross, the "baby" of the Order, is making rapid headway and bids fair to soon become one of the outstanding Alameda County Parlors.

"Uncle Josh" Was There.

Santa Ana—Santa Ana 235 entertained the members of Santa Ana 265 N.S.G.W. and their families at a Hallowe'en dance. The decorations were in keeping with the occasion and seasonable refreshments were served. Many novelty dances and favor numbers were featured.

A number of interesting characters participated, including "Uncle Josh" (Mrs. Louise Potts), in linen duster, goatee and bandana handkerchief. "His" clever antics amused the crowd and "he" was awarded the women's prize. In the men's field, R. F. Hazard, in Spanish costume, was the prize winner.

Charter Members Birthday Guests.

Byron—Donner 193 celebrated its fifteenth institution anniversary November 4 by acting as hostess to four of the remaining charter members—Grace Krumland, Clara Houston, Maude Plumley, Elizabeth Plumley. A fourth, Diana Middleton, was unable to attend. Each was presented with a beautiful bowl, symbolizing a content of love and esteem.

The history of the Parlor was reviewed, and Clara Houston, accompanied by Mary Armstrong, sang "I Love You, California." Delicious refreshments, including a pretty birthday cake, embellished with fifteen candles, were served. Place cards, containing the birth dates, instead of the names, of those assembled jogged the memories to the point of reflection that "the clock setter, that bold sexton, Time, is the herald of truth."

October 20 the Parlor initiated three candidates, among them being Mary Armstrong, only daughter of President Margaret Armstrong. D.D.G.P. Frances Westover of Pittsburg was in attendance and was presented with a token of love and esteem. A tamale supper and social hour terminated the meeting.

Interesting Meeting.

Sutter Creek—With thirty-eight members in attendance, Amapola 80 had an interesting meeting November 12. The board of trustees, as November hostesses, served delicious refreshments and presented a delightful Armistice Day program. The hall and tables were beautifully decorated in keeping with the day.

Pioneers Entertained.

Lincoln—Placer 138 had its annual reunion for the Pioneers October 23 and many responded and gave interesting reminiscences of early days. Decorations were in Hallowe'en colors and the favors were miniature gold-bags filled with golden candy nuggets, symbolizing the days of '49. Each guest was presented with a gift by the Parlor. The guests of honor were Mrs. Mary B. Sanders, Mrs. Nannie Kennedy, William Findley, James Landis.

A delightful luncheon was served, Mrs. Bertha Landis officiating as toastmistress. Toasts were responded to by Miss Carrie Parlin, Mrs. Florence Berry, Mrs. Laura Gay, Miss Florence Clark, Mrs. May Herold, Mrs. Winnifred Tofft, Mrs. Adele Williamson, Mrs. Nellie Ramsey, Mrs. Mabel Ahart, Mrs. Norma Obexer, Miss Viola Lasswell. A musical entertainment, furnished by Mms. Obexer and Jansen, followed the speaking.

Native Sons Entertained.

Pescadero—Grand President Pearl Lamb, accompanied by D.D.G.P. Marguerite Sullivan, officially visited Ano Nuevo 180 October 30. The meeting hall and banquet room were decorated in Hallowe'en colors. Previous to the meeting a banquet was served. Many interesting speeches were made by visiting members. On the Parlor's behalf Rose Bennett presented Mrs. Lamb with a piece of silver.

November 3 the Parlor entertained members of Pebble Beach 230 N.S.G.W. at a social gathering. Games were featured and at midnight a delightful banquet was served. The committee in charge—Catherine Costello, Maria Adair, Grace Luis, Lena Morris, Carrie Dias—received great praise for its untiring efforts.

Historic Bible.

Sacramento— At a special meeting of Past Presidents' Association No. 1 seven candidates were initiated and officers were installed, Grand Trustee Lillie Tilden becoming president.

The association has received a Bible upon the fly-leaf of which appears the following: "Presented to Past Presidents' association No. 1 of the Native Daughters of the Golden West by Lizzie D. Allen, mother of Past President Mamie Millard, September 13, 1926. Rev. Lorenzo Waugh, father of Lizzie D. Allen, brought this Bible across the plains in 1852. Lizzie Waugh was born in Petaluma, November 20, 1852, and was married to George D. Allen of Vallejo township in 1867, by Rev. R. D. Williamson. If at any time this association surrenders its charter, this Bible is to be presented to Sutter's Fort."

Elks Lodge Presented Flag.

Taft— The evening of Armistice Day, November 11, a delegation of Miocene 2285's officers and members presented the California State (Bear) Flag to the local lodge of Elks, the occasion being the dedication of its new home.

Rollin Laird of Bakersfield delivered the presentation address on the Parlor's behalf; he dwelt on the romance and traditions of California and paid tribute to the indomitable spirit of the Pioneer Mothers and Fathers. Exalted Ruler C. A. Shaney responded for the Taft Elks and thanked Miocene for the flag.

Record Breaking Attendance at Benefit.

Hollister— October 28 Copa de Oro 105 enjoyed its annual Hallowe'en frolic in the form of an "old clothes" party. Members vied with each other in the display of antiquated attire and misfits, and all thought of formality was banished. Myrtle Palmtag was awarded a prize for the most grotesque costume. Hallowe'en games were indulged in and seasonal refreshments were served. The hall was appropriately decorated with cornstalks and jacko'lanterns, and a wonderfully happy evening was spent in the telling of ghost stories and other appropriate amusements.

The evening of Armistice Day the annual benefit for the homeless kiddies was given under the joint auspices of the Parlor and Fremont 44 N.S.G.W. Bridge and 500 were enjoyed by the largest attendance of card players at any card party given in Hollister this season. The hall was tastefully decorated with American Flags and masses of colorful chrysanthemums. Suitable awards were made. Plentiful and tasty refreshments were served at the close of the card playing. In addition to the card game, a large housewife's market-basket, filled with all sorts of groceries and valued at about fifty dollars, together with a ten-dollar kitchen table, was disposed of to add to the proceeds. The Parlors realized $255 for their efforts and the amount will be forwarded to the central committee to aid in the wonderful work the Native Daughters and Native Sons are doing for California's homeless children and childless homes.

Bazaar a Success.

Quincy— The bazaar of Plumas Pioneer 219 was a great success, netting $176. The various booths were pleasingly decorated and the various articles for sale were displayed in an attractive manner. A program of readings, musical numbers and dancing was presented.

Thanksgiving Party.

Oroville— Three candidates were initiated November 3 by Gold of Ophir 190 and refreshments were served by a committee composed of Hazel Stoner, Jessie Cress, Verna Parker. A box of gifts was ordered sent Mrs. Fern Damon Rose, a member residing at Lovalton. The Parlor had a float in the Armistice Day parade at Gridley and also marched.

The annual Thanksgiving party of Gold of Ophir and Argonaut 8 N.S.G.W. was a most enjoyable one. A guessing contest in which baby pictures of members of both Parlors were introduced was a feature. A potato race, farmyard hunt and other games added to the jollity

PIONEER MOTHER QUIETLY SLIPS AWAY FROM LOVED ONES.

Santa Barbara—Recently in this city occurred the death of another of California's Pioneers, Laura Isabella Littlefield, who was born in Potosi, Missouri, August 7, 1850, the daughter of Cyrus and Eveline Hinkson. Her forbears on her father's side came from Ireland in 1734 and settled in Philadelphia; her mother's family were pioneers in Kentucky. So, it was not strange that the urge to press westward to new fields was strong in the hearts of her parents, who came across the plains to California in a covered wagon drawn by oxen and, after many hardships, settled in Drytown, Amador County, early in 1852.

After a few years the family, consisting of father, mother and eleven children, moved to Sacramento City, where three brothers were prominent in the legal life of that city, the last remaining one, Judge Add C. Hinkson, dying a few years ago. About 1864 the Hinkson family moved back to Amador County, this time to Jackson, where deceased met and married Nathan Twining Littlefield. Five children were born there, two of whom, N. Forrest, and Mrs. Daisy Prideaux of Santa Barbara, a contralto singer of note who is often heard over the radio, survive.

Mrs. Littlefield was a woman of most unusual intellectuality. A great reader always, even up to the time she was stricken, she was vitally interested in everything that was taking place in the world. She counted her friends by the score and kept up a wide correspondence, chiefly with young people. Being a Christian, she was ever an inspiration of joy and helpfulness to all about her. Her mind was keen to the last, when she just closed her eyes and slipped quietly away from her loved ones.—(Communicated.)

MEXICAN WAR VETERANS NOT ALL DEAD, SAYS SURVIVOR.

Recent issues of a number of California newspapers contained an account of the death of a man in this state, who was claimed to be the last veteran of the Mexican War. The account of the death of this man, and particularly the claim made about him, came to the attention of W. H. Ranes of this city, who vigorously denies that all veterans of the Mexican War have passed on. "Dad," as he is familiarly known by every man, woman and child in this section, declares that he served in Company B, First Ohio Regiment, under General Winfield Scott, and saw action in many of the important battles fought during 1846-47.

Although 96 years old, "Dad" has a good memory and can relate interesting accounts of those stirring days. He is as active as the average man 20 years younger, and is known locally as one of the best melon growers in this part of the San Joaquin Valley.—Manteca Bulletin.

the evening. The festivities concluded with sumptuous banquet at which there were eral addresses. Mms. Frank Boyle, Frank ellos and W. B. Hengy made up the arrange- nts committee, while Miss Irene Lund super- d the banquet.

Successful Benefit Whist.

Hayward Hayward 122 had a "funny hes" party October 21 at which Hallowe'en costumes as well as those of by-gone days were featured. A large delegation was present from Fruitvale 177. The banquet hall was transformed into a scene of Hallowe'en festivity and there was much merriment.

October 27 the Parlor, along with Eden 113 N.S.G.W., gave a joint whist for the benefit of the homeless children. Fifty-two tables were in operation, and the affair was both a social and financial success.

A BIT O' FARMING

PREPARED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY M. H. ELLIS

STEPS TAKEN TO MAKE FRUIT GROWING PROFITABLE

THERE HAVE BEEN FEW SEASONS IN recent years when the fresh fruit growers of California have received anything like a fair return for their labor and investment. The present season has been no exception, and all who are connected with the industry have come to the conclusion that something must be done.

Something has been done, or at least started. The larger fresh fruit shippers at last have allied themselves to form a clearing house for the distribution of California fruit, in order to avoid the disastrous gluts and competition that have wiped out profits in the past. In fact, this clearing house plan already has been given a trial in the late season shipments, and it worked as well as could be expected, with a demoralized market as a foundation.

Steps have been taken to form a growers' committee, with a representative on the basis of every thousand cars shipped, which will back the plan, and further it. This committee, on the basis of this year's shipments, will consist of about seventy-nine members; and if any kind of an agreement can be reached, such as was proposed at the Placer County Fruit Growers' Convention at Auburn, Placer County, or the State Farmers' and Fruit Growers' Convention at Fullerton, Orange County, the plan may work. Certainly no industry is more in need of co-operation and less in need of throat-cutting competition. The shippers took the initiative because they could quite easily foresee they would be out of business if they could not show profits for the growers instead of losses. The grower should back it because he wants profits.

But the plan is, as yet, mostly on paper. Such a clearing house plan worked in the Imperial Valley cantaloupe deal until the f.o.b. auction and other causes contributed to its downfall. The State of California is much larger than the Imperial Valley, and will be correspondingly harder to handle. Temptations will come to the grower from wildcat buyers; temptations will come to the shippers from strong markets. If all hands stick to their oars and give the plan the fair trial it merits, it should prove successful. If it fails, the California grower of fruits—both tree and vine—will be hard put to it to find a profitable sale for his fresh product. It is the biggest plan, and the most promising, that has been put before agriculturists of the state in recent years.

BOUNTIFUL HARVEST.

California's crops, particularly the specialties, in most instances came through a most bountiful harvest. Pears, cotton, rice, raisins, grapes, almonds, oranges, apples and potatoes showed a marked increase in production. Walnuts and olives showed a decrease. With the exception of the perishable fruits, prices bid fair to bring good returns. All in all, there is little in the situation generally to found any basis for pessimism, and early season rains augur well for the coming year.

PREPARE FOR BIG CROPS.

One of the jobs that the fruit grower may well care for during the winter season, is that of preparing his trees for big crops, not only for next year, but for the life of the tree. The old board prop is out of date. Economically it is no longer sound, with internal wire bracing done more cheaply. The wire brace holds the tree, not one branch, prevents breaking, and wind cannot shake it down. Neither is it in the way during irrigation and cultivation. Screweyes are inserted in the main branches and connected by wires to a ring in the center, giving a permanent, cheap brace that is out of the way.

NOW'S THE TIME.

Pear blister mite should be taken in hand right now. Full dormant strength of lime sulphur, applied early in December, will do more good than at blossom time in the spring. See that the application is made thorough, and if it is repeated in the spring, no harm will be done. But be sure it is done now, as well.

DEHORN CATTLE.

Dehorned cattle are not a fad, but a sound economic practice. The cost is about 10 cents a head, an expense that is more than made up by the savings made in shipping, avoiding of injuries later, better fleshing and saving in feed. Dehorning is not cruel, it is quite the opposite, if correctly done. The operation may be done by saw or clippers, but if by clippers the tools must be sharp and kept sharp. Disinfectant must be used on the instruments at every operation, and a disinfectant paint should follow, on the wound.

Cool weather always is to be chosen, to avoid trouble with flies, and to get a good job, the horns should be cut off at least a quarter of an inch below the junction of the skin and the base of the horn, otherwise an unsightly nubbin will result. Horns are expensive to the stockman, to the feeder, to the buyer and to the butcher. They result in discontent, waste of feed, bruises and small gains. There no longer is any argument against the practice.

PRE-COOLING MUST COME.

Pre-cooling of fresh fruit shipped East must come. Maturity studies go for naught when warm fruit is placed in a car and started to market. With an average temperature of around 52 degrees, the fruit at the bottom of the car, near the ice bunkers, cools rapidly and there is no more ripening. Fruit in the top of the car cools slowly, goes right ahead ripening and arrives soft, while that near the bunkers at the bottom is green. Some of the load may be good, but not a large percentage.

Pre-cooled, much of the problem is solved, and some of the shippers this year held the cars twelve hours after loading while a fan expelled the warm air. That delays traffic, however, and will result in a new tariff for extra ice. Another plan, tried successfully, is to force cold air from an outside cooling plant through a pipe and into the car, reducing the temperature by 10 to 15 degrees in four hours. Whatever the method, pre-cooling must come if the fresh fruit market is to hold up.

WHY NOT POULTRY IN ORCHARD?

Many fruit growers are introducing poultry into their orchards. And why not? The trees, especially in the interior valleys, furnish v uable shade as well as an excellent run. Gr food becomes almost automatically availa protein in the form of bugs is added, fertiliz given the trees, many injurious insects are stroyed, and the land returns two crops combination strengthening rather than weak ing the soil. There are many farmers who h found profit in the idea, and there are m more who could.

DANGEROUS DAYS AHEAD.

Just ahead are the dangerous days for trees in the orchard. The warm, sunshiny d of winter, followed by frosty or freezing nig will cause more sunburn injury than the hot of August weather. During the bright, wa winter days, temperatures of close to 100 grees may be registered in the bark of the t unprotected by leaves. At night, there is a sh reduction of perhaps 70 degrees.

There comes the danger. The protection whitewash. Use it in the early summer if will; undoubtedly it will do no harm. But us certainly this winter, before those decep warm days arrive. About a pound of cemen five of lime will give the whitewash a tende to stick faster than it ever has before.

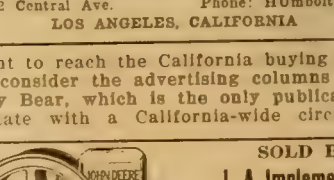
DAFFODIL SUGGESTION.

If your daffodils fail to bloom well this spr try lifting them from the soil next summer, a they have been thoroughly ripened by a grad drying of the soil. Taking them out is not essary, unless worms or rodents attack th but they must be dried out, else there will splendid growth of greenery, but mighty blossoms.

BETTER GOATS.

Feed fresh orchard prunings to goats, and mineral supply in their bodies will be rep ished. Goat milk contains more minerals cow's milk, hence the drain upon the goa heavier. Fresh orchard prunings are relished the goats, and they contain a high mineral tent. They will replance shrubs, upon w goats naturally browse for this part of their f Better kids and better does will result.

PREPARE FOR JACK FROST.



Most orchardists are preparing for dorm spraying, for pruning, for the winter cle and for the general run of orchard work. T is one thing that the careful orchardist in parts of California must not neglect his lighting equipment. Whether orchard heate the less efficient smudge pots, the equip should be overhauled, thermometers tested,

BE THOROUGH IN SPRAYING.

If dormant spraying [illegible] results, it must be done right. In the first place, the trees must not be dry, either from south winds or from lack of soil moisture. The spray rig must be adequate, driving at high pressure, and the spray used should be from a reliable dealer carrying known brands. Be sure the coverage is 100 percent, with particular attention paid to the new growth. Apply liberally, as the cost of the spray is comparatively small, and a few remaining pests will start all the trouble you are trying to avoid. Be thorough in spraying.

PORK UP—FEED DOWN.

Hogs are coming back. In fact, they have arrived. Those who held to their swine during the depression are due to make money, and the "in and outer" is now buying brood sows for twice the price for which he could have secured them six months ago. Pork is up, feed is down, the supply of hogs in California is far short, the stage is all set for a real recovery of the hog business, and with its reestablishment will come prosperity for the man who held his faith in hogs.

BEST FERTILIZER.

Animal manure always will be the fertilizer upon which soil productivity is based. Citrus growers of the state have realized this, perhaps, ahead of the producers of other fruits, and it has remained for a citrus grower, the Minnehaha Ranch of Tulare County, to produce its fertilizer. A shipment of 125 head of well-bred steers recently was received there. Feeding can be carried on during the winter, when the season is slack, and a good profit returned on the operation. The fertilizer, hard to secure in that district, is a part of the by-profits that will not be inconsiderable.

SUMMING UP.

This is the season for farmers to get together to review the ending year, discuss the present and look into the future. The biggest of the winter's meetings, the annual convention of the farmers and fruit growers, was held at Fullerton under the guidance of the State Department of Agriculture. The California Wool Growers' Association held its annual meeting last month, and the California Cattlemen's Association will rejoice over improved prospects at San Francisco soon. During the third week of November, the annual Pacific Slope Dairy Show was held in Oakland. The California State Beekeepers' Association will hold its convention in Los Angeles the second week of December.

The annual short course in deciduous fruits and grapes began at the University Farm, Davis, November 29, and will end December 4. This course will be notable this year through the visit of Dr. L. H. Bailey, known as the father of modern American horticulture, professor emeritus of horticulture at Cornell University, after more than half a century of active participation in the fruit-growing industry.

GRAPE GROWERS ORGANIZE.

Grape growers of California have started a co-operative marketing organization that gives indication of a much-merited success. The grape deal in California in recent years has been a haphazard affair that more often than not showed red ink in the ledger. A committee of twenty-nine is to effect permanent organization, and it is hoped the 1927 crop may get a fair deal on distribution, with a consequent increase in prices.

REAL FIGHT IS ON.

The College of Agriculture of the University of California has not forgotten its promise to sugar-beet growers of a real fight against the sugar-beet leaf hopper. Two methods of waging the fight have been adopted. Resistant strains are being bred through careful selection; and the search for a parasite to devour the hopper bodily has been carried into South America. Success in this campaign means thousands of dollars to California and, in the last analysis, the saving of an important branch of the state's agriculture.

FARMERS' "KIDS'" PREFERENCES.

What do farmers' boys and girls like to do? A survey recently conducted by the Institute of Social and Religious Research found that more boys like to swim than to do anything else, with hunting, baseball, reading, basketball, fishing and football following, in the order named. Girls prefer reading, with swimming a poor second, followed by basketball, riding, dancing, tennis and hiking.

LONG BEACH IDEAL TRAINING GROUND FOR SWIM ENTRANTS

A. A. Miller

(SECRETARY PUBLICITY DEPARTMENT, LONG BEACH CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

THE $25,000 CASH PRIZE OFFERED by William Wrigley Jr. to the first man or woman to negotiate the channel between Catalina Island and the mainland is daily drawing aquatic stars to Long Beach from every section in the United States. Already a dozen or more swimmers of note are assembled here undergoing strenuous training from early morning into all hours of the night. Many initial attempts have been made without success to swim the channel.

The relay team composed of Southern California aquatic stars which made the first successful attempt from Long Beach, reaching Catalina after twenty-three hours and seventeen minutes, and swimming a distance of thirty-five miles, found the feat a severe test indeed. The relay was undertaken to determine variations in water temperature, currents, etc. Several other attempts have been made by various swimmers since, but with no near success. Probably the outstanding conclusion reached as a result of the pioneer adventure across the waters of the channel is that the first well-equipped distance swimmer who attempts the feat alone will succeed only provided the necessary endurance is forthcoming.

Whether individual swimmers trying the channel at the shortest point between Point Fermin and the isthmus, in the Wrigley attempt January 15, find it a better course is still to be learned, but the relay swim certainly established the fact that the course between Long Beach and Avalon is safe and practically direct. The chances are excellent that, in view of the knowledge gained on that course, the first individual to successfully swim the channel will do it over the Long Beach-Avalon course.

Just what this means to Southern California in the way of advertising cannot be estimated. The name Catalina Island will be emblazoned upon the front page of every newspaper in the world, just as the English Channel has been exploited. And the very fact that the swim is scheduled for midwinter, right when people over the greater part of the globe are shaking and shivering with the cold winter winds, will add to the interest of the story.

What if it cannot be conquered? What if it takes months of training and trial even to approximate victory? So much the better. That which is conquered now without a struggle is easily forgot. That which takes time and energy is advertised and never forgot. There will always be people willing to try the swim. The indomitable spirit of Americans, which made them reach the pole, conquer the air and swim the English Channel, will take them, likewise, across Catalina channel, though the current be swift and the sea choppy.

To the average Easterner, Catalina is a magic isle of peacocks and canary birds, with beautiful fish disporting themselves about, viewed from glass-bottom boats. And to have this island and Long Beach advertised together throughout the world, is a great publicity opportunity.

Ideal training accommodations, reasonably low rental rates, easy access from training quarters to the long seven-mile beach, together with all the various recreational facilities available, enable entrants to undergo their training period here with little expense and maximum enjoyment to themselves.

Here can be found that great American institution, a county fair, with all the sideshows, exhibits, rube band and other trimmings.

Here one can find ultra delicious foods to satisfy the most fastidious epicurean from six until twelve.

Here are the largest and best ventilated dance ballrooms in Southern California, where both young and old may enjoy the modern jazz or the old-fashioned waltz.

Here, it may be truthfully said, can be found more in the way of real jolly amusements than anywhere else in the southland.

The Long Beach amusement zone is as interesting and colorful as Coney Island. A broadwalk of great length extends from one end of the waterfront to the other and is bordered on both sides by the many concessions and attractions. Approximately $15,000 is spent yearly by the amusement zone owners to provide special features alone in the way of bathing beauty parades, baby parades, swimming events, fireworks carnivals, Hallowe'en carnivals, frolics, etc.

This year the largest Christmas tree ever erected in Long Beach will be placed and decorated on the zone. It will be lighted by hundreds of fancy electric lights, strung with silver

The conclusion of the year's entertainment on New Year's Eve will be a mammoth celebration. A number of unusual features are planned and every hour of the evening will be concluded with a gorgeous display of fireworks. The New Year will be ushered in with all the joyous celebration due the new visitor.

INCREASED PROSPERITY EVIDENT.

Owing to the fact that Long Beach has 500 hotels and apartment houses, where rental rates are reasonable and cover a wide range, the city is now enjoying what may be said to be the best tourist year in its history. The climate is ideal, and Long Beach is evidently on the threshold of a period of increased prosperity.

Hotels, apartment houses and rental agencies report many new tourist arrivals and indications of a lively winter season. The Hotel Virginia plans a 600 room addition, to cost nearly $2,000,000.

The Edison Company proposes to construct here a $60,000,000 enlargement of its power plant, and in the course of its construction 1,800 men will be employed for two years.

Big oil wells have come in with daily yields of several thousand barrels, providing both deeper sands in the old Signal Hill field and rich new areas in the field on the east side of Long Beach.

Establishment of the Ford Motor Company's factory on Cerritos Channel, Long Beach Harbor, has advanced with the beginning of the huge fill on the site.

Construction of several downtown buildings has been started, and plans for other large structures are reported completed or well under way. Bank clearings and deposits, postoffice figures and other indices show decidedly satisfactory conditions existing here.

NATIVE DAUGHTERS' DRILL TEAM MAKES FIRST PUBLIC APPEARANCE.

Following initiation, November 17, Long Beach Parlor No. 154 N.D.G.W. under the direction of Violet Henshilwood, November chairman, presented a one-act playlet, "A Quilting Party," held in the beautiful garden of President Bertha Hitt. All of the costumes were of the fifty-years-ago styles. It proved to be the best treat the Parlor has enjoyed for a long time. Those participating were: Bertha Hitt (hostess), Clara Fay, Rose Ford, Daisy Hansen, Violet Henshilwood, Leona Dodd, Lucretia Coates, Kitty Dillon. Refreshments followed the playlet. The Spanish dinner and bazaar of November 3 was a success in every way.

The California thimble club met at the home of Violet Henshilwood November 10, and on the 17th at Kate McFadyen's home. At the latter meeting the time was employed in making a beautiful satin quilt for Miss Marie McFadyen.

a member of the Parlor, who, at holiday time, is to become the bride of Fred Monroe. D.D.G.P. Bertha Hitt and other members of the Parlor paid a visit, November 17, to Rudecinda Parlor No. 230, at San Pedro.

Long Beach has a drill team of which it is justly proud. The team made its initial public appearance in the "Snowshoe" Thompson parade at Carthay Center, November 14. Little Maxine Pitts carried the Parlor's banner, Mary Gillen and Marie Hestor were the flagbearers and Charlotte Wharton was the drummer-girl; following them marched Rose Ford, Leonora Dodd, Vivian Burke, Eleanor Johnson, Mary Young, Ella Kenyon, Alice Maldow and Captain Lillian Lasater, all in attractive white and gold uniforms. The drill team, organized by Captain Lillian Lasater, meets every Tuesday evening for practice. During November the team sponsored two card parties, at the homes of Mrs. Edgar McFadyen and Mrs. Stephen Ford; both were social and financial successes.

Long Beach entertained many visitors October 27, among them a big delegation from San Diego Parlor No. 208. Kate McFadyen was chairman of the evening. Helen Cervantes entertained with vocal selections, and among the speakers were Past Grand President Grace S. Stoermer and Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas. Music during the serving of refreshments was furnished by the Melody Makers.

At Recreation Park, December 4, the Federation of States Societies is to have a tree planting and basket picnic. Each state has the privilege of naming a tree for some one very dear or noted. Long Beach will participate, and for California Julia E. Arborn, the Parlor's representative in the federation, has chosen the name of Eliza P. Donner-Houghton, a member of the "Donner" party, Pioneers of 1846. All Native Sons and Native Daughters are invited to participate in the ceremonies.

NATIVE SONS TO HAVE DANCE.

At the November 17 meeting of Long Beach Parlor No. 239 N.S.G.W. arrangements were perfected for a dance to be given at the Gould Hall, North Long Beach, December 15. The entertainment committee, F. E. Brittain, chairman, put on a boxing bout and an acrobatic stunt. Ray Poque, a member of the Parlor, has taken unto himself a wife.

Do a bit of figuring before you purchase chicks to fill in your laying flock next spring. If you buy just chicks, you will be lucky to get stock that will average 150 eggs a year. You pay about 15 cents a chick for that kind of stock. With eggs at 40 cents a dozen, every extra dozen you get means 40 cents more profit. If you get chicks from 200-egg stock, you will get four dozen more eggs. And you pay perhaps twice as much for your chicks.

Fifteen cents more a chick—four dozen more eggs. At 40 cents a dozen, $1.60 less the 15 cents additional cost, a clear gain of $1.45, less perhaps a bit of extra feed the hen will eat to produce the extra four dozen. Reliable pedigreed stock is easy to get now, figure yourself if it will pay.

The mother may forget the child

But I'll remember thee, my friend,
And all that thou has done for me."

solid one, before they began to move. They were under fire fully three-quarters of an hour before arriving near enough to reach the fort with their small guns. In the hope of restraining the Spanish fire, the guard were placed in the most exposed and conspicuous stations in the ship. Here they stood and frantically pleaded with their countrymen to cease firing, but without avail. At every discharge they fell upon their faces and showed themselves, naturally enough, in a state of collapse. As soon as they came within range, the Americans discharged a broadside at the fort from their six small guns, and at once saw numbers of the garrison scrambling out of the back of the fort and running away up the hill. A second broadside was discharged, and after that no one could be seen at the fort except one man who stood upon the ramparts and waved his hat.

There is no record of any blood being shed in this first "Battle of San Diego," although the ship was considerably damaged. Her rigging was struck several times early in action, and while abreast of the fort in the narrow channel several balls struck her hull, one of which was "between wind and water." Safe out of the harbor, the terrified guard, who expected nothing less than death, were set on shore. Here they relieved their feelings, first by falling on their knees in prayer, and then by springing up and shouting, "Vivan, vivan los Americanos!"

There is no doubt that Corporal Velasquez and his men did everything in their power to sink the "Lelia Byrd." The battery was stimulated by the presence of the fiery commandant, and, perhaps, the corporal thought it prudent to make a showing of zeal, in view of previous conduct. Captain Cleveland expresses the opinion that the contraband skins were offered them treacherously, for the express purpose of involving them in difficulties. It is a fact, however, that the corporal was placed under arrest for his part in the two affairs of the "Alexander" and the "Lelia Byrd," accused of engaging in forbidden trade. The priest in charge of the Mission of San Luis Rey also wrote the commandant and asked for the return of one hundred and seventy skins which his Indian neophytes had smuggled on board the "Alexander," doubtless by his own direction; but he was refused.

The affair of the "Lelia Byrd," which caused tremendous excitement at the time, was long talked of on the Pacific Coast. They were still gossiping about it when Richard Henry Dana visited San Diego, thirty-three years later. The story was always told in a way to reflect great credit upon the Americans, though it is likely that they would have preferred less credit—and the otter skins.

In January 1804, Captain Joseph O'Cain, on a trading expedition in the "O'Cain," ventured to sail and ask for provisions. He had been mate of the "Enterprise" when she was at San Diego three years earlier. He had no passport and his request was refused. While his ship was in the harbor a Negro sailor named John Brown deserted from her and was afterwards sent to San Blas. Probably he was the first Negro ever seen in San Diego. There is no record of any American visitors in 1805, but there was much perturbation in Spain and Spanish-America respecting the supposed designs of the United States upon California. (Continued in JANUARY Number.)

CABRILLO MONUMENT PROJECT PLEDGED SAN DIEGANS' SUPPORT.

At a banquet November 3 sponsored by San Diego Parlor No. 108 N.S.G.W. and San Diego Parlor No. 208 N.D.G.W., many prominent San Diegans pledged their support to the undertaking to erect upon Point Loma a magnificient monument to the memory of the discoverer of California—Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo, Portuguese explorer who, with his flagship, the "San Salvador," entered San Diego Bay September 28, 1542. The Grand Parlor N.S.G.W. has pledged $10,000 toward the project.

CALIFORNIA

(MINNA McGARVEY.)

If the jewels of all the ages
Were caught in a gleaming store
They couldn't compare to the treasure
On a far-flung western shore.

Emeralds? The sheen of its waters
Is far more dark and green
Than any a sparkling necklace
On the breast of a rajah's queen.

Diamonds? Its scintillant sunlight
Puts all your glory to shame,
Diffusing joy with its brilliance,
A million facets of flame.

Rubies? The heart of its roses
Centers a far deeper hue,
Their petals distilling spiced fragrance—
Could this of a stone be true?

And sapphires? Ah! no such azure
Was e'er imprisoned by you
As smiles in the eyes of its children,
Harboring Heaven's own blue.

Then gold? It lies here uncounted,
A glimmering yellow hoard,
In the cups of its waving poppies
A priceless bounty stored.

All this is just California,
With never a lock or a key,
Where the hand of God has placed it,
On the edge of His shining sea.

Trinity National Forests, a tract of 136,000 acres covering the headwaters of the Trinity and Salmon Rivers and said by mountaineers to be one of the outstanding "wilderness" regions of the state, noted for its scenic wonders and fine fishing and hunting.

Echo Lake and Desolation Valley in the El Dorado National Forest, comprising 58,000 acres along the crest of the Sierra Nevada. This popular summer outing region is well known to vacationists and offers unusual opportunities for all forms of sport and enjoyment.

Lakes Basin of the Plumas National Forest, a wonderful vacation land of 9,050 acres located south of Blairsden on the Feather River and including Mount Elwell (7,866 feet), on which is located a forest service fire lookout observatory, and the noted fishing waters of Long, Gold and numerous other lakes.

Reversed Creek in the Mono National Forest, a high Sierra vacationland of 22,000 acres surrounding June, Gull and Silver Lakes, the home of the golden trout and some of the finest fishing waters in California.

These four new recreation units, combined with the Mount Shasta, San Gorgonio Range and the Laguna Mountain areas recently created, make a total of more than 275,000 acres of national forest land in California set aside primarily for recreational use.

CALIFORNIA INDIANS' PROGENITORS PETRIFIED INTO ROCKS.

The progenitors of the Mission Indians of California, the "first people," as they are called, were petrified into rocks and can still be seen at the ruins of the old village sites. So say the legends gathered among the California Indians by J. P. Harrington, of the Bureau of Ethnology, Smithsonian Institution, who devoted a year to intensive research, rescuing what can still be learned of the vanished culture of the Mission Indians.

Petrification seems to have been a common conception among the California tribesmen. At San Marcos, San Diego County, Harrington found boulders on a hillside which are the warriors of a mythic battle. Some have the blood from wounds running down their sides, seen as stains on the rock. He found also a curious medicine rock, the size of a man standing erect. It is surrounded at the present time by a grove of cactus which keeps the curious at a respectful distance.

The wanderings of the "first people" over the earth while it was still soft and muddy in its newness are also recorded, as spirit footprints on the rocks. These Harrington found at several places and photographed.

"Medicine" rocks with a practical aspect were discovered at Rincon, Santa Cruz County. They are two tall boulders standing some six feet apart. To have good luck in hunting, which required that one could jump successfully among the rocks in the mountains, it was the custom for Indian boys to spring from one to the other of these boulders.

During his researches, Harrington rescued from oblivion the secret of the construction of Mission Indian house. He employed one of the few survivors who still know how to make them and with him built a house of willow poles, thatched with deerbrush. It measured thirteen feet in diameter and was seven feet high. Harrington photographed the process step by step.

CLUE TO FOSSIL FOREST FOUND IN NAPA CONUTY.

Imbedded in fossil rock thousands of years old, impressions of leaves and pine needles have been uncovered in the Calistoga, Napa County, petrified forest by two University of California scientists—Dr. Ralph Chaney and Dr. Willis Jepson. The impressions provide irrefutable evidence of the species of trees in the forest.

Thirty feet under ground they made a discovery which geologists and botanists regard as important. Fossil rock was turned up which bore distinct impressions of the sequoia foliage and the leaves of the coast live oak. These foliage casts in the formation give a more definite evidence than any other scientific material yet discovered of the kind of trees which flourished in the great forest about one million years ago.

Many specimens of the rock and fossil formations were collected by the scientists and are now in the university museum of paleontology, where they will be studied.

CALIFORNIA'S PROGRESS

(CLARENCE M. HUNT.)

THE RECENTLY-ISSUED STATEMENT of State Controller Ray L. Riley, setting forth the assessed value of property in and the indebtedness of each of California's fifty-eight counties, contains much information of interest to those concerned with the state's progress. Among other things, it discloses that:

Kern is the largest county in the state in the number of assessed acres of land, 4,216,135. San Bernardino is next, with 2,654,054, and Fresno third, with 2,178,000. San Francisco, with 29,760, is the smallest.

Los Angeles is the state's richest county and is the only one whose grand total of all property reaches the billion-mark—$3,047,487,407. San Francisco comes next, with $982,560,022, and then Alameda, with $433,045,954. Alpine has the smallest grand total, $899,722.

The combined grand total of all property in the fifty-eight counties in 1926 is $128,715,344 greater than in 1925, the respective figures being $7,164,457,974 (1926), $7,035,742,630 (1925). Of this increase, one county alone—Los Angeles is credited with more than one-half—$73,220,490, to be exact.

The fifty-eight counties' combined total indebtedness increased $6,975,430.83 since 1925, the respective figures being $135,013,859.22 (1926), $128,038,428.39 (1925). Sixteen counties are free from debt—Amador, Calaveras, Humboldt, Inyo, Madera, Mariposa, Mono, Monterey, Nevada, Placer, Shasta, Sierra, Siskiyou, Trinity, Tuolumne, Yuba.

The counties' combined value of real estate increased $208,638,227 in the past year, advancing from $3,182,630,112 in 1925 to $3,391,268,339 in 1926. Improvements thereon also increased, going from $1,657,002,822 in 1925 to $1,715,189,269 in 1926, an increase of $58,186,447.

The value of personal property in the combined counties shows a 1926 decrease of $14,395,821 compared with 1925, the respective totals being $888,413,602 (1925), $874,017,781 (1926). Also, money and solvent credits are $27,320,742 less this year than last, the respective totals being $66,724,388 (1925), $39,403,646 (1926).

Twelve counties are listed, in the grand total of all property column, in the nine-figure class. The grand total of each for the years 1926 and 1925 follows:

County.	1926.	1925.
Los Angeles	$3,[illegible]299,305	$2,9[illegible]78,815
San Francisco	982,560,022	1,050,435,716

Kern	291,669,763	211,995,472

Contra Costa	103,040,954	99,031,572

Indicative of the development of California are the grand totals of all property in the combined fifty-eight counties of the state for the twelve past years:

1914	$3,232,646,152
1915	3,411,446,744
1916	3,578,146,141

1918	3,886,865,179
1919	4,067,432,918

1924	6,661,109,392
1925	7,085,742,640
1926	7,164,457,974

While, as shown by the above figures, the assessed wealth of the counties has shown a steady increase, so has the combined counties' total indebtedness, as shown by the following figures for the same years:

1914	$ 57,353,545.66
1915	62,628,614.43
1916	66,370,265.88

1925	128,038,428.39
1926	135,013,859.22

These figures reveal the fact that the counties' combined assessed valuation increased, from 1914 to 1926, $3,931,811,822, and their indebtedness increased, in the same period, $77,660,313.56.

YOSEMITE'S NEW MUSEUM HOUSES HISTORICAL DRAWINGS.

An added feature of California's Yosemite National Park is the recently-completed museum. Among the valuable exhibits obtained is a set of seventy-year-old original drawings of Yosemite scenes. Ten in number, they were made in 1855 and 1856 by Thomas Ayres, who accompanied the first party of sightseers into Yosemite Valley. They were the first pictures ever made of the valley, and would command a high price today in any collector's auction, it is said.

Four large exhibition rooms, a lecture hall, a library, a stock room, headquarters for the Nature Guide Service, work rooms and valuable exhibition material are included in the new museum.

Buena Vista's December calendar includes: lelly drive for disabled war veterans of the Letterman hospital and initiation, the 2nd; grab-bag and grocery store, the 9th; whist, the 16th; Christmas tree and children's party, the 30th.

INDOOR PICNIC.

Golden Gate Parlor No. 158 N.D.G.W. had an indoor picnic November 28 at which members of Golden Gate Parlor No. 29 N.S.G.W. were invited guests. Each of the girls provided a box lunch for two and these were placed upon a tablecloth spread upon the floor. Members and guests then seated themselves and enjoyed the feast.

After lunch games were played, which caused much merriment. Dancing and singing ended one of the most enjoyable evenings spent by both Parlors in many years.

N.D. GRAND PRESIDENT BANQUETED.

Castro Parlor No. 178 N.D.G.W. was hostess to Grand President Pearl Lamb November 2 at a beautifully-appointed banquet. A profusion of cut flowers adorned the table and the favors were yellow-paper rose bonbon cases, while the placecards extended the Parlor's welcome. Invitations had been sent to the grand officers and supervising district deputies of San Francisco and Alameda Counties and to D.D.G.P. Beatrice Teeling, and but few regrets were received. The guests and members of the Parlor were seated at the table when the Grand President was announced, and were she marched in to the strains of "I Love You California," all arose and gave her a rousing welcome.

After the banquet the ritual was exemplified. The committee had decorated the meeting place with fresh greens and cut flowers, and with members of the Parlor in beautiful evening gowns and the drill team in picturesque costumes, a very pretty picture was created. President Mae Nolan and her splendid staff of officers were highly commended by the Grand President. The new State Board Flag was displayed for the first time and was greatly admired. At the meeting's conclusion Castro's drill team gave an exhibition drill. These well trained girls displayed remarkable ability and received much praise from the delighted audience.

WOUNDED VETS CHEERED.

Twin Peaks Parlor No. 185 N.D.G.W. will have its annual Christmas tree party and bazaar December 4. Recently the drill team went to Crockett, Contra Costa County, and assisted in the dedication of a public school. The basketball team is playing every week and is anxious to see other Parlors organize teams.

Twin Peaks welfare committee, under the leadership of Harriet D. Cate, visited the Letterman hospital and entertained the wounded veterans with moving pictures and supplied them with candy and cigarettes.

NATIVE SONS GUESTS.

Mission Parlor No. 227 N.D.G.W. had a Hallowe'en party and banquet recently at which members of Mission Parlor No. 38 N.S.G.W. were guests of honor. The evening was spent in dancing and playing appropriate games.

In charge of the affair was this committee: Hazel Croswird, Wilma Joyce, Catherine Davis, Catherine Estalita, Emily Ramsden, Emily La Housan, Helen Burger, May Barry, Anne Saxon, Emily Sloan, Louise Cese, Addie Geister, Mary Frederickson, Mary Horgan, Constance Dunn, Mary Fitzmeyer, Mamie Cuneo, Irene Fletcher, Hannah Barry, Claire Geisner, Minnie Davis.

MAYOR CONGRATULATED.

Members of Niantic Parlor No. 105 N.S.G.W. are now taking more interest in Native Son affairs than ever before. The Parlor is represented in both the baseball and basketball tournaments now holding forth. The basketball team recently made a trip to Vallejo and defeated the U. S. Marines by a 32-to-20 score. Although the baseball team has lost three out of five games it still hopes to win the N.S.G.W. League championship. The Parlor co-operated actively with the committee in charge of the

At the November 3 meeting of Niantic the following resolution was adopted unanimously:

"Whereas, His honor, Mayor James Rolph Jr., has, in his wisdom, appointed as a member of the Board of Supervisors our highly esteemed and beloved member, Lewis F. Byington, and

"Whereas, Brother Byington has been a loyal and enthusiastic member of this Parlor for the past many years, during which time he has been an ardent worker for the Order, as well as being a loyal and patriotic citizen whose efforts have always been directed for the welfare and upbuilding of this community and the State of California; therefore, be it.

"Resolved, That his honor, Mayor Rolph, be highly commended by Niantic Parlor for the appointment of Brother Byington, and this Parlor extends to his honor, Mayor Rolph, its hearty congratulations and best wishes for the continuance of a successful administration."

TURKEY TROT BIG SUCCESS.

November 17 Olympus Parlor No. 189 and Fremont Parlor No. 59 N.D.G.W. gave their monthly joint social dance. The ballroom was decorated with greens, amongst which were stuffed animals, the turkey predominating. A large crowd attended and enjoyed themselves with the dances and novelty numbers introduced by George W. Schonfeld, the floor manager. One of the most pleasing numbers was the turkey trot, danced to the tune of the "Turkey in the Straw."

The good of the order committee—Dan Sheehan (chairman), Louis Magini, Harvey Carte, Henry McGowan, George W. Schonfeld—disposed of orders for turkeys, frozen puddings and boxes of candy. A great many who attended went home with their national bird assured, as well as their dessert. George Collins, Frank Butler and Lester Castillo served on the reception committee and saw that all present became acquainted.

APPRECIATIVE.

Through The Grizzly Bear, George W. Schonfeld of Olympus Parlor No. 189 N.S.G.W., candidate for justice of the peace at the recent election, expresses appreciation for the support accorded him. Although defeated, he is consoled by the knowledge that nearly 50,000 votes were cast for him.

BOOK REVIEWS

(MARGERY BOYD.)

"COMING THROUGH THE RYE."

By Grace Livingston Hill; J. B. Lippincott Company, Publishers, Philadelphia; Price, $2.00.

Romayne Ransom directed the taxi driver happily toward home. She little dreamed of the outcome of that short journey. Blithely she ran up the steps, into the hall of her home, there to stop—aghast.

Plain-clothes men and officers closed in around her. She protested indignantly, but they were adamant. Her father, her brother—they would drive these impertinent men away. They did not. Instead, Romayne saw her father waver and fall, her brother turn and run.

Grief and sudden shock are hard to bear, but Romayne Ransom was an aristocrat. Her brave struggle to make the best of her disaster cost her dearly. However, she won the fight and the love of Evan Sherwood beside.

"Coming Through the Rye" is a prohibition romance, which goes to prove that though matters may go awry port is never far away.

"MISSION TALES IN THE DAYS OF THE DONS."

By Mrs. A. S. C. Forbes; Gem Publishing Company, Los Angeles; Price, $3.00.

"Mission Tales in the Days of the Dons,"—one can almost hear the far-off tinkle of the mission bells and see the gallant dons cantering gaily along El Camino Real, so vividly does the book conjure them.

Each of the twelve stories contains a little romance built around the history of early California and the life of the mission days. They are fascinating stories, in which fiction and reality are skillfully blended.

Mrs. A. S. C. Forbes will be remembered as the author of "California Missions and Landmarks" and "El Camino Real." A student of the missions and the history surrounding them, she is well able to write with authority on any subject pertaining to them.

"Mission Tales in the Days of the Dons" is a beautifully editioned book. Its eight full-page illustrations and decorative drawings by Langdon Smith make a fitting setting.

"THE DEAD RIDE HARD."

By Louis Joseph Vance; J. B. Lippincott Company, Publishers, Philadelphia; Price, $2.00.

It was a desperate summons that caused Denise Vay to venture forth on such a howling night. The rain poured down in torrents, the car lurching and jouncing over the muddy roads. The call to loyalty never fell unheeded on Vay's aristocratic ears. If all Hungary rose to halt her, the girl vowed to find a way to her queen's side. The abrupt stopping of the machine made an end of weary imaginings. Rough soldiers of the "Red Revolution" seized the girl with rude hands. Death seemed unescapable. Suddenly, as though in answer to her trembling prayers, a rescuer snatched her away, unharmed.

The romance of Andrew Brull, American, and Denise Vay, Hungarian, knew tortures and agonizing doubts, but their love came through strong and sweet to lighten saddened hearts.

"The Dead Ride Hard" has mystery, horror, romance and thrill. It furnishes good entertainment.

"FAR END."

By May Sinclair; The Macmillan Company, Publishers, New York; Price, $2.00.

"At the top of the village, alone under the tall elm tree, was Far End." It was a happy house, sheltering happy people. But the world war laid a curse on Far End, the curse of happy memories where now only bitterness was left.

Christopher Vivart and Maurice Calverly left gallantly, answering England's call to arms. At Far End their wives, Hilda and Cecily, watched anxiously the casualty lists, made endless bandages, knitted helmets, tended the wounded and —waited. Then Christopher came home, wounded. No word from Maurice. Later came reports that Maurice was "missing." Cecily went about, white but steadfast. Maurice would come back but he did not. One day Christopher found Cecily dead, lying crumpled across the threshold of Far End. Christopher and Hilda could bear the house no longer. And so Far End was cursed.

For eight long years the Vivarts were gone. To Christopher and Hilda they were full years, but bitter. Hilda's two children left her no time for Christopher and his writing. Christopher's books sold rapidly. He was a success, but still he was unsatisfied. First Mona then Audrey crowded out Hilda and his children from his thoughts. They were unhappy years.

Far End called them back. It healed their wounds and brought them peace. And so the curse was lifted.

"THE ADVENTURES OF LOUIS BLAKE."

By Louis Becke; J. B. Lippincott Company, Publishers, Philadelphia; Price, $2.00.

Adventures on the high seas in the grand old days when two-masted brigantines and swanky sailing craft braved the perils of treacherous deeps and foreign ocean, when piracy and mutiny were the common thing, adventure'—every tide whispered new and stranger tales.

"The Adventures of Louis Blake" deal with maritime life and nautical ways. At the tender age of 14, Louis Blake decided that 'a sailor's life was the life" for him and forthwith put to sea on the "Dollie Sage." A small brig was the "Dollie Sage." Leaving San Francisco she headed due south for Magdallena Bay, Mexico. She was destined, however, for other ports.

When off the coast of Mexico the crew mutinied, murdered the captain, second mate, steward and cabin passenger, and put Louis Blake and the surviving passenger to sea in a small boat. By good fortune the two were picked up by an American whaler and the boy began his apprenticeship in earnest. Life then became a magnificent adventure bounded by a ship's deck, with Louis Blake at the helm.

This book of Louis Becke has a particular appeal to boys, but to anyone who loves the tang of a far-flung sea spray or the excited thrill of adventure in the South Seas, "The Adventures of Louis Blake" cannot fail to bring delight.

CHRISTMAS TREE PARTY.

The supper-dance given by Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W. at the Mary Louise November 20, in observance of the forty-second institution anniversary, was well attended and a delightful affair. Speechmaking was dispensed with, to the evident satisfaction of those assembled. The Parlor's meeting place is now adorned with an illuminated map of California, the gift of Sidney B. Witkowski. The chief activity of the past month was visiting neighboring Parlors.

Los Angeles' program for December includes election of officers the 2nd and initiation the 16th. The 23rd has been set aside for the annual Christmas tree party, to which the "kids" are especially invited. The good of the order committee, Howard G. Bentley chairman, is in charge and an enjoyable time is assured all who partake of the Parlor's hospitality. Each member of the Parlor is to receive an attractive Christmas greeting, Secretary Richard W. Fryer having been authorized to send out cards, and also to remember each member with a birthday greeting on his natal day.

After the first of the new year Los Angeles will be deprived of the valuable services of one of its most active workers, President Andrew G. Beazell, who will take up his residence in Fresno City, where he has accepted a responsible position.

OUT AND IN PARTY, DECEMBER 31.

Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W. initiated a class of candidates November 12, the officers of Hollywood No. 196 exemplifying the ritual. For the pleasure of the members the entertainment committee presented the Kilties' band November 19 and their efforts were greatly appreciated.

Some of Ramona's young men have organized themselves into the "Caballeros," for the purpose of promoting the interests of the Order and the Parlor. They have natty uniforms and have been much in evidence lately. The "Caballeros" will have their first social function New Year's Eve, December 31, at Patriotic Hall, 1816 South Figueroa,—dancing and diversified entertainment. All members of the Order and their families are invited and it is promised that 1926 will be welcomed out and 1927 welcomed in in a way that will make all glad they came. Rowland S. Fontana is chairman of the arrangements committee for the "Caballeros."

Ramona's officers will be elected December 3, and initiation is on the month's calendar for the 17th. The 24th being Christmas Eve there will be no meeting.

TO FORM DRILL TEAM.

Those who attended the circus of Hollywood Parlor No. 196 N.S.G.W. November 15 had a good time. Excellent tumbling feats were featured, dancing was provided for, and there were numerous other attractions. The membership drive is progressing favorably. Deputy District Attorney Wayne Jordan is still on the sick list, where he has been for several months, and George McLain is laid up as the result of an auto accident. The baseball team is "going strong."

December 6 Hollywood will elect officers, on the 13th steps will be taken to form a drill team, and on the 20th a class of candidates will be initiated. There will be no meeting the 27th, due to the holiday season. Plans are under way for the annual stag jinks for some time in January, the exact date to be announced later.

MAKING PROGRESS.

The Spanish fiesta featured by Vaquero Parlor No. 262 N.S.G.W. November 13 drew a delighted audience. President Gabriel Ruiz was master of ceremonies, and the mother of Grand Trustee John T. Newell, an old resident of the "East Side," was accorded a seat of honor. Old-time Spanish dances, by well-trained Santa Barbara and Hollywood dancers, under the leadership, respectively, of Captain Eugene Plummer and Senorita Maria Los Angeles de Ruiz, were heartily applauded.

November 23 the Parlor was host to the Lincoln Heights community, and again there was a big turnout. W. H. Trollinger presided and among the speakers were President Brintley of the Lincoln Heights Merchants' Association, Envoy Grate of the Salvation Army, Mrs. Dorsey of the Parent-Teachers' Association, Assemblyman Byrne, Mrs. Allen, who has under way the organization of a Native Daughter Parlor, President Gabriel Ruiz, D.D.G.P. Albert Cron and Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer.

Vaquero is rapidly winning its way into the good graces of the Lincoln Heights people. Deputy Grand President Mayrhofer is doing some field work for the Parlor and had secured, up to November 23, thirty-seven applications for membership. December 7 and 14 have been set aside for initiation, and the 28th will be a social night, with something "big." During the recent visit of Grand President Hilliard E. Welch to Vaquero, the Parlor did the unusual in Native Son circles—presented him with a remembrance.

DANCE AT GLENDALE.

Glendale Parlor No. 264 N.S.G.W. is in the midst of a membership campaign which will end with the initiation of a large class of candidates December 15. The Parlor now meets every Wednesday night at 610-A East Broadway. Several visitors were at the November 10 meeting, when addresses were made by Grand Trustee John T. Newell, Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer and others.

Glendale will entertain all the Native Sons and Native Daughters of Los Angeles County and their friends at a dance December 8 at its meeting-place. Les Schellbach and his silver-stringed Glendalians will furnish the music and there will be no admission charge. The committee of arrangements consists of Leslie F. Schellbach, Robert W. Roche, Clarence N. Lechner, Ray Hackney and Jesse A. Buck.

N.D. GRAND PRESIDENT TO VISIT.

Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. initiated two candidates at its November 3 meeting. The bridge party of the 10th proved most enjoyable. The dance of the 24th under the direction of Irene Eden was well attended; excellent music was provided. Trustee Annie L. Adair is convalescing from a severe illness. A card party is scheduled for December 8.

Grand President Pearl Lamb will officially visit Los Angeles December 15, and will be accompaniad by Past Grand President Sue J. Irwin and Grand Secretary Hattie E. Roberts. A banquet will precede the meeting, at which a large class of candidates will be initiated. Miss Grace Norton is chairman of the arrangements committee for the occasion, and all who desire reservations for the banquet should communicate with her at an early date. A large attendance is anticipated.

PERSONAL MENTION.

William G. Newell (Los Angeles N.S.) was a visitor to northern cities last month.

John D. Condon (Olympus N.S.) of San Francisco was among last month's visitors.

Judge Charles E. McLaughlin (Past Grand President N.S.) of Sacramento was a visitor last month.

Barbara Lee is the name of the native daughter who recently arrived at the home of Glen Behymer (Ramona N.S.).

George G. Radcliff (Watsonville N.S.) of Sacramento, chairman State Board of Control, was in the city last month on state business.

Miss Katharine May Spangler became the bride of Chester Campbell Smither (Hollywood N.S.) at a beautiful church ceremony November 4.

Louis Sentous (Ramona N.S.), for sixteen years the French consular agent here, has resigned, and plans to travel for a year in Europe with his family.

William I. Traeger (Ramona N.S.) was re-elected sheriff of Los Angeles County by a majority of 37,110, and Ruben S. Schmidt (Ramona N.S.) was selected for one of the full-term superior judgeships.

John Anson Bullard Junior arrived November 12. He is the son of Lucile Hunt-Bullard (Los Angeles N.D.) and John Anson Bullard (Ramona N.S.), and the grandson of Clarence M. Hunt (editor The Grizzly Bear).

On arrival at their home November 12, John T. Newell (Grand Trustee N.S.) and wife were completely surprised to find it occupied by several of their friends. The occasion was the Newells' thirty-sixth wedding anniversary, and they were well remembered.

THE DEATH RECORD.

James Henry Lyon, father of Joseph F. and Charles W. Lyon (both Los Angeles N.S.), died November 2 at the age of 82.

"We must have a new theory of education. Schooling must no longer be the mere acquiring of facts and skill to give back on demand at examination time. The new school must be the effort to educate for life through life. It must seek continually to remake life to ever higher and richer levels."—William H. Kilpatrick.

"Two things in the world should not vex us a jot: The things we can help and the things we cannot! For if we can help them, why, let us be trying—and if we can't help them, there's no use in crying."—Exchange.

This condition, coupled with the nation-wide disrespect for the Constitution of the United States, as well as for all law, both God- and man-made, recalls to mind these lines of the Poet Goldsmith: "Ill fares the land to hastening ills a prey, where wealth accumulates and many decay."

The close of 1926 will certainly show a decided decrease in the profits of the manufacturers of cathartics, and the blame should be placed upon the shoulders of the newspapers, where it belongs.

The newspapers have devoted so much space to exploiting nauseating details connected with the visits to this country of queens, princes and other foreigners, and also to the McPherson carryingson, that there has been a lessened demand, particularly among the title-worshiping "codfish aristocracy" and the devourers of spicy publicity, for the products of those manufacturers.

The United States Supreme Court recently dismissed the appeal of a Jap, brought to test the constitutionality of the California Alien Land Law, because the Jap failed to appear. The case originated in Los Angeles County.

The Jap probably concluded that, inasmuch as the authorities of California make no effort to enforce the provisions of the law and that he could continue to violate it without any interference whatever on the part of officials under oath to enforce the law, there was no need of his wasting time and money in going to Washington.

A daily newspaper headed a story, "Mr. Schwab Predicts New Record in Steel." Wonder if another world-war is being framed, so that a new record in "steal" may be established?

Addressing the Commonwealth Club of San Francisco October 22 on "Our Billion Dollar Scandal—the Indian," Congressman James A. Frear said:

"I would rather be a serf in Russia under the old regime than to be one of our American Indians under present conditions—and I have personally seen both!"

"Poor Lo," according to Congressman Frear, not only fails to receive a square deal, but is dealt with as if he was not a human being. The treatment accorded him, if the congressman be correct in his statements, reflects anything but credit on the Indian's guardian, the Federal Government.

In an Eastern newspaper the other day appeared a story about the duty on imported iron roses. And then, for the first time since 1915, was realized why those roses, planted by the thousands along the Los Angeles County highways by order of the Board of Supervisors, failed to grow and "beautify the roads," as promised.

They must have been imported iron roses, for which thousands of the taxpapers' home-made silver dollars were exchanged.

"If the crowns of all the kingdoms of Europe were laid at my feet in exchange for my books and my love of reading, I would spurn them all."—Fenelon.

WHITE LIGHT

GREEN RED

AUTO-PAS SAFETY LIGHT

AUTO-PAS light on your machine will make the "other fellow" think of you and see you at night.

It is a safety light for automobiles, attached to the left running board opposite the driver's seat to eliminate front, rear and side collisions and side-swiping. Just as important protection as headlights and tail lights. Meets a want never cared for heretofore in successful manner—3 lights in one.

It reflects a white light upward, a green light forward and a red light toward the rear. The white light shows the hand signal plainly for a great distance; heretofore it has been difficult to see the hand at night—it is generally conceded the hand signal is the most practical and safe signal to use. The passing driver realizes that by clearing the green or red lights he takes little chance of running off the highway and passes in safety.

At intersections, the driver approaching from the left sees both green and red lights, indicating your right of way.

Because of its location the AUTO-PAS is the only light on your car that you can always be sure is burning, and if your tail light goes out the AUTO-PAS red light furnishes a satisfactory substitute and may save you a fine.

THE AUTO-PAS ASSOCIATION

927 So. Main St., LOS ANGELES, Calif.

¶ The Order of the Native Sons of the Golden West is founded upon the same broad patriotic principles that have been the inspiration of similar organizations in older States of the Union. Each State has its history. Into that history is interwoven a narrative of deeds performed by a mighty race of men who frontiered and pioneered the pathway for the countless thousands to follow. They transplanted the spirit, the life, the institutions of the Colonists, and wherever a State was erected there were established the ideals of the Fathers of the Republic.

¶ Therefore, the membership of our Order is limited to those born within the State, because we believe that pride of nativity is inherent in the breast of every person and moves that person to a consecrated loyalty to his native land. We do not maintain that birthplace alone confers any special privilege; rather do we teach that this casts upon the citizen an increased obligation to become interested in all material matters affecting its development and progress. National strength and national greatness have been commensurate with State strength and State greatness.

¶ California was the thirty-first State to be admitted into the Union. She contributed a citizenship and a golden treasure at an opportune time in the affairs of the nation. The many events connected with its settlement and organization as a State played a prominent part in shaping the destiny of the American people, and geographically she occupies a strategic position in the world-wide problems of the present and the future.

¶ We have taken an active interest in the conservation of our natural resources; the preservation of our scenic wonders and making them accessible to all; the retention of the State and its soil for the White race; all legislation, Federal and State, affecting the State and its interests.

¶ In our Fellowship endowment at the University of California we have expended over fifty thousand dollars in the preparation and preservation of the history of California and the Pacific Coast, and it has become the incentive for the Student Body of that institution and of the high-schools throughout the State to learn and teach that history. In this work we have laid the foundation for a text-book to be used in the public schools.

¶ We visit places where important events transpired and we have identified and marked the same with tablet and monument. Responding to the patriotic objects of our Order, we observe each recurring anniversary day of the Admission of California into the Union by public ceremonies in the various cities of the State. We actively participate in public dedicatory ceremonies of grammar-school and high-school buildings, on which occasions the students and citizens are addressed by officials of our Order on patriotic subjects.

¶ We maintain a "Homeless Children" Bureau and have placed in the childless homes over twenty-six hundred homeless boys and girls, insuring their development into a splendid citizenship amid elevating environments. In this activity we have expended over two hundred thousand dollars, contributed generously and voluntarily by the membership of the Order.

¶ It thus appears that the work of our organization appeals to every citizen of the State, irrespective of place of birth. It matters not where we were born in this land of ours; we are all citizens of a common country, we pledge our allegiance to one flag, and we are best evidencing our love of country and our loyalty to that flag by deservedly wearing the badge of public service wherever we exist and have our home.

¶ We welcome to our Membership the sons of California, and we promise nothing in return, save that compensation which comes to the citizen who conscientiously endeavors to perform his part in the cause of a greater and better civilization.

GRIZZLY GROWLS

(CLARENCE M. HUNT.)

SOREHEADS!

THE SAN FRANCISCO "BULLETIN" OF December 13 attributed to Ralph Arnold of Los Angeles the statement that "everybody in Los Angeles" is for a division of the State of California and that "the south end of the state wants to secede." Arnold, himself, is a state-division advocate. Perhaps he did and perhaps he did not make the statements credited to him. If he did, then he deliberately falsified, probably in the hope of bolstering up a lost cause. For, as a matter of fact, nobody in Los Angeles—except a few soreheads who are damphools enough to think that California can be wrecked to gratify their political ambitions—is for a division of the state, and not a single county of the south wants to secede.

Ralph, you know, is chairman of the "all parties reapportionment committee" which, at the November general election, tried to put over proposition twenty. The voters, however, evidently did not look with favor on number twenty, for they swatted it to the tune of 492,923 "no" and 319,456 "yes." And, queer as it may seem in view of his reported statement about the south end of the state wanting to secede because number twenty was defeated, every southern county, except Los Angeles, joined in the statewide chorus against Ralph's pet proposition. The only county in which it made a respectable showing, in fact received a majority, was Los Angeles, the vote there being 195,300 "yes" and 79,253 "no."

To add to Ralph's soreness was the result on proposition twenty-eight, a counter reapportionment measure. It carried in every county of the state, except Los Angeles, the total vote being 437,003 "yes" and 363,208 "no." And 186,949 of those "yes" votes came from the south end of the state which, he is reported as saying, wants to secede because number twenty was defeated and number twenty-eight adopted—103,155 of them from Los Angeles County.

Analyzing the state-wide vote at the November election, it is very evident that, if the result on propositions numbers twenty and twenty-eight is the block upon which California is to be carved, Los Angeles County alone will be severed, for it is the only county in the whole state which returned a majority for number twenty and a majority against number twenty-eight. But even all of that county cannot be included in the proposed new state, for, had it not been for the large vote in Los Angeles City, number twenty would have received a minority and number twenty-eight a majority in Los Angeles County.

So, if Ralph and the "all-parties reapportionment committee"—whoever else it may be composed of—just must have that section of the state which voted favorably on proposition number twenty secede from California, Los Angeles City must go it alone. Ralph's egoism could be completely satisfied then, and all the divisionists could hibernate there, provided they would agree with him on matters of public concern.

Rumblings have it, too, that some northern soreheads, peeved because the voters of the state would not repeal the Wright Act, want to divide California at Tehachapi. That question was number nine on the November ballot, and the total vote was: 502,258 "yes," 571,934 "no." It has been stated that the south voted unanimously against and the north unanimously for this measure, and that, therefore, such a difference of opinion exists the state should be divided. Ridiculous argument, to begin with, and not based on fact, as an inspection of the November election returns will prove.

One county classed as southern, Inyo, voted for repeal, and the following counties, classed as northern, voted against repeal: Alpine, Butte, Colusa, Fresno, Glenn, Lake, Lassen, Madera, Merced, Modoc, Monterey, Nevada, Placer, San Benito, San Joaquin, Santa Clara, Santa Cruz, Siskiyou, Stanislaus, Sutter, Tehama, Yolo.

True, there are in both the northern and the southern counties of California, political soreheads and those obsessed by ignorance and jealousy who would delight in having the state divided. Citizens of every county of the state have different views, and it is well that that is true. But there is no need to divide the state and at least ninety-five percent of the people are against division. It is preposterous, to say the least, for any set of men to imagine that, through threat of state division, they can force their pet schemes over at the polls. The people of California are not fools, and any man who has the suspicion of an idea that he can inveigle them into voting for a division of the state is an ignoramus. California is great because of its oneness, and no section is going to be misled into wrecking itself by withdrawing and forming a new state.

A new year, 1927, is about to be welcomed. With plenteous rains throughout the entire state, the future outlook is roseate. Nothing is to be gained by dwelling on the ills of the passing year—they have gone into history.

We, of California, are blessed beyond measure, and appreciation for all the good things which we are privileged to enjoy should be manifested in untiring labor for the further development of this great and glorious state.

Make 1927 the record-year in the advancement of California! It will be so if, advocating and encouraging all that is good and fearlessly condemning and opposing all that is bad, we unite our efforts to that end.

THE PLEA OF THE OAK

(ANNA I. DEMPSEY.)

When I was a child my footsteps knew
A forest where mammoth oak trees grew—
Monarchs whose friendly branches edged
A little town in a leafy hedge.
When I was a child I used to swing
On the gnarled old boughs of woodland kings,
And beneath their shade when days were long
I danced for hours to the fiddle's song.

But my childhood days have flown away,
The dark of my hair is streaked with gray,
And often when life's cares have pressed
I've longed to go to the oaks and rest.
So I hied myself away one day
To where as a child I used to play,
But lo! the grove where I would relax
Had been laid low by the woodsman's ax.

Gone were the oaks that had sheltered me
And the earth was bare of leaf or tree.
Destruction's hand had reached such depth
I'm sure that even the angels wept.
As I stood in grief I heard a sound
As though from a soul in sorrow bound,
And just as the message came to me
I give the plea of the old oak tree:

"Gather my acorns and plant them low,
This is my soil—God willed it so—
And in turn I will be to thee
A thing of beauty and joy to see.
I will comfort thee in times of stress
And rejoice with thee in thy success.
I will be a roof above thy head,
I will be thy hearthfire and thy bed.
A haven of rest I will ever be
For thee and for all humanity."

The Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America is urging, through its commission on international justice, the church people of the country to support a scheme whereby the Japs may be exempted by the Congress from the provision of the Federal Immigration Law denying entry into this country of aliens ineligible to citizenship. It says the Japs are still "hurt" by the exclusion provision and that it is "a serious obstacle to fully satisfactory relations between America and Japan."

Which is a veiled implication, by Japan's chief propaganda agency in the United States,—the Federal Council—that, unless the Japs are allowed to flock into this country and obtain possession of the Pacific Coast, and particularly California, through "peaceful invasion," Japan will resort to force of arms to accomplish its purpose.

What the church people should do, and do thoroughly, is to clean up their Federal Council by clearing out Sidney L. Gulick, George Wickersham and the other pro-Japs who dominate there. In other words, the church people should be for America first and always, and should Americanize their Federal Council, which has long been a hotbed of deceitful, and at times near-traitorous, Jap propaganda. When such a cleaning up is accomplished the Japs' "hurt" will be eased and danger of war between Japan and the United States will be considerably lessened.

The California Legislature will assemble in biennial session at Sacramento, January 3, and a flood of laws, a very few of them really beneficial to The People, can be expected.

The statute books are burdened now with a preponderance of laws, most of which are unenforced, except in rare instances,—when a "grandstand" play for publicity is desired—and then only when the offender has not the attributes of prominence or wealth.

Look at the record, and it is very evident that the prominent and the wealthy can commit any crime in the calendar, from murder to petty larceny, and get away with it. In fact, the situation has become such that aspiration to achieve social greatness is near-impossible of gratification except through the commission of a crime or becoming involved in scandal.

California needs no more laws, but it is in dire need of impartial administration of justice.

In an address before the bay section of the California Teachers' Association at San Francisco last month, Superintendent of Public Instruction Will C. Wood said:

ABBEY SAN ENCINO

Clyde Browne

(THE BUILDER.)

"WHEN YOU ARE IN ROME, DO as the Romans do." Then you are as one grain in a bin of wheat; but if the noble Romans one and all go to the games upon the feast days, and you should elect to stay studiously away, centering your energies upon some other line of endeavor, then you are an outlander; a misfit; one undoubtedly demented, else you would not have ideas foreign to those of your kind around you.

This probably holds good if you are an Angeleno, for the humble writer of these lines has striven for some years upon a mass of masonry that looms pretentiously at this time, and this was only possible because he strove with the various tools of labor while pleasure lured on every hand; while the siren call of the open road was in his ear, and dancing seas beckoned, and the silence of the desert spake in the pillar clouds that rise beyond the rugged mountains.

One hundred years ago the Camino Real, or the king's highway, dragged its sinuous way down from the Presidio of Santa Barbara. It passed Missions San Buenaventura and Saint Ferdinand, and bore away more or less directly for the broad fields of the Mission of Saint Gabriel the Archangel, but while the mission bells were yet faint at the hours of prayer, the herd-strewn road crossed the present campus of Occidental College and skirted the swamps of York Valley till it dipped into the arroyo across from the present Arroyo Seco Branch Library—and now begins our tale.

Here where the feet of plodding oxen hauled the creaking carretas along the olden mission road, where laughing caballeros rode in silver saddles, and sandaled friars strode, and dusky neophytes, and braggart soldiers, and sodden pobladores, and rollicking vaqueros—all these and more—here lies a fragment of that old road, hard by the ferry.

The lower side of this old highway was heavy with boulders, and they littered the plain below. Then came the builder, and he gathered the rocks and sorted them, and mined for more, and rode far afield to the Calabasas Hills for the white chalk slabs, to the canyons for the flags of schist, and into the highways and byways for the stones he needed. Mount Washington yielded a yellow stone, half sand and half shale, and Monrovia Canyon paid a heavy toll in granite.

Black-frocked custodians of missions made repairs and cast away loads of Indian-made bricks of priceless worth, replacing it with cement. These were gathered into the faithful Ford and brought to the gathering place—and so were procured the stones for the walls of the Abbey of San Encino, that gray old pile which stands upon the margin of the king's highway beside the gate to the ferry.

San Encino itself is an anachronism—a throwback to another century—for its lines are the lines of the padre builders, and of the early buildings of all Spanish America. The tower is a replica of Carmel's campanile; its arches are those of all the missions; its tiled roofs the same as all of the missions had after the first few years of thatch and the fires that occurred therefrom. But one phase of San Encino antedates the missions, for the high-eaved south wall has the buttresses of Holyrood, Mary of Scotland's chapel.

ABBEY SAN ENCINO LOS ANGELES.

San Encino is old before it is finished. In the dark crypt beneath the great hall are dank dungeons, and mouldy cells, and quaint flat arches, and stein shelves, and niches for candle or saint, and rusting jack lanterns and the smoky smells of candles long burned away.

Up from its depths iron rungs in the tower wall lead to the great bell of Garvanza, which called the old settlers to school two score years ago, and around the great throated master of the flock, four quaint Spanish bells are now being gathered which will lace on the gray old beams with rawhide from an old mission ruin.

And here at San Encino are a strange array. Bricks and stones from Westminster Abbey, Charlemagne's Tower, Old Manila, from castles and ruined churches in France and Italy, nails, keys, locks, hinges and bits of broken glass from cathedral windows. Crucifixes from Metz and Cavite, bells from Switzerland, pirate chests, skulls, and old ship lanterns, and a pipe organ from Frieberg i. Baden, all these among the flotsam of a great world are the contributions of students and friends and the gatherings of the abbey builder, as well as pistols, swords, and a cartload of artifacts of the Indian—metates, mortars, pestles, etc.

Here also is the altar stone of the Indians who roamed these hills before the conquistadores came with the cross. This holy stone is larger than any other the writer has ever seen. The same style of relic was pictured in the "Geographic" for February 1922, as having been unearthed in Guatemala, and should tend to show the kinship of the Aztec, Toltec and Mayan peoples, and their presence here. From the size of this paleolith it must have great potence, and the builder, in saving it from a relative who cracked nuts upon it and used it as an anvil, may have brought some kind of magic luck upon himself which tended toward the castle's completion.

Life is just one thing after another to one who has half a castle around his neck and has to complete it before he gets relief. It is a motley jumble. There are building laws to heed and you know them not. There are roof loads to know when you think of tile, yet the olden builders had no such worries. Now there is adobe to tread, and plastering to do, and masonry, and tile setting, and roof tiles to mould and burn, and bricks to make, and kilns to fire and tend through the still watches of the night. True, student friends have brought their books and studied by the kiln fire glow, and kept the coals hot till the morning.

There are hippogriffs to fashion and forge, and candelabra and sconces, and pasqual candle stands, and windows to plan and make, and copper aprons to chase, and chimney throats to build, and demons to sculpture, and nails to forge, and lanterns to make, and hundreds of other things when one man essays to build a castle, and he must be busy most of his time when he wants to see the moon athwart the tower or lighting the stained glass windows in ghostly, shadowy colors not there in the glow of the morning sun.

As the Abbey of San Encino is a dream coming true, so are the other visions in the fixed gaze of one who builds castles. They may be of towered gate, of mullioned windows, Quixotean well mills, the Via Penitente between fragrant orange trees, industrial courts, Hopi hillsides, tile-topped adobe walls and other Garguantian tasks, and may or may not be realized, yet are as real in their conception as those massy walls of stone, and one by one they will conjure up from the hazy maze and take their place in the general scheme, and they will have been there a century upon that very day, for they will not be done until they are toned to synchronize with the ensemble.

Now draws this saga to a close, so let us sit in the evening in the abbey hall and dream together and speak no word. Someone is playing the organ softly and the flutes pipe of the laughing brooks, and the diapason tells of the murmuring pines, and the bourdons thunder of the distant shore. The glow fades out of the golden windows and a candle is lighted, but it matters little when you look full into the dancing flames of a fragrant desert juniper fire, and there you dream your dreams.

CHRISTMAS FESTIVITIES.

Hollister (San Benito County)—December 9 the annual Christmas festivities of Copa de Oro Parlor No. 105 N D G W were enjoyed by the membership. A gaily decorated and brightly lighted tree formed the chief decoration, with baskets of bright berries on desks and pedestals. Brightly wrapped packages, large and small, were banked about the tree, awaiting the arrival of Santa Claus, who dashed in with a jingle of bells. The unwrapping of the parcels caused peals of laughter, as the gifts were chosen carefully to suit each member. Recitations, songs and games followed the distribution of the gifts and of bags filled to overflowing with nuts, candy and fruits.

CALIFORNIA AND CALIFORNIANS

Dr. Owen C. Coy

FIVE NEW AND VERY BEAUTIFULLY bound volumes have just appeared under the title "California and Californians." Two of these volumes give the narrative history of California while the other three are devoted to biographical sketches of Californians past and present. Of the two narrative volumes, one on the Spanish period was written by Nellie Van de Grift Sanchez, while the other, on the American period, was written by Dr. Rockwell D. Hunt. The whole series was edited by Dr. Hunt, assisted by an advisory board and a special staff of writers.

Since there are so many books of an historical and biographical nature put out by commercial publishing companies, the serious student of history is justified in asking the question whether or not this is merely another of these sets or whether it is able to justify itself from the standpoint of contribution to the field of California history. From an examination of the new publication the writer believes that it is worthy of a recognition not to be accorded to many other publications of this nature.

The difference is without doubt due to the fact that the publishers had the good judgment to secure the services of Dr. Hunt, a scholar well acquainted with the field of California history, as its editor and the writer of one of the volumes. For more than thirty years he has been recognized in academic circles as a leading authority on California and Pacific Slope history. Himself a native son of this fair state he has had from his youth an appreciation of the great value of its history. Furthermore, this appreciation was combined with a zeal for careful research into the records of the past in order that facts might be separated from mere fictitious tales. Dr. Hunt is the author of "The Genesis of California's First Constitution" and "California the Golden," the latter a school textbook which for many years has enjoyed a well-merited popularity. Among the first college classes in California history were those taught by him some thirty years ago.

The first voulme of "California and Californians" takes up the Spanish period of California history. This volume, of nearly six hundred pages, is from the pen of Nellie Van de Grift Sanchez, who has already become known to lovers of California history for her valuable little book on "Spanish and Indian Place Names" and other writings. She is a resident of Berkley and has made herself thoroughly familiar with the treasures of the Bancroft Library on that field of history. By her marriage, Mrs. Sanchez became connected with one of the old pioneer Spanish families of California and this, together with her familiarity with the Spanish language, has given her a point of vantage in approaching the work. She disclaims any "pretense of having been able to present much that is new," but claims rather her purpose to be to attempt "to paint a picture of the broad background of early exploration against which the history of California stands out as upon a noble canvas of deeply drawn lights and shadows." Step by step the march of the Spaniards is traced until at last the standard of their king and their God is planted upon the soil of the promised land."

Contrary to the usual custom of writers on this early period, Mrs. Sanchez does not slight the period when California was under the Mexican regime for, as she says, it is her belief that this Mexican period contributed more to present-day Califonia life than did the period of Spanish domination. The book is divided into thirty-six chapters. Nine are devoted to Spanish activities during the sixteenth century, closing with Vizcaino's discovery of Monterey Bay in 1602 and 1603. Seventeen chapters then take up the Spanish advance and occupation of California, closing with the revolution of 1822. The last ten chapters deal with California as a Mexican province. Mrs. Sanchez has given us not only a very readable book, but also a sympathetic interpretation of the contribution made by Spain and Mexico to the California of today.

The second volume of "California and Californians," "The American Period," was written by Dr. Hunt, the editor of the series. It is in this period that the author has done most of his research and where his chief interest lies. In his own words, he sets forth the aims of the volume: "First, to give generous expression to a sincere appreciation of the American period without making the concession that this is merely secondary or supplementary to the Spanish period; second, to revivify the past with accuracy and sympathetic interpretation and thus to contribute to the conservation of the rightful heritage of all Californians; third, to lay a just emphasis upon more recent developments . . . ; and finally, to set forth the salient facts and features of the dominant state of the far west, which now boldly lays claim to being the 'right hand of the continent'."

The author divided the treatment into forty-eight chapters, grouped into four parts. The first, composed of twelve chapters, takes up the acquisition of California. Part two devotes eleven chapters to "The Memorable Struggle for Order," the years from 1848 to 1856. Part three bears the title, "A State Growing in Greatness (1856-1879)," and contains eleven chapters. Part four is "California Fronting the World, 1879-1925," and gives fourteen chapters to the more recent period of California history. In the first two parts Dr. Hunt has covered ground more or less familiar to other writers, but for the later parts, especially the fourth, he has been breaking new ground. It is here, therefore, that the reader of California history will recognize his greatest indebtedness to the author, for it is fortunate that for this work there should have been chosen as author one who, for a period of years, has not only been a careful student of California's past but an active citizen and a careful observer of passing events. Dr. Hunt's style is clear and interesting, and while he has not been able to make use of footnotes he has quoted liberally from authentic historical sources.

Each of the narrative volumes has a selected bibliography and both are well illustrated with pictures, a large portion of which are taken from the "Pictorial History of California" with due acknowledgment.

The three biographical volumes are less the work of the editor than are the narrative volumes. While the greater number of the biographies are naturally of men and women now living, the reader is pleased to find well-prepared accounts of many of California's past citizens and historic characters. The form in which the biographies are presented is pleasing in style, and much worth-while information regarding those people who are now making history here may be obtained. An index to the whole series is printed in the introductory pages of volume I. Since, by custom, we are led to look for the index at the end of a published work, this appears to be an inconvenience and is one of a few features the writer would criticize adversely, since it gives the appearance of belonging to the one volume rather than to the whole set. The volumes are excellently bound in leather and will make an acceptable addition to any library.

"There were more students enrolled last year in the evening high schools than in all the day schools. And nine-tenths of them were adults. The adult education group numbered 185,000."

Good news that, for it indicates an improvement in social conditions. When men and women devote their time and energy to intellectual improvement they are not likely to be engaged in things of less consequence to themselves and less value to the community at large.

"Peaches" "is" a very expensive luxury in New York. If you don't believe that assertion, ask Edward Browning who, by the way, should be examined as to his mental fitness to remain at large.

When the "cinderellas" and the attorneys get through with him, he will be as thoroughly cleaned of wealth as the law's storerooms are of evidence-booze.

At the November general election, 1,212,452 of the 1,912,863—or sixty-three percent—registered voters in California exercised the elector privilege. A record both splendid and encouraging.

When the majority vote, every loyal citizen should be satisfied with the result and gratified to abide by it, although he may be personally disappointed. While the majority may go wrong occasionally, government by the minority is at all times obnoxious.

The American Green Cross has been organized in Los Angeles and incorporated in California to [illegible] the American Reforestation Association. It will conduct a nation-wide educational [illegible]:

The [illegible] of the organization [illegible] to and [illegible] the [illegible] of the original [illegible] Congress [illegible] and other natural resources of the United States, the protecting of reforested areas, the development of fire protection.

Alfred Holman, a California newspaperman, writing [illegible] declared that "state division [illegible] company." Wonder where he got that idea?

Except through the [illegible] there has been practically no discussion of state division. And the press of the state, almost unanimously, is against division.

You don't have to go far away to Denmark to find something rotten. Just come to Los Angeles, where it cost $6,000,000 to erect a hall of justice for which the citizens voted $2,000,000, where property owners turn over the value of their holdings for assessment improvements and then are forced to borrow additional for "extras;" where evidence that does not meet the approval of the accused conveniently disappears from the law enforcers' custody; where, according to the retiring governor, innocent men are convicted and given a penitentiary sentence, while known bunko-artists and other criminal gentry are permitted to operate unhampered; where the property-owners are forced to pay for the installation of public lights, and then must dig up annually for the juice furnished by their own power-plant.

And this isn't half the story.

Have ineligible-to-citizenship Japs the legal right to own stock in a corporation authorized to deal generally in real estate in California exclusive of agricultural land? The question has been put before the State Supreme Court for decision, in an action to compel Secretary of State Frank C. Jordan to accept the articles of incorporation of the "Japanese Hospital Association of Los Angeles," which provide, among other things, for the purchase of commercial property.

Jordan contends, and rightly so, that the treaty between the United States and Japan—which takes precedence over the California Alien Land Law denying to alien Japs the right to purchase land in this state—does not give the Japs the right, as regards land acquirement, sought. That being the case, the provisions of the state law should govern, it would seem.

EARLY DAY SURVEYOR'S HISTORIC LETTER PRESERVED.

Bancroft Library of the University of California, Berkeley, has been enriched by the gift of a letter written in 1852 by Colonel Leander Ransome, leader of a surveying party which, in 1851, established the Mount Diablo base line and meridian for the later survey of California lands. The letter was presented on behalf of Colonel Ransome's only surviving child, Mrs. Amelia E. Neville of East Helena, Montana, who recently celebrated her eightieth birthday.

At the time Colonel Ransome wrote the letter his three children were in Europe. In it the noted surveyor expresses regret over the multiplicity of duties which had kept him from writing more frequently, a fact which is attested to by its intimate and affectionate nature.

Colonel Ransome's letter is inscribed on both sides of numerous pages of onion skin paper measuring about two and three-quarters inches in width and four and one-half inches in length. It is written in a fine, legible hand, which is regarded as revealing the character of a careful, painstaking and methodical individual such as Mrs. Neville remembers her father to have been. The pages of the letter were assembled by its writer into a tiny volume, covered with an unusual kind of black paper and bound together.

Because of his important work on Mount Diablo and other historical surveying operations in California, Colonel Ransome was elected a charter member of the California Academy of Sciences in 1853. In 1856 he was elected president of the organization and served in that capacity for eleven years. His description of the view from the summit of Mount Diablo is regarded as one of the most illuminating documents on file in the surveyor-general's office in Washington.

AUTOS FOR EVERYBODY.

A statistician has figured out that all of California's 1,600,000 automobiles could be parked in a single line on the 77,000 miles of roadway in the state, with 242 feet of space between each vehicle.

With three persons in each car, the entire population of the state could go motoring in California-owned autos.

CALIFORNIA HAPPENINGS OF FIFTY YEARS AGO

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

NEW YEAR'S DAY IN CALIFORNIA, 1877, with clear skies and balmy weather, gave the callers an ideal day and the streets of the cities were thronged with carriages going to and fro. One popular society woman in San Francisco entertained in her parlor forty callers at one time. Intoxication was the rule, instead of the exception, as thirst quenching resorts gave away beverages and had free lunches galore.

A mining town editor concluded, with the New Year, to swear off drinking and live a temperance year. He had kept a record of his libation experience during the past five years, and it was as follows: Invited to take a drink, 11,432 times; refused, 0 times.

Shortly after midnight of New Year's Day in answer to a police whistle summons Officer Wm. D. Henley entered Hill's saloon at the north end of Kearny street, San Francisco. He found an unruly crowd of youths, one of whom, Billy Doran, assaulted him, took away his pistol and shot him in the head. Henley drew a bowie knife and plunged it into Doran's heart, killing him instantly. The officer then walked to the police station, made his report and collapsed.

In Sonora, Tuolumne County, was a caterer, a Frenchman named Henry Pelou, nicknamed "Le Bebe" by his friends. He celebrated his birthday New Year's Day by giving a grand French dinner during which wine was drunk often. The frequent libation had the ultimate effect of causing the host to invite three of the diners to take a buggy ride to a resort at Green Springs, where more wine was consumed. "Le Bebe" became so intoxicated and obstreperous that his friends locked him in a barn to sober up. During the night he escaped and wandered over the hills and gulches for three days, finally being found near Chinese Camp, lying upon the ground in an exhausted condition. He expired a few hours afterward.

The prolonged dry spell of eight weeks' duration was broken January 16. It ended in a demonstrative manner with a heavy gale from the north prevailing for three days that did considerable damage to shipping interests in San Francisco Bay. While clear skies and the norther prevailed in California North, a southwest wind brought showers to California South, to the surprise of its population.

The storm of the 16th swept over the entire state for four days, during which time over three inches of rain fell in the valleys and a heavy snowfall covered the Sierras. Dust gave way to mud and swollen streams filled the dry arroyos, bringing relief to the anxious farmers and miners. An exuberant poet on a Sacramento newspaper wrote a song of happiness reading as follows: "Joy, joy to the world! How the rain comes down! See how it sprinkles o'er field and town. Hurrah, hurrah, for a bully good wet. A rousing big harvest is coming, you bet!"

DISASTER IN MINING CIRCLES.

Showers fell January 22, while a moderate storm prevailed during the last of the month, precipitating another inch of rain and making the season rainfall on the 31st 6.13 inches.

Wheat had gone to $2.20 a cental and hay to $20 a ton on account of the drought.

The prices of the leading mining shares on the stock market at the opening board of the year were: Ophir $20, Con. Virginia $35, California $45, Justice $20, Best & Belcher $40, Mexican $20 and Overman $111 a share. As these stocks have all sold since for less than five cents a share, the losses of mining stock investors since this date are unfigureable. Con. Virginia passed its January dividend and started a decline in prices which, with other unfavorable information and rumors, caused a debacle that created dismay and financial disaster.

Besides a dozen failures of brokers in San Francisco and Virginia City, which caused investors to lose several millions, the prominent house of Shultze & Von Bergin, which was in control of the Bullion and Exchequer mines, toppled and went under for liabilities in the millions. It claimed to have assets of half a million in excess of its liabilities, but as they could not be realized on it was only a paper credit. It was reported that the Bonanza "big four," who were in control of the Comstock Lode, had split and their disagreement was in part the cause of the break in prices. The market partially recovered toward the end of the month.

The annual report of Con. Virginia for 1876 showed it had yielded $16,640,177 and paid out in dividends $11,888,000. That of the California showed it had yielded during the past year $13,400,000, half of which was in gold

January 22 a reported ore development on a Con. Virginia lower level sent the price of that stock up $20 a share and the rest of the market followed in an advance of prices that caused a fresh list of disasters. The rise caught short a numbers of brokers, who had been getting wealthy through the drop, and they went broke, thus spreading financial ruin again amid investors and speculators who had accounts with them. California street, San Francisco, again swarmed with interested investors until the 27th, when it was reported a "horse" had appeared in the newly discovered ore body and bang went Con Virginia down $10 a share.

An eighteen-mule team, followed by one of twenty mules, arrived in San Diego January 18 with 125 tons of silver ore to be shipped by steamer to San Francisco for reduction. It was reported so rich that fifty percent of it was silver. It came from an Arizona mine. The shipment was viewed with disgust by those interested in the Nevada State silver mines, as the market was oversupplied and a further decline in value was expected.

CATTLE RUSTLERS LAND IN JAIL.

The reported discovery of a silver ledge on the Trabuco rancho near San Juan Capistrano, Orange County, caused an excitement and a rush of locators to that vicinity.

January 9 the administration of the Lick estate in San Francisco was amicably settled. All parties were to get a share. John H. Lick, tal ing $385,000 in addition to the $150,000 wille him, was to pay the sisters, nephews, niece uncles and aunts $72,000, and the bequests mac were to stand.

January 9 there was an excursion under th auspices of the Santa Clara County Board of Si pervisors to the site of the Lick Observatory c the summit of Mount Hamilton. The road fro San Jose to the observatory being completed, was named Lick avenue. The party went in s horse stages. The road cost $73,075.

Rev. O. P. Fitzgerald, late the defeated Dem cratic candidate for superintendent of public h struction, sued a newspaperman named Klose f libel and on January 10 the jury awarded hi $1,000 damages.

Rev. R. F. Parshall, who was in the limelig as a discredited Oakland pastor, had Rev. L. Baker of Vallejo, Solano County, arrested f criminal libel. He had accused the former criminal conduct toward an indiscreet sister.

Antone Wilson and Pio Ocho were arreste January 18 in Livermore Valley, Alameda Cou ty, for stealing seventy head of fine cattle fro the ranch of Wm. Rice in Contra Costa Count They had sold to butchers fifty head at remu erative prices.

Two Santa Monica, Los Angeles County, cit zens named Heath and Eaton near that place di covered a vein of coal. It was six inches wid at the surface and had widened to over two fe as depth was attained.

A four-foot-wide vein of coal was reporte struck in a tunnel on Taylor Mountain two mil from Santa Rosa, Sonoma County.

A promoter in San Francisco was seeking ca ital for a plan to build a railroad connecting Sa Francisco with Buenos Aires. It was to go sout through Mexico, Central America and Sout America, and would only cost $579,000,000 t build.

Colonel R. S. Baker had 15,000 sheep on th San Vicente rancho in Los Angeles County.

John G. Davis of Kern County started to driv a flock of 2,500 sheep north for feed and campe the first night on the alkali flats near Tular Lake. In the morning he found all the shee dead but one. They had died from the effects c poisoned water.

SOME BABY.

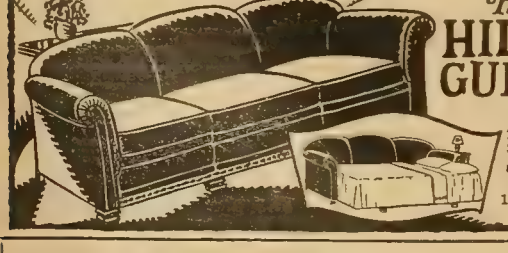
Mayor Beaudry of Los Angeles City laid ou streets and furnished a water supply to a pl of land which he subdivided into 400 lots an held an auction sale of them January 29. band wagon perambulated the streets and dre a large crowd to the sale. The prices realize during the sale, which continued for two day did not meet the expectations of the promoter.

J. DeBarth Shorb completed a reservoir c 60,000,000 gallons' capacity on the San Pasqua rancho in Los Angeles County.

The Southern Pacific Co. was building east ward toward Arizona in California South at th rate of two miles a day.

A prospector named Carson found on Mayo Beaudry's land near the San Pasqual ranch in Los Angeles County a small vein of coal.

J. Norton, in Los Angeles, was boasting of th birth of a son weighing 14½ pounds.



In Monterey Bay January 15 a Portugues fisherman harpooned a female whale. It wa sixty feet long and the largest so far capture on this coast. On cutting it open a male calf almost fully developed, was found. It wa eighteen feet long and nine feet in circumfer ence in its middle and had a breadth of tai three and one half feet some baby. The fe male whales when with young come down fron the Arctic, keeping well off shore, to calve i the warm waters of Lower California, where the remain until their calves are about a year old.

Levi Smith, a hunter near Merced, Merce County, killed 140 geese with the two shots o his double-barreled shotgun. He had killed an shipped to the San Francisco market since Sep tember over 6,000 ducks and geese. He used trained ox in his hunting expeditions. He walke by its side and crouched against it so that h could approach the flocks easily and get i range to shoot from over or under the ox.

The biggest tree in California was reporte found in Fresno County, in a valley 5,000 fe above sea level. It was a redwood, 140 feet i circumference five feet above the ground. I was 160 feet in height to where its top, 10 feet in length, had broken off and that lay upo the ground.

SOCIAL LIONS MIX AT PARTY.

Jose Jesus Galindo died at Milpitas, Santa Clara County, January 18, within nine days of reaching his 106th birthday, to celebrate which his numerous relatives were making preparations. He was born in Alameda County and spent his whole life in the vicinity. He lived with a daughter, who was 85.

The first stage robbery of the year was near Santa Paula, Ventura County, January 20. Two highwaymen halted the stage, took the express box and robbed the passengers, obtaining from them several hundreds of dollars.

The stage from Newhall, Los Angeles County, to Santa Barbara was stopped by two mounted Mexicans January 21. They took away the express box, containing a few hundred dollars, and the watches of the driver and two passengers.

Albert Nicholson and M. Evarts Pendleton, social lions among the young set in San Francisco, quarreled at a party over the indiscreet remarks made by one of them of a young woman's nose. Their friends had great difficulty in keeping them from engaging in a fistic combat. Threats to shoot on sight, when they had armed themselves, were loudly and repeatedly made and the party broke up. Fears of bloodshed and death sorely afflicted their friends and, after they had been kept apart and escorted to their rooms, some of these friends met and decided that the only way to prevent the worst from happening was to have them both arrested and bound over to keep the peace. Accordingly, early the next morning those delegated to attend to it swore out warrants and they were given officers, who returned them unserved. They found that Nicholson had gone to Los Angeles on an early train to attend to urgent business and that Pendleton had received an unexpected call to Portland and had taken passage by boat.

During the last week of the month there were sixty-five cases of smallpox in San Francisco. The epidemic spread eastward to Tucson, Arizona, and decimated the Indians in San Bernardino County.

Suicides kept up an astonishing average. One of the saddest was that of a lad named David Kurtander, 15 years old, in San Francisco. He ruptured himself, and January 26 took arsenic rather than go through life with an incurable hernia.

Another sorrowful one was that of Robert Gordon, who came to Auburn, Placer County, in 1849, before the town was named. He had been wealthy, but in his later years met with reverses, and gave up the struggle against adversity January 8.

GIRL THROWN FROM BALCONY.

Antonia Appolina, alias Dora Levy, the would-be suicide and murderess of San Francisco, was found January 4 beneath the house adjoining that of Mayor Bryant and was taken by him in his carriage to the city jail. She had crept under the house intending to die of starvation. On account of her physical condition she was sent to the county hospital. She was described as a beautiful woman and subsequently became a much-admired prisoner by the susceptible swains who came in contact with her. It developed that, coming from Europe to America with her brother, he fell overboard and was saved from drowning by the man whom she murdered. He became enamored of her and, urged by her brother to reward his bravery, she consented to marry him although she had begun to hate him. It was only a few hours before the tragedy that the marriage ceremony had been performed. They quarreled in his room and she shot him.

Miguel Berryessa, a Colusa County sheepman, was shot seven times by an assassin, lying in ambush, who had stolen and used his Henry rifle in killing him. A man named Martinez was later apprehended in Yolo County and charged with committing the crime.

M. W. Kind, deputy county clerk of Alameda County and prominent in politics and social life, shot Louis Shearer January 19 and dangerously wounded him. It was all over unfounded jealousy.

Three little girls, in a spirit of fun, were distracting a lodger named Smith in a rooming house on Vallejo street, San Francisco, January 19. He, angered, gave chase and caught and threw a 12-year-old girl named Crawley from the third-story balcony. It was thought she was fatally hurt. He claimed the little girl fell accidentally while trying to escape, but the other children stated differently.

TRAVEL REMINISCENCES OF HISTORIC MOKELUMNE ROAD

George F. McNoble

(HISTORIAN STOCKTON PARLOR N.S.G.W.)

THE NATIVE SONS OF STOCKTON ARE very active in a movement to have improved the Stone Corral section of the Valley Springs-Bellota road, on the historic Mokelumne Hill road, leading from Stockton, San Joaquin County, to the Hill. George F. McNoble, historian of Stockton Parlor No. 7 N.S.G.W. and once a mountain teamster, prepared the following, telling of some of the places of interest along that famous early-day highway:

In the days of '49 the old Mokelumne toll road began at the William Tell Gardens, a tavern and toll-house situated near the east line of the City of Stockton, and ran in a general easterly direction through the valley, plains, foothills and high-hills until it reached Union Square, in the center of the then bustling, thriving pioneer town of Mokelumne Hill. It was a little over fifty miles in length and was fairly straight, as the term was used in those days.

Stockton was the depot of supplies in those early days for all of the southern mines, and as Mokelumne Hill was the county-seat and the largest town in Calaveras County, the travel was very dense between the two places.

The Mokelumne Hill road from 1849 to 1884 was the only road leading straight from Stockton to Mokelumne Hill and the villages beyond, such as Rich Gulch, Rail Road Flat and Westpoint. During this period the road was covered day and night, in summer, with scores of freight teams hauling in all of the imported or manufactured supplies for the whole northern county. It is safe to say that there were a hundred freight teams on the road during the busy season in summer and in autumn.

Many of the most prominent businessmen of Stockton were, in these early days, engaged in freighting and forwarding the made-up and manufactured goods and wares that were received from the bay district by sloops at Stockton, and then sent on to the miners in the interior.

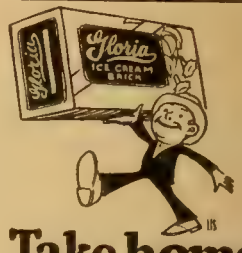
The real life of these halcyon times, however, was to be found in and about the teamsters' resorts or stopping places. These ranged from the small family cottage and corral on the wayside to the more pretentious public hotels, with their brilliant barrooms and ample feed yards. The trip from Mokelumne Hill to Stockton and return was usually made in three days by the average teamster.

It may be of interest to many who yet remember, to recall the names of these resorts, or stopping places for the teamsters, sometimes called "inns" as a matter of courtesy.

Starting from Stockton, the first place of accommodation was Linden, at the end of the graveled and watered toll road. This stretch of road was a flat and level pull, easy on the draft animals. The Linden Hotel furnished good food and friendly cheer, but was at an early day known as a dry-town hotel; so, in those days, they tried, if possible, to make Bellota for the night, for that hamlet had two rival resorts which competed for the teamsters' trade by striving to offer good meals and better drinks at reasonable prices. Fanning's was the favorite place to put up at, although Fisher's was not far behind. The teamsters slept in the corrals with their stock, so we knew nothing of the beds or bedroom service at the hotel. Breakfast consisted of steaks, spuds, cream, mush, good bread and plenty of fruit. The teamsters often put in an hour around dawn, after feeding and currying the stock, in shaking dice for the drinks. It was a rare sport and everyone enjoyed the company and banter of the hardened mule punchers. They came from all points of the compass and spoke all lingoes, accents, brogues, patois and dialects. The Missourians were the best mule skinners, I believe. They stayed on the job the longest and were capable of eating the most dust, and getting away with it.

Some of the more particular wayfarers were housed at Conrad's, about four miles east of Bellota. This was a refined family, with no booze or swearing on the premises, and you were kindly waited upon by White women. They put up nice lunches here and asked to be remembered to your parents, and all those nice touches of human sympathy were present at that place.

The next resort was Stone Corral, about a mile east of the San Joaquin County line. The road in late years has been changed a little in this place, cutting out the old Stone Corral and the wayside resort. In the olden days this was a hard joint, with poor meals and bad whisky for the men, and rain-soaked hay and shoe-pegged barley for the horses.



The next place was a famous roadhouse called "The North America." This was some plant—ten acres of corrals, barns, hay stacks and feed yards, with a great big three-story frame hotel in the center of the area. This was a half-way point between the ends of the road, and often twenty-five teams put up in a single night at this famous hostelry. At the "North America" you met the whole blooming brigade of horse and mule punchers, as well as the sheep herders and the cattle drivers of that region. At night you heard all the current news of the day and all the jokes of the season; and, like eggs, some were fresh and some were foul. But everything went without question. All control was self-imposed. There were customs and regulations among the teamsters that had to be observed. Any theft brought a swift punishment right on the ground like a drum-head court martial. Any insult was answered with a blow, and any serious offense was punished more severely by the injured person.

From "North America" it was about six miles to Spring Valley, a hotel resort at the foot of Wheat's Hill. This was another big meeting place. It was famous for its poker games. Everybody played and everybody lost. The "kitty" took two large a percentage, and the players turned the "last card" for drinks too often. But you got a run for your money and you could quit, as soon as you were broke, without offending the feeling of any of your teamster comrades. It was all in the draw and the house had all of the coin about the time you started out at 6 a. m. on your long trek up the grade, or down the hill. Don't mix up this place with the hamlet of Valley Springs, which was started in the early '80s after the railroad came in south of Late's stone house.

From Spring Valley the next stop was at Wheat's place, about a mile away and all the way up hill. This was the site of the first county-seat of Calaveras County. The old court-house is yet to be seen there as a residence, with its two portholes in the pediment of the building. It might be added, by way of digression, that Calaveras County has so far had four county-scouts—first at Wheat's in 1849, then in the early '50s transferred to Jackson, Amador County, which was then a part of Calaveras County, and after two years more transferred to Mokelumne Hill, where it remained for over ten years, and then transferred to San Andreas by an election at which it was found that the total vote cast was about five times the number of registered voters and three times as many as there were inhabitants in the county. However, this was before the era of adding machines and pure politics. Wheat's was a respectable and conventional stopping place. They said grace at the meals and no one chewed tobacco within the portals of the inn. You felt safe from having your pockets picked in places like that.

About five miles further up on the road, which is now abandoned and nearly impassable, you came to Haupt's farm, owned by a good German family who cared for the teamsters in homely fashion—plenty of meat, spuds and sauerkraut, and good hay and good water for the stock. The prices were very reasonable. They got you off at daybreak, if you wanted to start early. The Haupt family, seven in number, always lent a helping hand to the distressed.

About five miles from Haupt's you came to Schrack's, opposite Golden Gate. It was at the foot of a cobble-stone hill, nothing else but river rocks. The modern geologist would say that the formation was that of the bed of an ancient river that got lost in an earthquake unheaval. However that may be, here was a delightful place to stop for the night. The accommodations were first-class for man and beast. Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Schrack treated all concerned as guests and friends. There was a home-like air about the place. Refinement and culture marked the home and the family. The Schrack's had seen better days. They had suffered reverses through the Civil war. The water here was delicious, especially after getting out of the alkali plain's land below. Here was a replica of the well storied in the old oaken bucket, and with all its trimmings. We always remembered the Schracks with gratitude and kindness.

From Schrack's it was about three miles to the Flume House, run by a French family named Pillon. Here you found the cozy life of southern France—French bread, claret wine, imported cheese (fromage), delicious soups highly seasoned, black coffee and candied sweets all making up the evening meal. As a boy I liked this place very much. It was different from the bread and butter, beef and beans, mush and milk diet of old Mosquito Gulch, my home town. The teamsters always put up here, even if they reached the place as early as 4 o'clock in the afternoon. They liked the cooking and refreshments of this place.

From the Flume House to Mokelumne Hill was about four miles. You went up the Asbury grade to the top of Stockton Hill, where the baseball grounds were situated; and from the top of the hill you can see Chile Gulch and San Andreas, as well as the Jackson section; and then you go down the grade along the east side of Stockton Hill, with prospect holes everywhere to be seen and as numerous as cells in a honeycomb, and soon you roll and rattle down the lava road that had worn itself on the hillside into something like a ditch, until you draw up in front of Leger's Hotel. Here it was that you met and saw all of the best and worst that was in the county, viz., miners, merchants, hotelmen, barkeepers, gamblers, woodchoppers, Chinamen, Mexicans, Italians, French, Digger Indians and men of every nation, tongue and creed. Mokelumne Hill was a big town, a booming town, the county-seat and the center of the wheel for all the mining activities. This sleepy old village of today had all the surge and pulse of youth in those old days of mining and teaming.

STOCKTON'S NEW CITY HALL DEDICATED BY NATIVE SONS.

Stockton's new $650,000 city hall was formally dedicated December 3 by the grand officers of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West in the presence of a crowd numbering about 1,000. The structure was illuminated throughout for the occasion. The Stockton City band, directed by E. B. Condy, rendered several selections. The ceremonies were conducted under the auspices of Stockton Parlor No. 7 N.S.G.W.

Mayor Raymond J. Wheeler presided and in his opening remarks declared the completion and dedication of the building was but another manifestation of the enterprise, spirit and unity of the people of Stockton. Welcoming the grand officers, he paid a tribute to the Order of Native Sons, and concluded with a forceful appeal to the people of California to use their utmost endeavors to keep the state one and undivided.

NATIVE DAUGHTERS HAVE NEW BRANCH

VERDUGO PARLOR NO. 240 N.D.G.W. was instituted at Glendale December 14 by Grand President Pearl Lamb, assisted by Grand Secretary Hattie E. Roberts, Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas, Past Grand Presidents Grace S. Stoermer and Sue J. Irwin. One hundred members of the Order were in attendance, including the drill team of Long Beach Parlor, which put on a fancy drill. The new Parlor started with thirty-six charter members.

Officers of Los Angeles Parlor exemplified the ritual, and D.D.G.P. Bertha Hitt installed the following officers: Mrs. Clytelle F. Hewitt, president; Mrs. Ida N. Gilman, past president; Mrs. Margaret Kaeding, first vice-president; Mrs. Dora Phillips, second vice-president; Mrs. Ella May Madden, third vice-president; Mrs. Beulah Van Luven, marshal; Mrs. Ida Farrand, recording secretary; Mrs. Rose Bartel, financial secretary; Mrs. Margaret Taylor, treasurer; Mrs. Margaret Davis, outside sentinel; Miss Grace McHenry, inside sentinel; Mrs. Florence Perdew, Mrs. Ramond Verdugo Mendibles, Mrs. Ada Steele, trustees; Mrs. Inez Holcomb, organist.

Presentations to the new Parlor were made as follows: Flag at president's station, Los Angeles No. 124; altar flags, Long Beach No. 154; gavel, Rudecinda No. 230 (San Pedro); check, Santa Ana No. 235.

Following the institution ceremonies delicious refreshments were served, and there were addresses by Grand President Lamb, Past Grand President Stoermer, Past Grand President Irwin, D.D.G.P. Hitt, and Grand Trustee Thomas, who was instrumental in having the Parlor organized.

Verdugo Parlor will meet the first Tuesday of each month, its first regular meeting being January 4. Movements are well under way for the institution of parlors at Santa Monica and San Bernardino.

HISTORIC PAGEANT.

In observance of the centenary of the coming of the first American citizen overland to California, Jedediah Strong Smith, the Historical Society of Southern California will present a pageant outlining the life of "The Pathfinder of the Sierras" at Bovard auditorium, University Southern California, January 14 and 15.

Smith arrived at San Gabriel Mission November 27, 1826. An excellent account of his life, dealing particularly with his experiences in California, appeared in The Grizzly Bear for October, 1926. Friday, January 14, will be known as Native Sons' and Native Daughters' night.

NATIVE SONS HAVE CENTRAL COMMITTEE.

The N.S.G.W. Interparlor Committee, Southern District, has been organized as a result of the recent visit of Grand President Hilliard E. Welch. Its purpose is to advance the interests of the Order and the several Parlors in the southland.

Grand Trustee John T. Newell is chairman of the committee, Burrel D. Neighbours (Ramona) vice-chairman, Loring G. Kent (Glendale) treasurer, Fred J. Burmester (Los Angeles) secretary. Meetings will be held every Friday night in Ramona's clubrooms, Patriotic Hall, 1816 South Figueroa.

The committee at its December 20 meeting decided on a joint installation of officers of all the Los Angeles County Parlors of Native Sons, and has invited the Native Daughter Parlors to participate. The affair will be held at San Pedro, the 11th or 18th of January, the exact date to be announced later.

MILLION DOLLAR PRESENT.

Los Angeles City received as a gift December 22 a deed to the eight-acre property known as Olive Hill, located at Sunset and Hollywood boulevards, Vermont avenue and Edgemont street, and valued at $1,000,000. The Christmas present came from Aline Barnsdall, daughter of the late Theodore M. Barnsdall.

The gift was made particularly to the children of the city. The only condition attached to it is that the California Art Club shall have use of the residence as a clubhouse for fifteen years. In honor of the donor, the property will be known as Barnsdall Park.

CHRISTMAS TREE.

The annual Christmas tree of Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W. drew a big crowd to Native Sons' Hall December 23. There was a beautifully decorated tree, and the many children were presented with toys, candy and fruits. On behalf of the Parlor, Sidney Witkowski presented a past president's emblem to Andrew G. ing president, who is to make his future home in Fresno.

A class of candidates were initiated December 16 by the newly-elected officers, Ray LeMoine president, and they showed marked proficiency in their work. The history and landmarks committee of the Parlor is making splendid progress in collecting valuable history material. A large delegation paid a visit December 15 to Sepulveda Parlor at San Pedro.

January 20 the Parlor will initiate a class of candidates, the ceremonies to be followed by refreshments.

FLAGS PRESENTED HIGH SCHOOL.

In a New Year message to the members of Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W., of which he is the president-elect, C. Dwight Crittenden says: "The past year has been one of marked upward trend for Ramona in every direction, and I feel that we can look forward to the new year with still higher hopes. Ramona certainly has never been in better shape to live up to its reputation in Nativesonism. Obstructionism barred." Ralph I. Harbison will head the good of the order committee during Crittenden's term.

December 17 the Parlor initiated a large class of candidates, the ritual being exemplified by the newly-elected officers of Los Angeles Parlor in a highly creditable manner and to the expressed full satisfaction of D.D.G.P. Burrel D. Neighbours. Historiographer Ray W. Cloud was the main speaker of the evening.

January 7, Ramona will receive an official visit from Grand Trustee John T. Newell. The 19th its officers will exemplify the ritual for Santa Monica Bay Parlor at Ocean Park. Initiation is set for the 21st. The 28th the members born in January will entertain.

December 14 Ramona presented to the Excelsior Union high-school at Norwalk American and State (Bear) Flags, the presentation address being delivered by Superior Judge Ruben Schmidt. The response was made by Harold McCann, president of the student body, and music was furnished by the school orchestra.

HIGH JINKS, JANUARY 17.

Hollywood Parlor No. 196 N.S.G.W. made a substantial gain in membership during 1926, closing the year with 267, a gain of approximately seventy-five. Four candidates were initiated the final meeting of the year, December 20. At the election of officers December 6 Albert G. Boschke was selected for president. A drill team is in process of formation.

Great plans are being made for Hollywood's annual high jinks January 17. S. R. Bell is chairman of the committee of arrangements. A good program will be presented, including boxing and wrestling exhibitions, and no end of action is promised.

Grand Trustee John T. Newell will officially visit the Parlor January 3, and on the 24th a class of candidates will be initiated.

GETTING 'EM IN.

Vaquero Parlor No. 262 N.S.G.W. devoted December to getting in new members, and initiation was the feature at each meeting. Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer has been in charge of the work and as a result the membership-roll has been considerably increased and several applications are on file.

A social session December 21 to which the women-folks were invited drew out a large crowd and everybody had a good time. Vaquero is rapidly winning favor with the "East Siders." Grand Trustee John T. Newell paid an official visit to the Parlor December 28.

GRAND PRESIDENT N.D. VISITS.

Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. received an official visit from Grand President Pearl Lamb December 15. Preceding the meeting a banquet was served in the banquet-room of the Women's Athletic Club, which was prettily decorated. In addition to Mrs. Lamb the guests included Past Grand Presidents Dr. Mariana Bertola, Grace S. Stoermer and Sue J. Irwin, Grand Secretary Hattie E. Roberts, Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas, D.D.G.P. Bertha Hitt and Florence Dodson-Schoneman, chairman Grand Parlor history and landmarks committee.

SAN FRANCISCO

THE BIG CITY THAT KNOWS HOW

THE LEATHER TANNING CENTER OF THE WEST

Capen A. Fleming

(MANAGER INDUSTRIAL DEPARTMENT SAN FRANCISCO CHAMBER COMMERCE.)

MENTION ALMOST ANY LEATHER article and you will invariably find, by a little searching, that it is made right here in some one of the many San Francisco leather fabricating plants. San Francisco is the leather-tanning center of the West and our leather industry, including tanning and shoe manufacture, amounts to $8,700,000 yearly. Of this amount, tanning and shoe manufacture amount to $6,200,000, while the miscellaneous leather goods manufacture, which we shall consider here, amounts to the difference, or $2,500,000.

Here in San Francisco we make both work gloves and high-class dress gloves for men. In fact, in and around this city there are more gloves made than in any other section of the Pacific Coast. As for distribution, our gloves are sold all over the country west of the Mississippi River.

Women's leather handbags, pocketbooks and leather-covered vanity cases are made here by several factories in large quantities and in all grades. Our highest-class department stores handle these San Francisco products, this output being sold also all up and down the coast.

The owner of a large plant came out from New York about two years ago to determine whether or not the West was any place in which to manufacture. He had heard it was not, as people out here would not buy things made here. His study gave him a different viewpoint. He carefully inspected and surveyed the entire Pacific Coast region and became convinced, not only that the West was an ideal place for manufacture, due to its excellent climate, working conditions and fast-growing market, but that San Francisco, occupying the geographically central position in this great Western market, is the natural manufacturing and distributing center of the region. And this gentleman states that every month shows a marked increase in business over the month before.

Other leather manufacturers also have voluntarily given optimistic statements about the upward trend of San Francisco's leather-fabricating industry, it being stated that California leather goods hold an enviable reputation for quality all over the country. And, furthermore, we are so well entrenched and have so much leather tanned right at our back door that San Francisco factories can face the severe competition of Eastern plants and win on government bids.

As proof of this statement, you may be somewhat surprised to learn that right here in San Francisco all the leather mailbags used throughout the United States by Uncle Sam's mailcarriers have been made for the last three years. This means that for three years this San Francisco manufacturer has bid successfully against all other interested leather goods manufacturing plants throughout the United States, and it also means that 16,000 San Francisco-made mailcarrier leather bags have left here for national service each year for three years, or a total of 48,000 bags. For every bag there is required a full side of leather, that is a half-hide. This one item of San Francisco manufacture represents the hide contribution of 24,000 cattle!

For the last nine months another San Francisco plant has supplied the United States Navy with all the rigging leather used by the navy's patrolling and scouting ships, this order also having been placed as a result of a successful competitive bid.

If the subject is brief cases, we find that we have a factory which turns out more of them than any other concern west of Chicago. This is another indication of the fact that the leather goods industry is taking hold in the West, with San Francisco as the center. It was not many years ago that such articles as brief cases, and certainly mailcarriers' bags, were all made in the East.

Men's and women's belts are made here in large quantities in several of the leather-fabricating plants, but one of these concerns specializes in the manufacture of belts, it being the largest belt-manufacturing plant west of the Mississippi. This plant turns out more than 7,000 belts a week, and, to do so, consumes 200 sides of leather a week.

Another local plant has patented a belt and buckle which have found great popularity in schools and colleges. The buckle is especially cast, with a particular school insignia upon it, and to date more than 5,000 different school orders have been filled. Both the leather and the buckle are made here, and the school names and insignia which constitute the buckle design represent schools located all over the United States.

The leather link floor mats so commonly seen these days are made here in two factories, one of which has an output of mats greater than any other similar plant west of the Mississippi. The product is distributed throughout the twelve Western states and goes into export trade. These leather link mats are made from leather scraps, which means that the mat is a by-product of the leather industry.

In the line of suit cases and traveling bags, local manufacture leads in the West. They are shipped as far north as Alaska, and across the Pacific to Australia.

In leather transmission belting we find another phase of the leather goods industry where San Francisco is the leader. The four plants here making this belting provide strong competition with Eastern plants in the territory west of the Mississippi, in the islands and in China, and again we find that one of them is larger than any other of its kind in the western half of the United States. Leather belting is made by cementing together leather strips of the desired width. It is never split, but in the heavier belts two or three thicknesses are cemented together. Length is obtained by splicing the beveled ends and cementing them under hydraulic pressure.

To detail this San Francisco leather industry further is unnecessary. Of course, the checkbook covers and bank passbooks could be mentioned as another line made here, but to continue with a recital of the leather products made locally would consume much time and space.

From this it is easy, however, to see why San Francisco is the leather goods manufacturing center of the West.

AUTOMOBILE ASSOCIATION PLANS LINCOLN HIGHWAY COMPLETION.

Completion of the Lincoln highway, which will provide another transcontinental motor artery over which tourists and settlers may reach California North, was planned in conference held during December in San Francisco, according to the California State Automobile Association.

Perfection of these plans was discussed by Gael S. Hoag, secretary of the Lincoln Highway Association, with headquarters in Detroit, at a conference with C. C. Cottrell, manager of the highways bureau of the California association.

THE LONG BEACH OIL FIELD

Dr. G. P. Hitchcock

(PUBLICITY DEPARTMENT, LONG BEACH CHAMBER COMMERCE.)

LONG BEACH OIL FIELD IS PERHAPS better known as the Signal Hill oil field. The name would imply that Signal Hill stands out as a signal, and so it does. As one approaches Long Beach from any direction, on land or sea, this hill, with its forest of derricks, stands out against the sky as a beacon to guide the way to the city. It can be seen for many miles. The summit of Signal Hill is about four hundred feet above the sea and two miles distant from it. The oil field is about four miles long and from one-half to three-fourths mile in width, and covers about 1,500 acres.

The existence of a favorable structure for the accumulation of oil had long been known. One of the California oil companies drilled a well as early as 1916—five years before the discovery well was brought in. This prospect well was drilled to a depth of 3,449 feet without encountering any oil-bearing formations and it was abandoned in 1917. This failure discouraged further prospecting for several years, or until the discovery of oil in Huntington Beach, fifteen miles east, in 1920. Following this discovery interest was revived here. In a few months the Shell Company commenced drilling what proved to be the discovery well of Signal Hill oil field. It was brought in June 25, 1921, with an initial daily production of 500 barrels. The Long Beach area was now proclaimed as proven territory. A period of intense action followed and a mad rush to lease the land.

SIGNAL HILL OIL FIELD, LONG BEACH.

Signal Hill lies in and near Long Beach. Conditions here differed from most oil fields, in that the land was largely held as city lots, acreage and larger tracts. Many people had to be dealt with in leasing the land. Every one wanted a well on his holding, and over-drilling resulted. There were more wells than necessary for the economic recovery of the oil.

Formations encountered here are beds of sand, sandy shales and shales. Troubles were from water, gas under high pressure and unfortunate ignition of the gas or oil column at times. Fires have been successfully extinguished by exploding a charge of dynamite in the column above the well. Such fires are accidental and not the rule. Gas pressure is the expelling agent or force which causes a well to flow. When gas pressure diminishes the well must go on the pump.

Estimates of the life of any oil field or the ultimate production is mere speculation. Production usually goes to a peak, then there is a natural decline. There are methods of holding production of a field, such as development of new wells, cleaning out old wells or by drilling exhausted ones to deeper sands.

Petroleum is not limited to the formation in which it originated. It may migrate by gravitation, capillary attraction or by differences in specific gravity. It is an extremely complex mixture of compounds of hydrogen and carbon and other substances in small amounts.

There are two conclusions regarding the origin and nature of the occurrence of petroleum among those who know, or think they do. One authority says: "Petroleum is decomposed organic matters imprisoned in the strata at the time of their formation. Hence, when decomposition is completed it is through for all time and after the oil is withdrawn we might as well move on." This conclusion seems inconsistent, in that it puts a stop on natural phenomena that has occurred. Who knows that it may not go on and refill the reservoir, a mile below the surface, that has been emptied. Nature works slowly and it might take a century or more to do it. The other fellow says: "The process of formation is a continuous one, the underground reservoir being constantly replenished as oil is withdrawn." Experience has not proven this conclusion, simply because there has not been sufficient time for the oil to be replenished. We need not worry about it. It is a problem for the far-distant future.

Some features of geological structure found in the Signal Hill field are similar to those in all other fields, such as porous or open reservoir, impervious cover, etc. Petroleum is stored in the sand strata. The sand may become saturated or super-saturated with oil. Gas pressure, supersaturation and other conditions have a bearing on high initial production of new wells for a limited time. Lessened production may be caused by obstructions, diminished gas pressure, decrease in supply of oil and nearby development of new wells.

FINANCIAL BENEFITS.

We have people in Long Beach who argue that the oil field industry here never benefited the city in a financial or any other way. Others said, more than two years ago, there was no more oil on Signal Hill, yet, today, this field heads the list of all California fields in production, by a big margin. Signal Hill field will undoubtedly be a good producer for years to come. As the oil industry progresses there is a tendency to go deeper. There is much contiguous territory still undeveloped.

Let us see whether or not the above contentions are true. In 1920 the population of Long Beach was 55,000. The discovery well came in a few months later, in 1921. The population today is about 140,000, making a gain of 85,000 from 1920 to 1926, a period of six years, under the stimulus of oil. The population increase from 1910 to 1920, the ten-year period before the discovery of oil, was only 38,000.

Long Beach City receives about one million dollars annually in oil royalties from wells on its own land holdings, making possible many needed public improvements which could not have otherwise been financed. A large number of people have been employed and payrolls have been as high as two million dollars per month. The production of the field to date closely approaches 200,000,000 barrels, an average of 40,000,000 barrels annually. Production has been as high as 260,000 barrels daily. The highest number of wells at any one time has been around 700.

At a conservative market price of $1.50 per barrel, the gross earnings of Signal Hill oil field have been about $300,000,000. It has probably cost $100,000,000 to bring all of these wells to the producing stage. Net profits should be close to $200,000,000. An oil well costing from $50,000 to $100,000 might seem to be overcapitalized, but if it produces from one-half to one million barrels of oil the aspect is different.

A Jew asked his little son this question: "Ikey, if you had a million dollars, vot mit you do wid it?" Ikey did not take the problem to bed with him, but promptly answered: "I'd sell it for two million." So the oil people have done about as well as Ikey thought he could do.

This vast amount of money resulting from the development of Signal Hill oil field has been widely distributed. It has made millionaires and perhaps some multi-millionaires. A large number have become wealthy and a still larger number have become independent or fairly well to do. Merchants and business generally have benefited. Thousands have benefited indirectly. Long Beach motorists have had much cheaper gasoline than those in the back country.

In addition to oil, Signal Hill field has a large natural gas production, which has been ample for Long Beach and surrounding country for domestic cooking, heating and industrial purposes. For domestic uses there is the very low rate of 50 cents per thousand cubic feet.

It is evident that Long Beach has benefited in a very large way from the discovery of oil at its door. The benefits have even extended to outlying cities and surrounding country.

OIL REFINING.

Long Beach has a large number of oil refineries in and near the city. Crude petroleum, as such, has few or no uses. Very few understand the refining end of the oil industry. It is not as complicated as it may seem. Petroleum is so constituted as to yield a number of distinct products. Briefly, refining of oil is a separation of these products of petroleum, one from the other. The process that separates them is distillation, condensation, filtration and purification, without mentioning the many details. The different products have different boiling points. Gasoline has the lowest boiling point and when the proper degree of heat is applied to the still containing crude oil, the gasoline is driven off as a vapor and passes on to the condenser. Kerosene has the next highest boiling point and with the proper degree of heat is likewise driven off, and so on until all of the products are separated.

The principal products of petroleum are gasoline, kerosene, gas oil, fuel oil, lubricating oils, paraffin, etc. There are scores of articles of trade made in part or entirely of petroleum products, such as candles, wax paper, electrical insulation and chewing gum. In the early days kerosene was the chief product and in that period gasoline was not well understood and was considered a waste product—something to be gotten out of the way. The early kerosene, being more or less explosive, took the name "deadly kerosene." Undoubtedly some of the gasoline content was driven over with the kerosene in the distilling process, causing the latter oil to be explosive. The highly refined kerosene of today is not explosive.

The coming of the motor car with its internal combustion engine and the extensive use of the gasoline engine in industry has made gasoline the most important petroleum product. If for any reason the supply of petroleum should become exhausted the wheels of industry could not go around very long because of the widespread and general use of its products. Without gasoline, traffic jams, highway congestion, motor accidents and joy riding would disappear.

Many millions of barrels of petroleum and its products are exported annually from the Long Beach-Los Angeles Harbors. A large part of it goes to foreign countries and much of it to our Atlantic seaboard. The oil is transported to the harbor district through pipe lines from many oil fields within a hundred miles or more.

Long Beach Harbor is a new development and it has been only a few months since the harbor has had equipment for oil export. In these few months over four million barrels have been exported from Long Beach Harbor.

DEVELOPMENT OF INDUSTRY.

The development of the great petroleum industry in the United States started with the first well in 1859. During the first ten years progress was slow. In the seventies production increased. The railroads of the day were not equipped to handle crude oil economically. Necessity brought forth the underground oil pipe line system and in a few years the transportation of crude petroleum was practically out of the hands of the railroads. However, today the railroads, with the modern tank car, do an enormous business in transporting petroleum products. Production continued to increase. Domestic demand could not absorb the supply. Prices were unstable. The need of the hour was an outlet for the oil. It was evident the outlet must be in foreign countries.

The Standard Oil Company was organized in 1870. Its policy was to consolidate small interests in the oil industry, to grow and become a power in the oil business. It was a pioneer in "big business," to which public sentiment of that time was distinctly not favorable. It was new then and untried, but today we have become reconciled to it. To push the sale of petroleum products around the world required courage, energy, initiative and large capital. Standard had all of these requisites and has done more than any other corporation to develop the industry here and in foreign countries. In earlier years it practically controlled the industry.

In most recent years many powerful independent oil companies have come into being and they have been of great benefit to the industry. The Standard, while it has been more or less a large producer, its greatest business has been as buyer of oil, transporting, refining and marketing of the finished products in every part of the world. Oil bunkers have been established in many parts of the world where large users can take on supplies.

The earliest exports were shipped in barrels and later in bulk in the holds of wooden ships. Sailors became afraid of oil-laden vessels because of the supposed danger of fire and many of them refused to sail on them. It became more or less difficult to man oil-laden ships and it is said the practice of kidnaping sailors and putting them on board while under the influence of drink was resorted to. Today we have the modern ocean-going oil tanker.

California produces about thirty percent of the oil produced in this country, ranking first among the states. In 1925 this state produced more than 230,000,000 barrels of petroleum.

GRAND TRUSTEE N.S. TO VISIT.

At the December 1 meeting of Long Beach Parlor No. 239 N.S.G.W. officers for the ensuing term were elected, Harold W. Oliver being chosen president. One candidate was initiated, and several applications were filed. A donation was made to the Long Beach Tuberculosis Association. The dance given jointly with the Native Daughters at Gould Hall December 15 proved very enjoyable.

January 19 Grand Trustee John T. Newell will pay an official visit to the Parlor. At that time, too, the newly-elected officers will be installed.

TREE PLANTING.

The Long Beach Federation of States Societies had its annual tree planting in Recreation Park December 18. The flags of forty-nine states were in evidence; each was carried by a boy scout with the name of the state pinned across his chest. A picnic dinner at 12:30 was followed by a program and the tree planting.

Each state, except California, had the privilege of dedicating a tree to the memory of some person very dear to that particular state. California was allowed the privilege of dedicating two trees, by Long Beach Parlor No. 154 N.D.G.W. and Long Beach Parlor No. 239 N.S.G.W. Mrs. Julia Arborn officiated for the former and named the tree in honor of Eliza P. Donner-Houghton. For the latter, Frank Merriman dedicated the tree to the memory of Henry T. Gage. Both of these trees were beautiful specimens of the pine.

NATIVE DAUGHTERS' ACTIVITIES.

Long Beach Parlor No. 154 N.D.G.W. was busy most of December fixing Christmas boxes for the ex-service boys and the four ex-service nurses, seventy-nine in all, at the Compton sanitarium. The boxes contained oranges, apples, candy, nuts, dates, figs and a small gift. Julia Arborn was chairman of the committee.

The California thimble club, made up of members of the Parlor, had an all-day session December 2 at the home of Mrs. Kate McFadyen. The many beautiful gifts received by Miss Marie McFadyen, who became the bride of Fred Monroe December 29, were viewed. Another all-day session was held December 16 at the home of Mrs. Mary Brittain.

December 10 fourteen members of the Parlor accompanied D.D.G.P. Bertha Hitt on a visit to Sepulveda Parlor at San Pedro, and on the 15th a group attended a function of Los Angeles Parlor. A large delegation, along with Long Beach's drill-team, attended the institution of a Parlor at Glendale December 14.

WASHING DEVICES IMPROVE-MENTS OVER WASHBOARD METHODS.

Some helpful washing devices are on the market in addition to various types of washing machines. When, for any reason, it is not possible to install a machine, considerable assistance may be obtained from some of these devices, according to the United States Department of Agriculture.

One is a perforated funnel made to fit in a wash boiler. This works on the same principle as a coffee percolator and increases the circulation of water through the clothes. The funnel-on-a-stick type of washer, which was the forerunner of the vacuum-cup washing machine, makes it possible to wash very soiled or infected clothing without immersing the hands. The stick can also be used to lift the wet clothes from the boiler to the tub, although a smooth broomstick is equally satisfactory.

What might be termed "portable washers" are also available. One such type is a pump operated by an electric motor which maintains the circulation of water in the tub and keeps the clothes in motion. Another consists of a set of inverted cones which act on the vacuum principle. This can be fastened to the tub and operated by hand or motor. All of these devices are improvements over the washboard method.

HISTORIC SITES MARKED BY MONUMENT

OROVILLE (BUTTE COUNTY)—AT Bidwell Bar, November 27, there was unveiled and dedicated a granite monument marking the sites of California's "mother" orange tree and the historic Bidwell Bar suspension bridge. Included in the large number who witnessed the impressive ceremonies were many Native Sons and Native Daughters and the following California Pioneers: Mrs. Laura Gordon Chappelle (1852), W. H. Smith (1853), G. W. Hutchins (1857), Ed. Holmes (1858). Also, J. B. Garner, who was born at Bidwell Bar in 1853. The inscription upon the monument reads:

To Commemorate
THE MOTHER ORANGE TREE

Judge Joseph Lewis in 1856

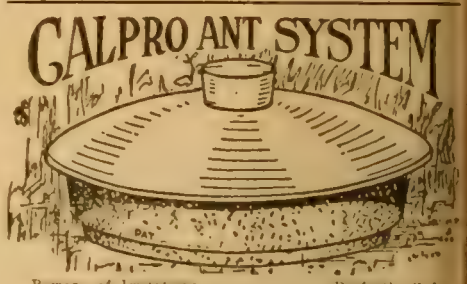
Gold of Ophir Parlor No. 190 N.D.G.W.
Argonaut Parlor No. 8 N.S.G.W.
Nov. 27, 1926

Upon the reverse side of the monument is a tablet of marble, mined at Marble Creek, Butte County, which reads: "In Commemoration of Isaac Reeves Ketchum, Faithful Caretaker. 1856-1905."

Frank Boohr, chairman of the Butte County Board of Supervisors, presided at the ceremonies, and the speakers included Grand President Hilliard E. Welch, representing the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West; District Deputy Grand President Florence Boyle, representing the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West; Dr. H. J. Weber, director of the University of California citrus experiment station at Riverside.

Dr. Weber said that no man could dedicate a monument equal to the tree and the bridge and that the two were monuments in themselves. The tree, he said, measures thirty-three and one-half feet in height, and five and one-half feet in circumference.



Grand President Welch stressed the importance of teaching California history in the universities and schools of the state, and lamented the fact that there are very few institutions of learning in the state where California history is taught. He referred to the need of co-operation, and instanced the fact that lack of co-operation was responsible for the tragedy which overtook the Reed-Donner party in the high Sierras in 1846.

Mrs. Boyle recounted the history of the discovery of gold in Butte County, of the "mother" orange tree and of the suspension bridge. She said, in part:

"Two months after the discovery of gold in California by James W. Marshall, at Coloma, El Dorado County, General John Bidwell was returning to his home in Chico, Butte County, after a trip to San Francisco. One evening camp was made on the banks of the Feather River, at a place which later was known as Hamilton.

"While the evening meal was being prepared, General Bidwell walked down to the banks of the river and discovered small particles of gold in the water's edge. He then knew if there were small particles of gold to be found in the valley the precious metal must be in large quantities in the mountains.

"Immediately after returning to Chico he got together a few men and made his way up the Feather River, locating at a point on the Middle Fork, which has ever since been known as Bidwell Bar. In a few months the bar was a flourishing mining town, being located on the Beckwith Trail.

"As the town was located upon the banks of the river it was necessary to have some means of transportation across the stream. Ferry rights were then granted to individuals to take care of transportation. A large iron pin was wedged into the rocks to hold the ferries. This pin is still in evidence.

"After a short time it was found this means of transportation was too slow, so the Bidwell Bar Bridge Company was organized and plans for the construction of a suspension bridge were made. In 1853 the cables and iron braces were brought around Cape Horn, and the bridge was finally completed in 1856 as a toll bridge, at a total cost of $34,600. The bridge was purchased by the County of Butte in 1884 for the sum of $6,000. Howard Burt was the first bridge tender, serving until March 1859. Isaac Reeves Ketchum then became bridge tender and served until 1905.

"The cables of the bridge are sunk into great bowls of lead in the native rock. This lead was gathered by Alfred Clark and brother from the boxes of tea used by the miners, and then melted.

"In 1853, Jesse Morrill planted in Sacramento the seeds of an orange from Tahiti. In 1856, Judge Joseph Lewis purchased three of the little orange trees and had them brought to Bidwell Bar. Howard Burt planted one of them near the suspension bridge, where it still thrives. Isaac Reeves Ketchum was the faithful caretaker of the 'mother' orange tree from March 1859 until his death in 1905; his remains were interred beneath the tree he had for so many years cared for."

Music for the occasion was rendered by the Fort Winfield Scott military band and there was community singing. J. H. Liggett, a nephew of Howard Burt, unveiled the monument, which was designed by Harry Hume, Butte County engineer. The ceremonies were arranged by the following joint committee of Gold of Ophir Parlor No. 190 N.D.G.W. and Argonaut Parlor No. 8 N.S.G.W.: Florence Boyle, Alta Hengy, W. H. Hibbard, Frank Boyle.

LIFE AND CUSTOMS POMO INDIANS OF CALIFORNIA RECORDED.

Another lap in a race with death, the closing scene, perhaps, of the great American tragedy that started with the coming of Columbus 434 years ago, has just been completed by the University of California Department of Anthropology.

A volume of Indian folkways of the Pomo group of California, entitled "Pomo Folkways," has been added to the constantly growing record of the life and customs of the California Indian as they existed before the coming of the White man. The material was obtained from old men of the tribe who probably will carry their memories of the "old days" to the grave in a few years.

The new addition to the university library of ethnology is edited by Edwin M. Loeb, research associate in anthropology, and includes work done by Miss L. S. Freeland, Miss R. Greiner, Miss V. Hughes, Matthew A. Stirling and H. Story, under the direction of Professor A. L. Kroeber.

The Pomo Indians are members of a linguistic group inhabiting the coast ranges north of San Francisco Bay, roughly from Santa Rosa, in Sonoma County, to Fort Bragg, in Mendocino County. A number of their villages are still in existence, chiefly in the vicinity of Clear Lake, Lake County. Five Indians of the group aided in the work. Among the towns near which village sites may be found are: Cloverdale, Hopland, Kelseyville, Lakeport, Ukiah, Booneville, Yorkville, Willits, Mendocino, Fort Bragg, Upper Lake, Lower Lake and Gualala.

HOLLYWOOD WILL MOVE FORWARD

Harry Barratt

(ASSISTANT SECRETARY, HOLLYWOOD CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

NEW AND IMPROVED HIGHWAYS, linking Hollywood and the San Fernando Valley, planned for 1927, will constitute a vital force in the development of both the motion-picture industry capital and the great agrarian district on the north side of the Santa Monica Mountains in the next decade, according to industrial surveyors and executives of the Hollywood Branch, Los Angeles Realty Board. These officials, in recent reports, emphasize the probability that the valley, in the next ten years, will see as great growth and development as has Hollywood in the past decade, and that Hollywood will move ahead in the coming decade as importantly as in the past.

Because of the great wealth contained in its soil, the constant and rapid settlement of the farms, and the continued and almost startling growth of its communities and cities, Edmund F. Fader, industrial engineer of Eberle & Riggleman, sees a wonderful development for the San Fernando Valley immediately ahead. This development, with its increased population, must affect Hollywood, since the trend of traffic to and from the valley will be through Hollywood.

Contemplated in engineering plans for early construction are important road improvements on the other side of Cahuenga boulevard summit, and what was formerly known as Cahuenga Pass road, widening and paving of Laurel Canyon road and the widening and paving of Ventura boulevard from its present junction with Lankershim boulevard to Calabasas.

It is quite likely that work will be started in the spring on both Laurel Canyon road and the extension of paving of Cahuenga boulevard. The latter is to cover a distance of more than a mile in length, being 6,200 feet from the end of the present pavement over the summit to the intersection of Ventura boulevard, thence 2,500 feet to the Lankershim boulevard bridge at Universal City. The width will be about seventy-four feet, with a ten-foot walk on one side. Cement concrete will be used in construction, ten inches thick in the center and twelve inches on the sides.

It is planned to widen Ventura boulevard to seventy feet the entire length from Lankershim boulevard to Calabasas, while Laurel Canyon road is to be paved and generally improved.

It is now about a year since the new Cahuenga boulevard, over Cahuenga Pass, was completed and opened to traffic. Records show that in ten hours on a single Sunday nearly 54,000 cars passed the summit to and from the valley. It is believed that since that time the traffic count has run at least 60,000.

With transportation problems solved through greatly improved highways, realty officials and industrial surveyors are confident that their development predictions for both Hollywood and the valley will be realized within ten years.

Hollywood's importance as a point of attraction is finding response in the departments of publicity on railroads of both the United States and in Canada, according to executive officers of the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce, who announce receipt of a number of calls lately from railroads for information concerning this community.

Representatives of the Canadian Pacific and the Pennsylvania Railroad systems were recent

BOOK REVIEWS

(MARGERY BOYD.)

"MY OWN STORY."

y Fremont Older; The Macmillan Company, Publishers, New York; Price, $2.50.

Usually the events in our lives which leave ie deepest impress, the influences which sway s in the greatest measure, are those which we nd it most difficult to talk about. It is so with ooks. Especially is this true of Fremont Old-'s book, "My Own Story."

Older in this autobiography probes human life ith a questioning finger. He writes of himself nd his absorbing newspaper career, of the good nd the bad he has met, of the great and the oor. But, through all the pages of his book is extricably woven his philosophy of life, "tolrance for the intolerant."

"My Own Story" is the fascinating history of newspaperman. Beginning with his career as litor on one of San Francisco's large newspaers, the "Bulletin," in 1895, Older spares no etail of the political life of the city and the ate, nor of the graft and corruption existing at at time. So thrilling are his experiences durg his fight with the political bosses that even me-novels seem pallid reading beside them. is work brought him in contact with many pes of people, from all stations of life. Among them, he writes of ex-convicts, burglars, prostitutes and murderers—writes of them as his friends, in many cases, in all cases with charity and understanding.

"My Own Story" has a very definite message for all. It is a plea for tolerance—tolerance in the judgment of humanity.

"ROPES OF SAND."

By Rose L. Ellerbe; David Graham Fischer Corporation, Publisher, Hollywood; Price, $2.50.

A lonely, footsore American paused at the gate of "El Rancho La Sierra," drinking in the tranquility of the peaceful scene. James Wood felt then that his wanderings were over, that henceforth California would be his home.

In the early days of California hospitality was a sacred rite—few there were who turned the stranger at their gates away without refreshment. So it was that James Wood was taken in and treated as an honored guest at "La Sierra." Amazement and wonder showed upon the face of his host, Don Bernardo Nunez, when he learned that Wood had left Taos, New Mexico, in September and alone had managed, somehow, to cross the mountain ranges and scorched deserts to California; it was then early January. Mercedes Nunez listened, too, with parted lips and vivid eyes as the stalwart Yankee told of his adventures.

Life had only begun for James Wood when a few years later he led the beautiful Mercedes to the altar in the church of Our Lady of Angels, at Los Angeles. Yet he felt a bittter remorse as he realized how far away his son was, and how far removed was he from all this gay, enchanted life. He thought, too, of Isleto, his first wife, and of her death—that she had been an Indian maid, his son, therefore, a half-breed.

Plenteous and happy years passed quickly. When sorrow and disappointment came, James Wood rose stoutly to meet them. "My closest ties—my strongest bonds—have turned out to be ropes of sand," he thought with bitterness. "Because, yes, it may be because of the difference in our bloods—bloods that don't mix." But swiftly ropes of sand drift away under the steady flow of living waters, the life-giving waters of love.

Rose L. Ellerbe has written a splendid book. Historical events of early California, together with the vivid life and characters, are pictured with a charm and freshness that reflect the laborious research work necessary to such a finished product. Angelenos will particularly enjoy the story, as it deals mostly with the country in and about Los Angeles.

"NOTES FROM MY SOUTH SEA LOG."

By Louis Becke; J. B. Lippincott Company, Publishers, Philadelphia; Price, $2.00.

If the title of this book is not enough to tempt the reader to "dip an oar" into its pages, then a review of it is futile.

The author makes no attempt at continuity. Therein lies half the charm of the "Log," for the stories and sketches of which it is composed range from Australia to the South Sea Islands, and are filled with sailors' lore and the deep mysteries of the Pacific. "Saunderson and the Devil Fish," "The Deserted Atoll," "About Sharks," "Shipwreck Memories," are a few of the dramas and comedies that flow from the pen of Louis Becke. All of the notes are based on fact, and many of the events recorded actually happened, for the writer spent most of his life upon the Pacific and in the South Sea Islands.

It has been said that, "Louis Becke knew the Pacific as few men alive or dead have know it." Those who have read the book might add "and he writes it as he knows it."

"GOODBYE, STRANGER."

By Stella Benson; The Macmillan Company, Publishers, New York; Price, $2.25.

"Goodbye, Stranger" is essentially a satire. It is a satire of America, American ways and modern methods. But for the fact that the satire is witty and occasionally strikes accurately home, it would border on cynisim.

The plot is in itself weak. Briefly, it is the old story of the eternal triangle. Clifford Cotton, his wife, Daley, and old Mrs. Cotton lived together. Palsied Mother Cotton insists that her son is a "changeling" —a man who consorts with

PASADENA'S FAMOUS YULETIDE SPECTACLE

Harry L. Roberts

(MANAGER, PUBLICITY DEPARTMENT,
PASADENA CHAMBER OF COMMERCE AND CIVIC ASSOCIATION.)

THOUSANDS OF SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA residents and visitors have been journeying to Pasadena during the last week of 1926 to see the beautiful and inspiring spectacle provided by the illumination of the famous "Street of the Christmas Trees."

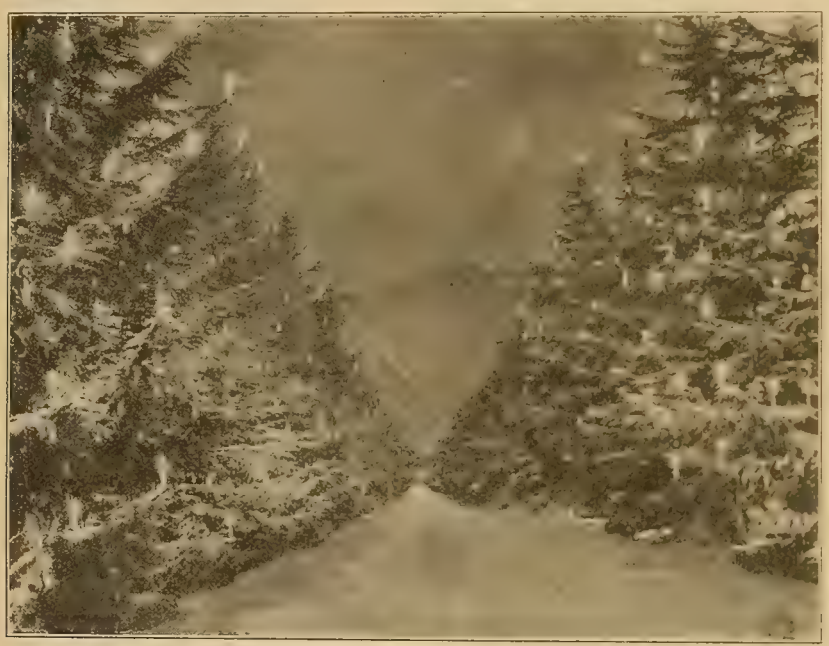
The trees are majestic Himalayan cedars, known as deodars, or "Trees of God." For almost a mile they stand in unbroken rows on both sides of Santa Rosa avenue at the foot of Mount Lowe in Altadena, beautiful suburb of Pasadena, overlooking the city and valley below. Each Yuletide season, the trees are illuminated with thousands of colored electric lights, and from all parts of Southern California people come to view the unusual sight .

It is estimated that approximately half a million persons witness the impressive spectacle each year. So famous has the sight become that many Eastern tourists now plan their California sojourns so as to be here in time to view the illuminated trees.

The illumination begins on Christmas Eve and continues through New Year's night. The lights are turned on at 7 p. m. the night of December 24, following a short program comprising talks by city officials and civic leaders, band music and the singing of Christmas carols. Each night thereafter the lights are on from 5 p. m. until 10 p. m., the last night of the illumination being New Year's night.

The custom of lighting the trees at Christmas time was begun in 1920. Fred C. Nash, Pasadena merchant, conceived the idea, and asked the Pasadena Kiwanis Club, of which he then was president, to sponsor the project. The suggestion met with enthusiastic approbation. So many people came to see the spectacle that first year, and so much favorable comment was expressed, that the club decided to make the illumination of the trees an annual event.

Lights were placed on only a few of the 180 trees that first year. After the initial effort, however, the City of Pasadena came forward with an offer to wire the trees and install the lights, and the Southern California Edison Company agreed to furnish the electricity. Consequently, the number of lights, and the number of trees illuminated, has been increased each succeeding year.



This year, seventy-five of the trees, or almost half, were illuminated. .On the seventy-five trees were 5,625 colored electric light bulbs, one-third of them being red, one-third green and one-third white. Each tree carried three streamers of bulbs, with twenty-five bulbs to the streamer, or seventy-five lights for each tree. To wire the trees required 20,250 feet of wire.

Handling of traffic on Santa Rosa avenue and the streets leading to it during the week between Christmas and New Year's requires the services of many traffic officers and hundreds of Boy Scouts. All traffic is routed north on streets parallel to Santa Rosa avenue, thence on cross-streets to the head of the "Street of the Christmas Trees." On Santa Rosa avenue, all traffic is one-way. The cars come down the thoroughfare two abreast, with lights out, and there never is a break in the long, creeping lines of automobiles from the time the lights are turned on until they are dimmed.

The deodars, now almost eighty feet high and of perfect pyramidal growth, were planted in 1882 from seeds gathered on the slopes of the Himalaya Mountains. The actual planting was done by Thomas L. Hoag, foreman of the huge ranch owned by the Woodbury brothers, John P. and Frederick J. The deodar seeds were sown in beds under glass, where they remained for three years, or until they were about two feet tall. In the summer of 1885, Hoag set the young trees out along what was then a private driveway leading to the Woodbury home. Hoag, now 73 years old, is still a resident of Pasadena.

It is interesting to note that the Woodbury ranch, comprising 900 acres, was purchased by the Woodbury brothers in 1880 for five dollars an acre. The 900 acres are now part of Altadena, beautiful residential suburb, where magnificent homes and gorgeous gardens nestle close against the lofty Sierra Madres.

The stately deodar trees, offsprings of the age-old forests of India, where for centuries they have been the inspiration of poets and mystics, thrive in the climate of California's southland. The trees belong to the cedrus deodora branch of the cedar family. They form extensive forests in the Himalayas at elevations of from 7,000 to 10,000 feet. In their native habitat, they often grow to be 150 feet high, and as much as eight feet in diameter. They cannot survive any great amount of frost, however.

ORIGINAL NAME CONTRA COSTA COUNTY'S NOTED LANDMARK.

Mount Diablo was known to Californians who resided in the vicinity of the noted meridian peak between the years of 1818 and 1828 as Sierra de las Golgones.

This historical information is contained in the original field notes of Professor George Davidson, who for many years was in charge of the San Francisco headquarters of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey and who passed away in the early '80s. His report on a surveying expedition to the top of the Contra Costa County landmark is dated December 21-29, 1858. In the concluding paragraph he states:

"The only name by which this old mountain is known to the old Californians that have resided here for thirty or forty years is Sierra de las Golgones. (De Mofras calls it Sierra de los Bolbones.) They say that the term Mount Diablo is applied to another and smaller peak in this neighborhood."

Davidson's original notes were uncovered by Captain Paul C. Whitney of Berkeley, who is in charge of the San Francisco headquarters of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey of the Pacific.

Recently Captain Whitney made his first trip to the summit of Mount Diablo. So delighted was he with that journey, he explains, that it prompted him to make a search of the old historical coast survey documents, of which there are literally thousands on file in the customs building in San Francisco. Discovery of the probable name of the mountain more than 100 years ago Captain Whitney regards as the most treasured gem of that hunt.

Approximately 1,500 words are devoted to Davidson's description of the arduous task involved in a trip to the mountain top in '58. The details, as chronicled by the former coast survey chief, stand out in marked contrast to the pleasure and comfort of a motor trip to the summit today. Then it was a three-day undertaking beset with many difficulties; today the pinnacle of the historical peak is distant one and one-half hours from the heart of the east bay.

Modern Life Waste—The increasing loss of life and property due to accidents with motor vehicles "is one of the most conspicuous examples of waste in modern life," declared Secretary Herbert Hoover of the Federal Department of Commerce in his annual report made public November 29. He places the losses from causes "incident to inadequate traffic facilities" at $2,000,000,000 annually.

George F. McNoble of Stockton Parlor No. 7 N.S.G.W. spoke on the "Past Development of Stockton" and dealt with the founding and growth of the city.

Hilliard E. Welch, Grand President N.S.G.W., was assigned the subject "Aims of the Fraternity." He impressively told of the organization of the Native Sons, of their work through the many years which have followed, and of their steadfast desire to continue their work of keeping alive California history and of promoting cooperation throughout California in the development and growth of the state.

City Manager Charles E. Ashburner was the last speaker. His theme was the "Outlook for Stockton," and in an address brimful of optimism he presented a wonderful word-picture of the city, saying, in part: "Stockton will be a large and prosperous inland port with ships sailing to all parts of the world. Stockton will be the greatest cotton handling port on the west coast and there is no reason why cotton mills, woolen mills, woodworking plants, canneries and, in fact, almost every kind of manufacturing plant, cannot be successfully established here as soon as our world-wide transportation is accomplished by the deepening of the San Joaquin River."

At the conclusion of the dedication, a dance was held in Native Sons' Hall as a part of the program. The following day, December 4, the visiting grand officers were guests of Stockton Parlor No. 7 at a luncheon.

STOCKTON'S NATIVE DAUGHTERS SPREAD CHRISTMAS CHEER.

Toys made colorful the beautiful tree which was the decorative feature at the annual Christmas party of Joaquin Parlor No. 5 N.D.G.W. There was a large assemblage, and the members of the Parlor appeared in costume. For the most original outfits Mrs. Lois Martin and Ernest Poletti were awarded prizes.

A program was presented by Misses Bettyjo Kitt, Georgia Bearrup, Jean Waite, Laetitia McRoberts and Elsie Nelson and Mms. Myron Bidwell and Lois Martin. The juniper berry, holly, hawthorne and fir were used in the lovely decorations. Arrangements for the party were in the hands of the following committee: Mrs. Hattie Ward, who directed the program of selected talent, Irene Tefft, Flora Bund, Lillian Querilo, Catherine Wilson, Hattie Corr, Sarah Tully, Olive Hawley.

The following day Joaquin Parlor added the toys that decorated the tree to the Stockton Christmas contribution to the Indians of California North. The Parlor also carried out its annual custom of sending boxes of holiday goodies—candy, nuts, jellies, jams and homemade cookies—to the war veterans in the Arizona barracks. Past Grand President Carrie Roesch-Durham headed the committee in charge of this work.

heltered and nursed by the Cottons. Unhampered by the ordinary man's sense of pride or onor, Clifford immediately makes open love to ena. This state of affairs continues until Clifford, aroused at last from the spell of the fairies, aves goodbye to his stranger self and becomes nce again the happy husband of Daley. The scenes and actions are laid in China, hich gives Miss Benson an ideal opportunity to mploy the bizarre. Then, too, is made possible er apt comparisons of race. Chinese, English nd American. The action of the book covers day and a half. ALAMEDA COUNTY'S INDIAN SHELL MOUND

COOPER'S FAMOUS NOVEL, "THE LAST of the Mohicans," has now been gone one better in a scientific way by the University of California Press, which has just published a work which might well be titled "The Last of the Mohicans' Resting Place," inasmuch as it is a final eport on the Indian shell mound and burial lace in Emeryville, Alameda County, which was estroyed to make way for a factory two years go.

The volume, whose real title is "Final Report n Emeryville Shellmound," represents probably he last word that will ever be said concerning he Indians who inhabited this particular porion of the San Francisco Bay shore for some housand years before the coming of the White an. W. Egbert Schenck, the author, gathered is material while a steam shovel was dumping he remains of the mounds into trucks for factory site fill.

On the basis of the amount of material contained in the mound and its environs, perhaps ,000,000 cubic feet of shell, ashes, bones and amp dirt, Schenck estimates that the Indians ere 1,000 years in accumulating the debris, hich is only about one-third of the time allowed in previous estimates.

In preparing his book on the basis of material ecovered from the mound, measurements made, nd search of early Spanish history, the author as drawn a scientific picture of the country long the bay shore and describes the habits of he Indians who camped there during certain easons, as far back as the years when Denmark as making its last attempt to conquer Great ritain, in the tenth century, A.D.

At that time, Schenck states, the shore line as perhaps fifteen hundred feet farther out in he bay than at present, as it appears to have een moving at the rate of 150 feet a century nder the cutting force of the Sacramento River urrents. The country abounded in deer, elk, irds and small game animals. The waters of he bay were inhabited by many sea otters (now xtinct) and even occasional whales. Salmon nd other varieties of fish spawned in Temescal reek, which empties into the bay at the mound ite, and the shores of the bay were lined with ysters, clams, mussels and other shellfish.

This food paradise was visited regularly by ndians. They camped at the water's edge year fter year, leaving behind them a clutter of hells, bones and other debris. Occasionally a eath occurred and the body was interred on he spot, or perhaps cremated. In the course of enturies this mass of debris spread out for 300,-00 square feet and grew to a height of perhaps orty feet. In the past twenty-five years 651 keletons have been recovered from the mound.

In 1859 Edward Wiard bought the shell ound plot. He leveled off one section and uilt a mile race track, known as the Oakland rotting Park, and on the top of another he uilt a dance pavilion. Around it he formed a ark and picnic ground, which he named Shellound Park. It was this protection that preerved the remainder of the mound intact for so any years, Schenck believes. But in 1924 rogress stepped in and now the shell mounds re nothing but a memory recorded in Schenck's ook.

SEPARATE BLOUSE HAS RETURNED

NOVELTY FURS PROVED THE KEY-note to smart football fashions of the 1926 season. Such pelts as calfskin, krimer, goatskin, pony, leopard or the stenciled furs are crowding the more luxurious furs to the background and even giving the ever-popular muskrat and raccoon, which have so long been the choice of the younger set, a decided contest in point of numbers.

An interesting accompaniment to these flat, short-haired furs is the hat of the same, or a felt trimmed with a little band of the coat fur.

The millinery in felt, velvet and velour shows a decided penchant for draped turban lines. Clear shades of red, such as scarlet and even cherry and cerise, rather than the wine hues, have been extremely popular. Beige, tan and brown have maintained their customary high position.

While it is still too early to speculate on the success of a new silhouette, advance offerings of spring coats sponsor a deep, square-cut armhole, a line simulating the dolman, but which, it is believed, is much more becoming to the average figure.

Fabrics also assume a new importance in spring lines, a fact which promises to influence the demand for spring dresses as well as coats.

At the beginning of each season during the past two years, the inevitable question was debated, whether the one- or two-piece mode would predominate. Clothes are now being designed for the individual rather than the mass.

Just as long as the sports element continues to govern the styling of practically all-day wear, the scarf must continue its part as contributory detail. It is the simple, unfinished neckline so prevalent that is chiefly responsible for the dressing up scarfs that are registering at this moment and reflect the prominence of sports styles especially and are either of the square kerchief kind or else short and oblong.

The batik scarf is also running among the favorites in silk. In outdoor sports the cashmere scarf remains as a style essential worn wound about the neck. Plaids and stripes predominate and strike a gay note that is inevitable in clothes for such gay occasions.

Distinctly removed from the realm of sports is the scarf that utilizes all the glitter and gauze of the evening mode, in net or chiffon, and decorated with sequins or rhinestones or metal embroidery.

Novelty and staple lingerie presented at this time show no particular new styles, due to the fact that designers are adding new numbers every day. This varied demand necessitated a complete range of types from simple tailored styles to the most frivolous numbers developed of georgette and lace.

The flapper styles are followed closely and many versions of the bobbie sets, consisting of bandeau and very short stepin combinations, are also items of importance, in styles developed of ecru lace and pastel shades or flesh crepe-de-chine.

Dance bloomers have the legs entirely covered with deep ruffles of lace, while sets of gowns and chemise have trimmings of pleating in yokes and bandings.

Novelty numbers come in black or colored georgette gowns and have two thicknesses in contrasting colors and are elaborately trimmed with lace.

It is rumored about the shops that the black stocking, for so long an outcast, will return on the heels of this new fashion. As yet, not many ankles have taken on mourning, but a few stores are showing a gunmetal chiffon hose with a black heel that gives an effect of transparency without suggesting that the leg is entirely uncovered, as do our popular "nudes," "fleshes" and "atmospheres."

There is an almost unbelievable array of colors in stockings and it takes an expert to determine just which color was made for one's particular use. However, we are advised that the nude shades of hosiery can be worn with black, mauve, gray or dark brown footwear, and the wood shades of hosiery will harmonize with medium tan and dark brown shoes, while gray shaded chiffon stockings will combine nicely with black and gray shoes.

The despised separate blouse has returned and is made of contrasting colors and materials. Not only has the overblouse assumed a new dignity in its present rich guise, but even the old-time "tuck-in" has made its reappearance and is being received by the younger generation, who rejoice in slim, lissome figures.

Elaborate metallic applique, bright-colored embroidery, satin-backed moire, crepe elizabeth and crepe satin are among other fabrics enjoying popularity as blouse materials.

A slight variation of the mode appears in the short smoking jackets, which have such a tremendous vogue and which are fashioned in bright colors of velveteen or moire, featuring georgette vestees and satin revers.

For trimming there are buttons, buckles an even beadings, while girdles and cravattes a almost the invariable rule. In general, they a not very long, extending just a trifle below th waistline.

Skirts are fairly full for evening wear to a commodate dancers. However, this fulness scarcely apparent, for in reality the line is straight.

Dressier frocks are developed in georgette, crepe-romaine or silk crepe. These materials lend themselves to soft blousing with cape and bolero treatments, as well as panels, drapes, circular effects and pleats for the skirts.

Color must not be neglected as a prominent influence in early spring frocks. Whites are contrasted in many instances with black or with a shade as vivid as purple.

The two-piece frock may use the bright coat to edge its jumper and its skirt. Frequently a novelty fabric is completed by a solid tone to blend.

THE RAINBOW'S END

(J. STANTON CLARKE.)

In '49 through rain and shine,
O'er deserts void of habitation,
Brave Pioneers of bygone years
Had visions of a new creation.
By covered wagon "prairie schooner,—
Impelled by other conquests won,
Through trails and trials and unknown wilds,
But guided by the setting sun

O'er mountain steep, through canyons deep,
Unwearied miles that fall behind,
With vision keen for land unseen
And thoughts of gold they were to find.
All undismayed by Redmen's raid,
Their challenge answered fought and won,
With wounds that burn, no backward turn
But forward to the setting sun.

At last the day though far away
A sight most wondrous to behold,
There to the west, vast treasure chest—
All virgin land of purest gold.
Enriched posterity by conquest won,
For visions born in Native Son
Is California; paradise found,
Where health, and wealth, and joy abound.

California, land of gold,
Rich in lore and legends old.
Beautified by rarest flower,
Glorified through strength and power.
Sun-kissed land where harvest's reap
Life's fulfillment; fruit so sweet,
Land of Promise, nature's best;
The Rainbow's End! The Golden West.

FEWER FUR ANIMALS—MORE DEMAND FOR FURS.

Fur is an important commercial commodity and more of it is consumed in the United States than in any other country in the world. In fact, the supply is diminishing and the demand increasing. The logical way to supply the demand for furs and prevent still further shrinkage in the source of supply is to produce more fur animals. The quickest and surest way to accomplish this, says Frank G. Ashbrook of the Biological Survey, United States Department of Agriculture, is through the enactment of better laws and through a stricter enforcement of them.

"Many trapping laws have been made without consideration of the economic problems involved, and the majority of laws on the statute books do little to prevent the decrease of fur bearers in certain sections of our country. A keener appreciation of conditions, as shown by studies of the habits, breeding seasons, and periods of prime fur of the various species, on the part of those concerned with the framing of laws and regulations governing trapping, would have the result that a greatly increased quantity of pelts with fur of superior quality would reach the markets, thus increasing the financial rewards to the trapper and at the same time allowing increased numbers of breeding animals to remain."

"Just are the ways of God, and justifiable to men."—Milton.

"Tell not as new what everybody knows, and new or old, still hasten to a close."—William Cowper.

FIFTY YEARS AGO

that city, while rowing a boat for exercise on Stockton Slough January 19 fell over dead from heart disease.

Willie Janeson, 6 years old, while flying a kite on top of a house in San Francisco, walked backward into a skylight, through which he fell to his death.

A lad named Rivard, in Los Angeles, extracted a quantity of powder from a bunch of firecrackers and then lit a paper fuse to touch the pile of powder off. To hasten the burning of the fuse, which was moving too slowly for him, he bent over to blow the flame, when the powder exploded, burning off his hair and eyebrows and seriously scorching his face.

FIRE, TO COVER SHORTAGE.

The two sons of L. J. Rose, a wealthy rancher near Los Angeles, were hunting January 14. The gun of one of them was accidentally fired and, hitting the other in the side of the face, made a badly lacerated wound.

Jeremiah T. Whittle was fishing from the rocks at Point Lobos, at the entrance of the Golden Gate, January 15, when he slipped off into the sea and was drowned.

Pat Cunningham, a young man, was hunting with several companions near San Francisco January 27. When lifting his gun from a wagon he accidentally discharged it. The shot entered his side and killed him.

The county court house burned at Salinas, Monterey County, January 8. The greatest loss was the assessment roll and the records of the tax collector's office. It was afterward determined that the fire was incendiary and that certain county officials were short over $20,000 in county funds, lost in playing the seductive game of stud horse poker. The grand jury brought several indictments and for months afterward affairs were in a turmoil there.

The Ocean House at Eureka, Humboldt County, burned January 22. Three lodgers, named Thomas Graham, Alexander Brown and John Collins, were cremated and half a dozen others, who narrowly escaped, were badly burned when doing so.

A woman in San Francisco got struck with the crazy-quilt furore and determined to make one for her church fair. She gathered rags sufficient to cut out 6,834 pieces. After spending a day at the task of arranging them in an orderly pile she went out to dine, and when she returned the rags were gone. She stormed, fretted and searched for them, notified the police and employed a private detective; but the lost rags could not be found. A few days later the Chinese laundryman came into the house with a big bundle of laundry and dropped it upon the floor. Without giving him any attention she nonchalantly asked, "How muchee, John?" "Eighteen dollah, sixee bit," replied he. A shiver went through her frame and in astonishment she quickly undid the bundle, there to find the 6,834 pieces and a few thousand ragged edges that had been picked up by John when he took the weekly laundry during her absence. It was thought John would resume business in a few weeks, when he recovered from the blow a rolling pin gave him on the head.

"Sad soul, take comfort, nor forget that sunrise never failed us yet!"—Thaxter.

GRAND PRESIDENT GIVEN GREAT WELCOME BY HOME PARLOR.

TRACY—NOVEMBER 19 WAS A RED-letter date in the history of El Pescadero Parlor No. 82, for at that time Grand President Pearl Lamb paid an official visit to her home-Parlor, and was greeted in a beautifully decorated hall by a large assemblage of the members of No. 82 and visitors from thirteen outside Parlors.

Previous to the meeting 150 members of the Order sat down at the Parlor's annual Thanksgiving banquet and did full justice to an elaborate menu. During the meeting a class of nine candidates were initiated.

Grand President Lamb delivered a stirring address, taking "Patriotism" for her theme, and at its conclusion presented the Parlor with a beautiful American Flag. Mrs. Lamb was the recipient of a gift from El Pescadero, and remembrances were presented D.D.G.P. Wilma Schmidt, Mrs. Emma Ludwig, president of the Parlor, and Mrs. Emma Frerichs, organizer of No. 82 and an officer thereof for thirty-two consecutive years.

Among the visitors of the occasion were Past Grand Presidents Mamie G. Peyton, Mary E. Bell and Addie L. Mosher, Grand Trustee Sallie Thaler, Grand Outside Sentinel Anna Mixon-Armstrong, D.D.G.Ps. Maude Wagner, May Barthold, Nell Crawley, Augusta Huxsol and Margaret Sullivan.

El Pescadero has concluded a very busy year. Numerous dances, card parties, food sales and a hope-chest swelled the treasury, and a gain of nineteen was made in the membership, assuring an additional Grand Parlor delegate. The Parlor has voted $100 for the purchase of a tree in the Grand Parlor's proposed Redwood Memorial Grove in Humboldt County, to be named in honor of Grand President Pearl Lamb.

Drill Team at Exposition.

Oroville—The Sacramento Native Daughters' drill-team, Grand Trustee Lilly Tilden director, put on a feature drill the closing night of the California Orange and Olive Exposition, November 27. In honor of the team Gold of Ophir 190 served dinner. President Irene Lund welcomed the visitors and other speakers included Past Grand President Dr. Eva R. Rasmussen, Grand Trustee Lilly Tilden, Alta Hengy, Florence Boyle. Following the feast the drill-team was escorted to the exposition building by members of the Parlor.

A committee of Gold of Ophir under the leadership of City Librarian Edith Simmons had charge of the wedding ceremony at the exposition Thanksgiving night. The setting was the interior of a church, with great pipe-organ and stained-glass windows. The front of the stage was banked with ferns, while the upper part was a mass of Easter lilies. Irene Lund, Thelma Huffman, Catherine Gilmore, Bertha Crum, Eva Hawley were the bridesmaids.

December 1 Gold of Ophir initiated three candidates. Under the direction of Bernice Renfrow and Florence Boyle two drill-teams are being organized. The fifth annual hope-chest of the Parlor has been awarded Mrs. W. J. Miller (Plumas Pioneer 219) of Quincy, Plumas County. The proceeds go into the building fund.

Mount Lassen Active.

Bieber—Three candidates were recently initiated by Mount Lassen 215, the ceremonies being followed by refreshments. Another class of candidates will be initiated in January.

At the annual reunion for the Pioneers sponsored by the Parlor a chicken dinner was served. A. W. McKenzie (Big Valley 211 N.S.G.W.) was the toastmaster and many interesting reminiscences of early life in Big Valley were revealed in the responses. Angie Kenyon, Grace Bieber, Emma Reno composed the committee in charge.

Lettie Holl was chairman of a committee that gave a reception December 6 to the teachers of Bieber and vicinity. A Christmas dance, for the benefit of the homeless children, is being arranged for December 31. Marie Walsh, Grace Bieber, Hazel Loomis have charge of the floor, and the supper will be served by Nettie McKenzie, Lettie Holl, Eva Harvey. Music will be provided by a new native son orchestra directed by Miss Taylor.

Mount Lassen has organized a basketball team. Nettie McKenzie is the manager and Angie Kenyon the captain of the team. Two games have been played, one being won and the other lost. The proceeds of the games, except $10 used to buy clothing for a needy girl working her way through high-school, go into the Parlor treasury.

Best Wishes Extended.

Pescadero—Ano Nuevo 180 and Pebble Beach 230 N.S.G.W. tendered a farewell reception December 4 to Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Mesquite, who will make their future home in the San Francisco Bay region. Games were played and a delightful banquet was served at midnight. President Emma Cardoza of No. 180 presented Mrs. Mesquite, who organized Ano Nuevo Februar 25, 1910, with a silver cake-dish suitably engraved. Many toasts were responded to, and the honor guests were extended the best wishes of their many friends.

After the first of the year the Parlors plan a entertainment of local talent for the benefit of the homeless children.

Eight Initiated.

Hayward—Grand President Pearl Lamb paid her official visit to Hayward 122 December 7. Delegations from most of the Alameda County and San Francisco Parlors were in attendance. Eight candidates were initiated, the ritual being efficiently exemplified by the officers, with President Alice Gading presiding. A very inspiring address was given by the Grand President, and messages for the Parlor were delivered by Past Grand President Dr. Victory A. Derrick, Grand Trustee Sallie Thaler, Grand Inside Sentinel Evelyn Carlson, D.D.G.P. Augusta Huxsol.

After the meeting a delightful banquet was served. The floral decorations presented a most beautiful scene, the centerpiece being magnificent poinsettias mingled with English holly and brilliant red candles. The favors were also poinsettias. This was Grand President Lamb's birthday anniversary and she was showered with good wishes.

Kiddies Respond.

Antioch—Antioch 223 was hostess to the kiddies of this community at a Christmas tree party. Practically every family was represented among the guests. Charles Hornbeck was the Santa Claus. Mms. Vera Huffman, Genevieve Field, Jane Worrell, Lorine Perry composed the committee in charge.

Masquerade a Success.

San Rafael—The annual masquerade of Marinita 198 for the benefit of the homeless children was a great success. Many prizes, including a beautiful hope-chest, were distributed. Members of Mount Tamalpais 64 were recently entertained at a party at which dancing was the main attraction. Refreshments were served and everyone had a good time.

Annual Christmas Tree.

Oakland—Piedmont 87 recently entertained a guest of honor Grand President Pearl Lamb. The ritual was exemplified by the officers in very able and efficient manner. A sumptuous banquet was served by a committee under th

Tatt Officers of Miocene 228 were elected December 12, Elma Nichols becoming president. Installation will take place January 8.

Activities Praised.

Lodi Ivy 88 was officially visited December 1 by Grand President Pearl Lamb, who highly praised the Parlor's activities. Mrs. Alice Welch, a member of No. 88 and the mother of Hilliard E. Welch, Grand President N.S.G.W., was presented with a corsage bouquet. Supper was served in the banquet-room, where yellow and white were used in decorating. Mrs. Lamb was accompanied by several members of El Pescadero 82 (Tracy).

The whist party recently given by the Parlor for the benefit of the homeless children was a complete success. Thirty tables were in operation and many prizes were awarded. Refreshments were served.

Artistic Decorations.

San Juan Bautista—There was a good attendance at the meeting of San Juan Bautista 179 December 1, when a candidate was initiated. During the social hour which followed the meeting delicious refreshments were served. Late fall flowers in varied rich colors were used in artistic decorations.

The Parlor voted to aid in the formation here of a troop of Boy Scouts of America.

Grand Success.

San Jose—One of the biggest social and financial successes of Vendome 100 was the bazaar of December 9, over $500 being netted. Mrs. Lotta Keppel was the general chairman and the assistant chairmen included Mms. W. C. Kady, Hazel Haub, Alice Roll, Sadie Howell, Mabel Sontheimer, Alice Hill, Emma Nelson, Susie Bickford, Clara Gairaud and Buffiington.

December 16 the November girls entertained the members having birthdays in December; Mrs. Addie Haagen was chairman of the arrangements committee. Miss Beldon Gallagher was hostess to the past presidents' club December 14.

December 23 the Parlor had its annual Christmas party for members. Novelties were distributed from a beautifully decorated tree, games were played and supper was served. Mrs. Stella Boggs was the general chairman. Officers for the January-July term, with Mrs. Emma Jennings-Nelson as president, have been elected and will be installed January 20. GETTING READY FOR BIG GATHERING

(STANLEY A. WHEELER.)

SAN PEDRO, ON THE SHORES OF THE bay discovered by Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo just fifty years after Columbus landed in the New World, will be the scene of the fiftieth annual, or semi-centennial, Grand Parlor session of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West. From May 9 to 14, 1927, inclusive, every minute will be filled with business sessions and novel entertainment features.

Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 N.S.G.W. will act as host for the 5,000 or more men and women who are expected to attend the convention. Already committees are at work, and all but the minor details of the program have been worked out. James W. Mee, charter member of the Parlor and one of San Pedro's leading businessmen, has been named general chairman of the convention committee. William A. Reuter will act as assistant general chairman, James V. Carroll as recording secretary and John Martin as financial secretary.

Among the entertainment features planned for next May are the following: Spanish barbecue, staged by Ramon Sepulveda at White Point, where Sepulveda Parlor was instituted two years ago. A dinner for the Grand President and Past Grand Presidents in the main dining saloon of the Los Angeles Steamship Company's new liner, "City of Honolulu." An all-day's trip to Santa Catalina Island, aboard William Wrigley's steamer "Avalon." A grand ball, to be held at the Fellowship Club.

General Chairman J. W. Mee has named the following as heads of sub-committees for the Grand Parlor program being arranged by Sepulveda Parlor: O. R. C. Grow, finance; Joe Brannen, program; J. H. Dodson Jr., reception; Edward Reece, music; Lazard Lippman, housing; J. H. Dodson Sr., banquet; B. B. Lippman, entertainment; Buck Buchanan, badge; Edwin E. Baldwin, law and order; John Swinford, transportation; Robert Snodgrass, grand ball; William Maggio, registration; John Gower, printing; Leslie Tilton, decorations; Stanley A. Wheeler, publicity; Ramon Sepulveda, barbecue; Mrs. Rudecinda F. S. deDodson, women's entertainment.

Sepulveda Parlor has already received the material support of other Parlors in the southern part of the state in making preparations for the convention. Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 N.D.G.W. of San Pedro has promised to make the five-day period pleasant for the women visitors.

For the delegates and their friends who want more entertainment than that directly arranged by the convention committee, the new and sporty course of the San Pedro Golf and Country Club will be available. The motorist will find thrills and a new kind of scenery when he rides over the "Seventeen Mile Drive" along the Palos Verdes coast from San Pedro to Redondo Beach.

DURR ELECTED N.S. PRESIDENT.

William F. Durr, prominent architect of San Pedro, will guide the destiny of Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 N.S.G.W. for the next six months, being elected president December 8. He plans many innovations. J. V. "So-and-So" Carroll remains on the job as recording secretary. The Parlor has made splendid progress and closed the year 1926 in a most healthy condition.

December 15 the Parlor had another of its famous "stags" and there was a big attendance.

STAND IN AMAZEMENT

(REECE HEATON.)

LOS ANGELES HARBOR IS PROCLAIMED by shipping men of all nations as a marvel of engineering skill and design. For safety, convenience and dispatch in disposing of cargoes it has no peer, and its location, in view of changing conditions of world trade, brought about by the world war, forecasts a future which will make it the greatest port on the face of the earth. This harbor being man-made and fashioned to the needs of modern shipping, has advantages in economy and ease of operation which no natural harbor can have. Here, the various operations of loading and unloading ships are carried out with the efficiency of a modern industrial plant, all waste being eliminated.

Travelers who have not visited the Pacific Coast in fifteen years stand in amazement today at the miracle which has transformed a barren waste into the second largest port in the United States in point of tonnage. Fifteen years ago they found only a marsh, while now they behold a magnificent harbor, reaching for ten miles from Point Fermin to Long Beach, with the ships of all nations plying to and from all the important ports of the world.

In the center of this harbor stands Wilmington, and its strategic location is the envy of its neighbors. Its docks are the safest in the harbor and 80 percent of the harbor's business is handled over them. A saving of eight miles per round trip to the heart of Los Angeles is effected when goods are routed by the way of Wilmington, and this saving will be increased to eleven miles when the new Avalon boulevard, now under construction, is completed. This immense saving in trucking expense will always spell Wilmington's supremacy, for it is an economic factor which no industry can afford to overlook.

Thirty-two millions of dollars have been spent by the City of Los Angeles and the United States Government to build Los Angeles Harbor, and sixteen more millions have already been authorized to extend and improve it. This tremendous investment was approved by the people because they recognized the advantage which the Pacific Southwest would gain in economical transportation. Their action in authorizing the expenditure of this money has already been justified, as they have received benefits many times over the amount expended and will continue to receive benefits which cannot be estimated, for Los Angeles Harbor is destined to grow even faster in the future than it has in the past.

The advantages which Los Angeles Harbor enjoys have been recognized by the lumber, oil and fish-canning industries, for this port leads the world in the amount of products produced by these industries and they, together with numerous other industrial concerns, make it a beehive of action. In three years Wilmington has grown from a population of 4,000 to 13,500. The City of Los Angeles is erecting a power plant here costing about $8,000,000, and a sub-station costing $1,500,000.

Ideal climatic and labor conditions and the facility with which shipping can be handled are attracting more and more industrial concerns to Wilmington. It has all of its development ahead of it, and must go forward. It is virgin territory, and its possibilities are unlimited.

EXCLUSIVE RESERVE SET ASIDE IN YOSEMITE PARK.

The only reserve of its kind in the United States has just been set aside in the high Sierras of Yosemite National Park, according to an announcement made by the Federal Department of the Interior. An area of seven square miles is reserved as a complete perpetual reservation in which the flora and fauna always will be left in their primitive state.

All domestic animals, camping and fishing will be excluded. Admission will be by special permission only, and then only for the purpose of making scientific studies or in connection with the administration of the area.

In Memoriam

MAE CRONIN.

To the Officers and Members of Encinal Parlor No. 156 N.D.G.W.: We, your committee appointed to draft resolutions of respect to the memory of our departed worthy President and beloved sister, Mae Cronin, submit the following:

Whereas, The Almighty in His infinite wisdom, has deemed it fit to call to the Heavenly Parlor on High our worthy president and beloved sister, Mae Cronin, thus taking from us one of our most devoted and loyal members, a faithful and true friend; we feel our loss is measureless, [illegible] Parlor which will [illegible] though [illegible] [illegible] ended and we feel [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible]

Resolved, That in the passing of our beloved sister the Parlor has lost a [illegible] member, the Order [illegible] and loyal Native Daughter, and the bereaved husband a loving and devoted wife; resolved, that we express to the bereaved husband our deepest sympathy; that a page of the records of this Parlor be dedicated to her memory; that our charter be draped for thirty days, and that copies of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved husband and a copy to The Grizzly Bear Magazine.

There is no death, the stars go down
To rise again on brighter shores;
And safe in Heaven's jeweled crown,
She will shine forever more.

Sincerely and fraternally yours in P.D.F.A.,

JOHN HENRY SCHUMACHER

John Henry Schumacher, charter member and past president of Ramona Parlor No. 109 Native Sons of the Golden West, has passed on to the Grand Parlor on High. Born in the City of Los Angeles on September 29, 1859, died on October 9, 1926. Son of John Schumacher, one of California's earliest Pioneers.

His kindly ways, his sympathy for and love of humanity, his unfailing courtesy, his fair mindedness, his charitable acts, his honesty and integrity, his loyalty to state and to county and his lovable character drew and held our affection. And yet this brother, so well beloved, has answered the summons that we shall all one day hear.

Born in the City of Los Angeles when a pueblo, he saw the city grow to its present mighty proportions. Although modest and retiring he took a deep interest in public affairs and during his entire life sponsored only those things which were for the best interests of his city and state.

He loved the companionship of his friends, simple in his tastes, and kindly with all toward rich and poor, the pomp and glamour of wealth and distinction impressed him not at all. He was known to his friends as "Honest John Schumacher." He bequeathed to his family and friends the tenderest recollections and a just pride in his great integrity and his splendid character.

We, his friends and brothers in the great fraternity of Native Sons of the Golden West, well know that earth held no kindlier, gentler soul, and we extend to his bereaved family our sincere sympathy.

Whereas, Almighty God, in His divine wisdom, has seen fit to summon to the Heavenly Parlor on High our beloved brother and friend, John Francis Maloney, and whereas, Menlo Parlor No. 185 Native Sons of the Golden West has lost a worthy member, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the sympathy of Menlo Parlor and its members be extended the bereaved in these sad hours; and be it further resolved, that the charter of the Parlor be draped in mourning for a period of thirty days, that a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the bereaved family, that a copy be forwarded to The Grizzly Bear Magazine, and that a copy be spread in full upon the minutes of this Parlor.

Done in Friendship, Loyalty and Charity at Menlo Park this 26th day of November, 1926.

GEORGE HENRY KNOWLES.

Whereas, San Diego Parlor No. 108 N.S.G.W. has lost through the hand of Providence one of our most faithful and loved members, Brother George Henry Knowles, and whereas, the members of this Parlor and the Order of the Native Sons of the Golden West have unanimously expressed their sincere sympathy and brotherly love to the family of our departed brother, therefore, be it

Resolved, That we wish at this time to convey to the family of our brother these words of sympathy and condolence that will brighten their path and leave with them that loving thought that their loved one carries with him the love, respect and admiration of those with whom he was so closely associated, and it is with this thought and purpose that this Parlor adopts this resolution.

MODOC COUNTY TRULY TERMED "PLAYGROUND OF THE PACIFIC."

Modoc County has been aptly termed the "Playground of the Pacific," says William Thompson in the Alturas "Plain Dealer," and truly, for nowhere else can there be found so many and varied attractions. Crystal lakes, flashing streams, countless waterfalls, sequestered glades, forests of giant trees, combined with a climate during spring, summer and fall that is unsurpassed, give it a matchless charm for the tired businessman, the tourist seeking pleasure and recreation, and the invalid in search of that God-given blessing, perfect health.

In addition, the searcher for the wonders of nature may find interest and satisfaction in the great lava field, with ice caves, far-stretching waste of wreck and ruin, rivers of pure obsidian, and all stricken dumb in the instant of its wild, dest rioting. To all this is added a historic interest, marking the final conquest of the great and boundless West.

GRAND OFFICERS PLEDGE AID IN RESTORATION MISSION SANTA CLARA.

STOCKTON—THE BOARD OF GRAND OFficers met here December 4. In addition to Grand President Hilliard E. Welch, who presided, the following were in attendance: Grand First Vice-president Charles A. Thompson, Grand Second Vice-president James A. Wilson, Grand Third Vice-president Charles L. Dodge, Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Grand Trustees Frank I. Gonzalez, John T. Newell, Alfred H. McKnew, John T. Skelton, Emmet Seawell, Seth Millington and Isadore H. Reuter. Routine business, mostly, was transacted.

It was ordered that a set of flags be presented Charles Rogers, a pioneer resident of Merced County who has a historical museum therein. Grand President Welch and Grand Trustee Reuter were authorized to make the presentation.

An effort will be made to have Mountain Parlor No. 126, at the once-flourishing mining town of Dutch Flat, Placer County, consolidate with Auburn Parlor No. 59.

It was decided that the creation of a lapsation bureau, as provided for in resolution No. 28, adopted at the Santa Rosa Grand Parlor and referred to the board for consideration, was not feasible.

Santa Monica Bay Parlor No. 267, being instituted with more than 50 charter members, was voted a credit of $150.

Endorsement was given a project for the restoration of Santa Clara Mission, recently destroyed by fire. Grand First Vice-president Thompson is chairman of a general committee which has undertaken the raising of required funds. Grand President Welch will communicate with the Subordinate Parlors, asking their financial co-operation.

The committee of the Grand Parlor, E. H. Dowell of San Diego chairman, having in hand the matter of insurance for members of the Order, reported progress.

Initiates Nine.

Glendale—As the result of Glendal 264's membership campaign nine candidates were initiated December 15, among them being Philip Begue and son, prominent farmers. There was a large attendance, and among the speakers was Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer. The present corps of efficient officers, with Loring E. Kent as president, have been re-elected.

The dance given by the Parlor December 8 was largely attended and proved a great social success. Excellent music was provided and refreshments were served. Pasadena 259 was well represented. Glendale plans to have a dance every month. Grand Trustee John T. Newell will pay his official visit to the Parlor January 26.

Many at County Meet.

Santa Rosa—More than 200 members of the Order assembled in Native Sons' Hall November 20, the occasion being a Sonoma County gathering. All the Parlors—Petaluma 27, Santa Rosa 28, Glen Ellen 102, Sonoma 111, Sebastopol 143—were well represented. Twelve candidates were initiated.

Professor J. F. Prestwood of Sonoma told of the Order's aims and purposes, and Eugene Magnin of Petaluma outlined the present progress of the organization. Sonoma County history was reviewed by Joseph Sassenrath and J. P. Serres. Other speakers were D.D.G.P. Bert Kerner and W. S. Borba. A banquet terminated the get-together assemblage.

Big Time.

Ukiah—Ukiah 71 had a very interesting meeting December 10 in honor of the invitational visit of three grand officers: Grand President Hilliard E. Welch, Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Grand Trustee Alfred H. McKnew. Other visitors included Ed. Zimmerman, Frank W. Reynolds, Forest Adams of Broderick 117, and Secretary Leland S. Lewis, Wes Colgan, Karl Stoltling of Santa Rosa 28. With Grand Trustee McKnew presiding during the initiatory ceremonies, two candidates were added to the membership-roll.

After the meeting came a banquet. Everything was Chinese in style—the decorations, the menu, the eating tools and the waiters' costumes. C. H. Mortenson was the toastmaster, and among those who responded were Grand President Welch, Grand Trustee McKnew, Lilburn H. Gibson, President Charles F. Moffitt, Ed. Zimmerman. "Morty" and "Tommy" Maguire entertained with Chinese stories. In the wee sma' hours of the morning the party disbanded with good wishes for a merry Christmas and a happy New Year. Secretary Ben Hotman had charge of the arrangements for the affair and says that "Ukiah is still on the map."

The Parlor has re-elected Charles Moffitt president for another term. Open house awaits all Native Sons who happen to be in Ukiah on No 71's meeting night.

New Year's Carnival.

San Bernardino—Officers of Arrowhead 110, with J. J. Cadd as president, were elected December 4. The membership drive under the presidency of Ben Harrison was concluded December 22 with the initiation of a class of candidates.

Great plans have been made for the Parlor's New Year's carnival and grand ball December 31. J. S. Mee is chairman of the general arrangements committee, and the chairmen of subcommittees include R. W. Brazelton, Charles N. Frost, Fred Grant, Thomas McFarlane, W. E. Keir, M. G. Hale, Charles M. Doyle, Ed Poppett, Ben Harrison.

Cohn Still Lives.

San Rafael—A notice recently appeared in a San Francisco paper chronicling the death of Newman Cohn, and many thought it referred to the well-known member of Mount Tamalpais 64. The former grand organizer, however, denies that he is the person referred to and says that he intends to stick around for at least another forty years.

For the benefit of the homeless children, Mount Tamalpais gave a dance at Novato, December 18.

Grand Trustee to Visit.

Los Angeles—Grand Trustee John T. Newell will officially visit the following Subordinate Parlors on the dates noted:

Santa Barbara 116, January 5.
Cambria 152, January 8.
Pasadena 259, January 13.
Cabrillo 114 (Ventura), January 14.

Past Presidents Meet.

Colusa—At the December 16 meeting here of Fred H. Greeley Assembly No. 6 Past Presidents' Association, Harry A. Schroeder (Silver Star 63) of Lincoln was elected governor. Oroville was selected for the January meeting place.

At a banquet, Grand Trustee Seth Millington was the toastmaster and responses were made by George Barnes, Don R. Selliman, Harry A. Schroeder, John P. Colford, W. C. Stokes, Past Grand President Fred H. Greeley. President Mrs. R. T. Fogelsang responded for Colus 18 N.D.G.W., members of which participated in the banquet.

Christmas Party.

Sacramento—Sutter Fort 241 had its annual Christmas party for poor children December 23. Each member had as his special charge a needy child between 4 and 8 years of age. Among the entertainment features were a movie of child interest and a talk by Miss Claire Peterson. The party was in charge of the following committee: A. W. Katzenstein, C. L. Katzenstein, J. L. Knowles.

GETHSEMANE CYPRESS, CALIFORNIA GROWN, READY FOR DISTRIBUTION.

Trees from seed gathered in the Garden of Gethsemane, in Palestine, have been produced by the Forestry Division of the University of California and now are ready for distribution, both to organizations and individuals.

State Forester M. B. Pratt is holding some of these for the California missions and other churches in the state, so that in a few years the young trees will be adding the same somber appearance to California churchyards as their parents give to the sacred garden in Palestine.

A few of the trees will be available for sale to individuals and organizations, but every effort will be made to have the trees go to places where the significance of their origin will be appreciated and where the progress of their growth may be watched by the public of California.

A BIT O' FARMING

PREPARED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY M. H. ELLIS

GIVE TOP WORK CONSIDERABLE THOUGHT

BEFORE THE FRUITGROWER THIS winter decides to top work his orchard, or any considerable part of it, over to some other kind or variety, he should give the matter careful thought. If his trees have been consistently unprofitable, then it is well to plan to change to some other kind or variety that has been showing a good profit over a term of years. However, because some neighbor had an orchard that showed more profit last year than yours is no reason to change over.

Don't try to keep in the wake of successful crops by working over your trees year after year. But if there is a real reason, whether it be economical or because soil or climate is not adapted to the trees, the grower should not hesitate to top work. This may be done by grafting or budding. In either case, now is the time to get at it. Grafting should be done in the winter; trees should be cut back to get sucker growth for budding next summer. Both methods have their advantages, and some disadvantages, but either may be entirely successful and satisfactory.

If you plan to bud, cut back the trees above the second fork at a good slant, during midwinter. If the trees are larger, cut higher; if young, cut lower. Suckers will grow plentifully. Thin out next spring, but leave plenty on the windward side, and on the lower branches for shade. Bud in May or June, loosen the tie strings soon and remove them within a month. Next winter, at pruning time, cut the stubs all back on a slant and paint the ends.

If you plan to graft, see that the work is done as rapidly as possible so that it may be surely completed. Use plenty of wax, protect the grafts from invasion of water. Paint over the graft with asphaltum or a good oil paint. Many prefer the latter, and it always gives good results. Don't keep "boarder" trees, but don't be too quick to lose two or three years' crops.

The family orchard, particularly that in the back yard of the city or suburban dweller, can be well handled by top working. Most families cannot use all the peaches, for instance, from a full-bearing Elberta. While the tree is young, it would be well to bud or graft to a good early variety and perhaps a cling. The same may be done with apricots, plums and other fruits where there is not enough room for all varieties and where more than those that would be available otherwise are wanted.

FROST PROTECTION.

Young citrus trees may be protected against frost by giving protection with the stalks of milo, corn, sudan grass, tules or any similar matter. Wrap newspaper about the trunk of the tree, then a ten-inch bundle of stalks, and another layer of newspaper; bind together well and stake on the windward side. It is not a costly operation and protects young trees at the vital point—the bud union. A mound of earth at the bottom is further protection. Water, if run in the tree rows, will help, but in most places care must be taken against over-irrigation. Orchard heaters are sure insurance, but where they are not used the young citrus should be given some protection.

A FARMER'S PROBLEM.

Congress is in session again, with a prospect of more talk and little action as to the alleviation of conditions that pertain to agriculture. Price fixing, much debated, appears to be losing ground; but there is a sentiment favoring some means of regulating prices. This may result in a nation-wide clearing house plan which, on paper, works fine, but which in practice is very doubtful of success. Nevertheless, if the fruit industry of the United States is to flourish, it must come from the growers themselves. Agriculture is entitled to assurance that there will be sure profits, just as are the railroads for hauling and the jobber for handling. This is a farmer's problem, and one that he is going to have to handle if he wants his industry placed on a par with other business. Congress cannot legislate prosperity onto the farms.

KEEP BOOKS.

As more and more farmers adopt some sort of a system of bookkeeping and cost accounting, more and more of them see just where they stand. The farmer of today is a businessman; in many instances the California farmer is a specialist in the production of one product. He cannot know where he is going without records, yet the percentage of farmers who keep no books of any kind is amazingly high, perhaps 90 percent. When the farmer begins to keep books, to charge himself interest on his investment, depreciation, wages for himself and his family, he will get a real idea of where he stands. That, if nothing less, should arouse him to some sort of a concerted action with his fellows not only in his community but throughout the country, to get on a basis of profitable returns for his produce.

BEAUTIFY THE FARM HOME.

There is no reason why the farm home should not be made as attractive as the city home. In the cities, lawns and shrubbery are taken as a matter of course; in the country they are a rarity. Yet, at a very small investment, the farmer may plant shrubs and trees and make his home beautiful. Many counties have taken concerted action in this matter through the farm bureau, and the results have been excellent. "Tie the house down" to the ground with a few well-chosen and well-placed shrubs, and the value of the place becomes higher at once. During the winter season, or the early spring, before other farm activities become pressing, this matter should be worked out.

GREAT STRIDE AHEAD.

No greater stride in the agricultural development of California has been taken in a decade, than the one that has just been announced by the United States Department of Agriculture—that of placing an agricultural attache in the Shanghai consulate of the American Government. This move is to be followed next year by the placing of three more such men in the Orient by the Department of Commerce.

For years the consular service in many countries has been augmented by commercial attaches, men who watched for markets for American manufactures. These men have been most efficient, and have developed world-wide markets for American industry. No one thought, however, of the establishment of such a service for the farmers of America—at least, no one did anything about the matter—until Professor B. H. Crocheron, director of agricultural extension in the University of California, returning from a trip to the Far East last summer, started to see what could be done about opening markets there for California products.

No vegetables grown in the Orient may be eaten. Fruits are few. Milk is shipped, uncon densed, in cans from Switzerland. Butter come from Australia and New Zealand, and is of in ferior quality. Dried fruits, dairy products, veg etables and nearly all of the California product can be shipped profitably to the Orient, wher there is a latent buying power that needs onl to be touched to be awakened.

This appears to be one of the methods of so lution of the so-called overproduction proble in California. If the same quality produce sent to China and Japan that is now shipped t the Atlantic Coast, it is safe to say the return will be as good more than likely better afte the start has been made.

COVER CROPS VALUABLE.

Those forehanded farmers who planted cove crops before the rains of last month will rea heavy returns. To those who always are be hind, there is the comfort that there still is tim to get a leguminous crop growing in time fo turning under in the spring, provided the so becomes dry enough to work. The winter cove crop is most important, if fertility and tilth the soil are to be maintained.

Dr H. J. Webber, director of the citrus ex periment station at Riverside, has shown tha a good crop of melilotus indica is equal to barley crop plus 1,000 pounds of nitrate of sod the most popular nitrogenous fertilizer. Turn ing under of the crop in the spring is an impor tant matter. Experience has shown that whe the crop approaches maturity, is cut down b disc harrows and then worked into the so with the same implements, the results are en tirely satisfactory. Some still prefer to plo the mass under. Generally speaking, the cro should grow as long in the spring as the moi ture conditions will permit.

LESS TUBERCULOSIS IN SWINE.

With the steady advance of the campaign the fight against tuberculosis in cattle, is foun a decrease in this same disease among swin The reason is very apparent. Bovine tuberc losis is easily contracted by hogs, and if the di ease sources are large, hogs inevitably are mo often affected. Slaughterhouse reports indicat it is consoling to note, that with less disea among the cows, there is also less among th swine.

THINNING BENEFICIAL.

Thinning of olives was started as an exper ment in California North to see if size could n be improved, large olives being most in demand The plan worked very well, and the fruit wa larger than on trees not thinned. However, a other and perhaps even more important result has been noted this year.

Those trees where the fruit was thinned last year, this season had a good crop, in a year when olive production was light. The trees in the same district that were not thinned last year had almost no crop this season. The experiment will be continued, but it seems safe to predict right now that thinning of olives has demonstrated that quality is improved and consistent bearing assured.

LAMBING SHEDS PROFITABLE.

California spring lambs have come to have a place of their own in the markets of the Middle West and the East. Railroads have given their attention to rushing through the shipments, and everywhere along the line this crop is sent through at top speed, for California lambs reach the markets first, and they are in demand. The woolgrower of California these days pays almost as much attention to his spring lamb crop as to his wool clip. As a result, it has been found by those who really watch their business that lambing sheds are a profitable investment, for despite the mild weather usual to lambing season there are springs when climatic conditions are not clement.

One grower who has constructed a cheap, but efficient, shelter for his ewes in lambing season has raised the percentage of his lamb crop from around 85 and 90 to 110 to 120. With lambs selling at $7.50 and $8.00 apiece it is worth while watching this. The increase of the crop is a decrease of the cost of production; and the building of a shed is an economy.

GOOD IDEA.

Despite the fact that there is more fruit produced than can be shipped and sold at a fair profit, more farms are being opened up, more settlers are being urged to come to California. Dairymen can be welcomed, as there is no overproduction of milk or butter. But fruit is another thing. However, as has been pointed out by one well-known agricultural publication, as long as there is land to be sold there will be men to sell it.

The only thing to do is to see that homeseekers are not misguided upon their arrival. This might be done by a survey of the communities where efforts are being made to start colonies, and see what crops should be grown and what crops can be grown with a reasonable assurance of profit. Not an idea that always meets with favor with the man promoting land sales, but one that will give a much better chance for the success of the farmer and, in turn, to the community and to the state.

KEEP THE HEN HOUSE CLEAN.

Don't feed lice and mites when you should be feeding hens for egg production. The common red mite of the chicken is the greatest poultry pest in California, yet it is the one most easily controlled. During the night the mite emerges from its hiding place in a crack in the roost or some similar place, and feeds upon the fowls by piercing their skin and sucking blood. During the day it leaves the hen and returns to its hiding place. This fact makes it easy to control.

Clean up the dirt and the dropping boards, and disinfect the buildings with creosote, discarded oil from the automobile crank case or some creosote preparation. Then keep the house clean, repeat the disinfection as often as needed, let sunlight into the house whenever possible, and there will be no mites. Instead, there will be stronger hens and pullets and more eggs.

PAINTING IS ECONOMY.

Barns for machinery may not come within the reach of some farmers' purses. Sheds may have been put off. But there is no excuse for not painting. Even where shelter is furnished, the farm implements, particularly the wagons, should be given a protective coat of paint. It is economy. Paint preserves both wood and metal. Rot and rust take a heavy toll, depreciation costs the farmer more than he realizes. An important part of a much-needed implement may give way at a critical time, with repairs not available, from the action of rust or rot. The length of service of machinery is doubled and trebled by care.

MILLIONS TO CITRUS GROWERS.

During the season which closed October 31, California shipped oranges, lemons and grape fruit that sold for $135,218,641. The railroads received $37,195,610 for freight and refrigeration, leaving $98,023,031 returns to the growers. Co-operative marketing, well placed advertising and careful production methods are responsible for this showing.

TRINITY COUNTY SETTING FOR ONE OF GOLD MINING'S TRAGEDIES.

The land at the mouth of Coffee Creek, Trinity County, is rich in good ground—a regular Midas treasury, says the "Trinity Journal," but despite its great value, nature has conspired to keep her riches intact by making so many large boulders in the soil that dredgers cannot work.

It is estimated that each acre of land is worth $280,000 an acre at the mouth of the creek and the farther up one gets the richer the gold content.

The valuation of $280,000 to the acre was determined reasonably accurate fifteen years ago prior to the organization of a company that erected a steel dredger at the mouth of the creek to dredge for the gold. This was a monster dredge. The cost of hauling the steel and equipment from Redding to Carrville was $80,000. The dredger was worked for a few months and then the field at the mouth of the creek had to be abandoned. The soil is sixty feet deep, but there were so many large boulders mixed with the soil the dredger could not be worked to advantage.

The massive steel dredger was torn down and all the material hauled four miles up the creek, where it was believed boulders would not impede dredging. The dredger was reconstructed. A basin to float the rebuilt craft was dug at great cost. The dredger was started up, but after a trial of several weeks it had to give up the job. Boulders again made dredging impossible.

In the course of a few years the dredger was again torn down and the material was shipped to the Malay Peninsula in Asia, where the dredger has been rebuilt and is now dredging successfully for tin, according to reports drifting back to Carrville.

Carrville has a swimming hole that cost $100,000. It is the basin dug four miles up the creek to float the reconstructed dredger. There is still $280,000 worth of gold to the acre in the land at the mouth of Coffee Creek. The story of the all-steel dredger is one of the tragedies of gold mining.

WORLD'S LARGEST RED-CEDAR CHEST IS IN LOS ANGELES.

Most people do not realize that the idea of our red-cedar chests has been handed down to us from very ancient times.

The red-cedar is a tree which was celebrated long before Solomon caused his temple to be built of the wood of the famous "Cedars of Lebanon," which were cut and fitted in the mountains so that the sound of the hammer was never heard in that temple.

Some of the "Cedars of Lebanon" as they now stand are of almost incalculable antiquity. Their wood is hard, resinous and very fragrant. The cedar was frequently mentioned in Scriptural writings and is always used as an emblem of stability.

The ancients kept their valuable writings in cedar boxes and cedar cabinets, which were dust-proof and insect-proof. Cedar-oil was used to spread upon the pages of books to preserve them.

Extraordinary indestructibility was ascribed to the red-cedar—due, no doubt, to the antiquity of the trees before they were cut. Species of red-cedar are found in all countries, but, on account of the inferior age of the trees, the wood is not so hard as it was, with the exception of the Deodor, or "God-tree," found in the Himalayan Mountains, a species of red-cedar so hard that it is said to resemble agate in its polished state.

It is interesting to know that the largest red-cedar chest in the world is in Los Angeles, and is used by the Birch-Smith Furniture Company as a repository for fine rugs and draperies. The room is entirely lined with red-cedar and is incorporated in the firm's storage warehouse.

Ben F. Ferris, who took charge of the credits for the Birch-Smith Company in 1922, was for sixteen years a construction engineer with the Southern Pacific Company. Recently, in addition to an executive position in the store, he assumed charge of the transportation and of the storage warehouse, conducted as a part of the furniture business.

"A book is a friend—a good book is a good friend. It will talk to you when you want it to talk, and it will keep still when you want it to keep still; and there are not many friends who know enough to do that."—Lyman Abbott.

UPON GOVERNOR ARRILLAGA'S ARrival, early in 1806, more stringent measures were taken to prevent contraband trade. It had become something like a custom for the American trading ships to avoid the ports and, by standing off and sending boats ashore, to carry on their trade at will. The "Peacock," Captain Kimball, anchored off San Juan Capistrano in April, ostensibly for the purpose of securing provisions. Four men were sent ashore in a boat, but they were seized and sent to San Diego. The ship soon after appearing off the harbor, the men broke jail and endeavored to rejoin her, but without success. They were therefore obliged to return to the presidio and later were sent to San Blas. The names of these men were: Tom Kilven, mate; a Frenchman, boatswain; Blas Limcamk and Blas Yame, sailors from Boston. They were the first Americans to occupy a prison in San Diego.

In the summer of this year another craft whose name is not known with certainty, but which is said to have been under the command of Captain O'Cain, was off the coast and gave the San Diego military establishment some trouble and a good deal of fright. The Spanish accounts call her the "Reizos," and it is possible she was the "Racer," which was here in July. The captain having asked for supplies and an opportunity to make repairs, and been refused, went to Todos Santos, in Lower California, where he took water forcibly and made prisoners of three guards who had been sent to watch his movements. He then came back and endeavored to exchange his prisoners for the four men from the "Peacock"; this failing, he threatened to attack and destroy the fort and presidio. Hurried preparations were made for the meeting and attack, but Captain O'Cain thought better of the matter and sailed away, releasing his prisoners. The "Racer" was at San Diego again in 1807, and the "Mercury," Captain George Eyres, in the following year. These were the last foreign ships which came for several years.

Again the annals of the quiet years grow scanty. The military force fluctuated slightly, officials came and went, quarreled and became reconciled, and the ebb and flow of frontier life went on with scarcely a ripple.

In 1804 the sum of $688 was set apart by the viceroy for the construction of a flatboat, twenty-five feet long, to be used as a means of transportation between Fort Guijarros and the presidio. This boat was actually built and used many years. Evidently the San Diego River had not then filled in the tide lands near Old Town. This boat was wrecked at Los Adobes in the latter part of the year 1827, and in the following year the governor ordered that its timbers should be used for building a wharf.

In 1812 some soldiers were arrested on a charge of being engaged in a plot to revolt and seize the post. Governor Pio Pico in his manuscript "History of California" says that his father, Sergeant Jose Maria Pico, was one of the accused men, and that three of them died in prison.

The struggle for Mexican independence in the decade from 1811 to 1821 caused very little disturbance in Upper California. The uncertainty of the soldiers' pay and the irregularity in the arrival of the supply ships were keenly felt; but the archives of the period are almost silent on the subject of the revolution, knowledge of which seems to have been purposely suppressed. Officials were blamed for their negligence, and there was much unrest and complaint, but the department as a whole, both military and ecclesiastical, was loyal to Spain. The sufferings of the soldiers were severe. Their wants could only be supplied by the missions, which took in exchange for their produce orders on the treasury of Spain which they knew might never be paid. At the presidio these supplies were traded to foreign ships and sometimes disposed of by less regular methods. Governor Arrillaga importuned the viceroy in vain on the subject of the necessities of the soldiers, and by 1814 the dependence of the military upon the missions was complete. At his visit in 1817, Governor Sola found the presidio buildings in a ruinous condition, but apparently nothing was done toward restoring them under the brief remainder of Spanish rule.

In March of this same year there was a slight revival of foreign trade following the visit of Captain James Smith Wilcox, with the "Traveller." He came from the north, where he had sold cloth to the officials for the presidio, and brought with him the share assigned to San Diego. On his departure he took a cargo of grain for Loreto—the first cargo of grain exported from California in an American vessel. In June he returned and did some trading up and down the coast, seeming to enjoy the confidence of the authorities in an unsual degree.

In December 1818 occurred the episode of the Bouchard scare, which made a deep impression. Captain Hippolyte Bouchard came to the California coast with two vessels which he had fitted out at the Hawaiian Islands as privateers, flying the flag of Buenos Ayres. He was regarded by the Spaniards as a pirate, although his conduct scarcely justified so harsh a term. What his designs were is not clearly known. He may have intended to seize Upper California. The expedition appears to have been a feature of the wars then raging between Spain and the South American countries, the latter employing the methods of privateers, which at that time were recognized by the laws of the nations.

After committing some depredations at the north, particularly at Monterey, it was reported that the two ships of Bouchard were approaching the mission of San Juan Capistrano. The commandant at San Diego therefore sent Lieutenant Santiago Arguello with thirty men to assist in its defense. When Arguello arrived he found that the fathers had removed a part of the church property and concealed it, and he and his men fell to and did all they could toward completing the work. Bouchard arrived the next day and demanded supplies, which Arguello refused. Re-enforcements soon arrived, and after much bluster Bouchard drew off without venturing to give battle, but not before some damage had been done. For this damage and certain other irregularities the San Juan Capistrano Mission fathers accused Arguello. These charges were the cause of much bad feeling and voluminous correspondence, but General Guerra, who was friendly to the friars, expressed the opinion that the charges were merely trumped up by the priests to cover their own neglect of duty.

Extensive preparations had been made at San Diego to receive Captain Bouchard, even down to such details as red-hot cannon balls. The women and children were sent away to Pala for safety. But the insurgent vessels passed by without stopping, and all was soon serene again. When the news of this attack reached the viceroy he determined to re-enforce the Upper California presidios at any cost, although he was in extreme difficulties himself on account of the civil war then raging in Mexico. He accordingly managed to send a detachment of a hundred cavalrymen, which arrived at San Diego on the 16th of September the following year, and about half of them remained here. They were fairly well armed and brought money for the payment of expenses.

Up to 1819 the military force at the presidio was about fifty-five men, besides a detail of twenty-five soldiers at the mission, and twenty invalids living at Los Angeles or on ranchos. In that year the number was increased to one hundred and ten, and in 1820 the total population of the district was about four hundred and fifty. In August of this year the British whaler "Discovery" put in for provisions—the only foreign ship for several years—and Captain Ruiz got into trouble by allowing her commander to take soundings of the bay.

At the close of the Spanish rule, San Diego was still a sleepy little military post on a far frontier. The fortifications were dilapidated, the soldiers in rags and destined to lose their large arrears of pay, and the invalids their pensions. The missions had large possessions, but were impoverished by the enforced support of the military for many years. Commerce was dead, and agriculture scarcely begun. But a better day was at hand.

O, my native state, supremely blest,
Homage, now, I give to thee,

FARMING

GOOD STOCK NECESSARY.

The baby chick season soon will start. Those ho have succeeded with poultry in the past few ars will need no warning to be sure their icks come from stock with known production ecords. A few cents for a chick is more than turned in profits when the chick becomes a ullet and starts in laying. If a 15-cent chick ys 150 eggs and a 30-cent chick lays 200 eggs a year, four dozen eggs is the difference, and at's a lot more than 15 cents. Good stock om guaranteed flocks is necessary; and fortu-ately, through the operation of the accredited atcheries, this is available and at reasonable ices.

BUTTERFAT PRODUCTION INCREASED.

In 1920 the average butterfat production of ie cows of California was shown by the United ates census to be 182 pounds. At the end of ve years, through culling, better feeding, the se of pure-bred sires and better dairy methods, its production figure has been increased to 265 ounds, United States Department of Agriculture gures show. This means there was an increase 22,910,000 pounds of butterfat in the state st year, with the same number of cows, or an creased revenue of more than fourteen million ollars.

HAVE A FEW BROOD SOWS.

With hogs returning to favor as prices in-ease, the farmer should give careful study to e number of swine his farm will support profit-bly. The amount of available by-products, such skim milk, shattered grain from the fields, aste fruit and similar sources of feed supply ould enter into his calculations. Market prices ay fluctuate from time to time, and not always will hogs show a large return, but the careful farmer always can make a profit from a few brood sows by utilizing produce that otherwise would go to waste.

BEST POULTRY BREED.

What is the best breed of poultry for California? General practice in the state bears a heavy testimonial for the White Leghorn, but there are other breeds, particularly in the coast and mountain districts, that may well contest the choice. Egg laying is a matter of selective breeding, and many of the heavy breeds will produce as well as the lighter fowls. Cockerels are better meat, when of the heavy breeds.

There is the question of feed, however, between the big hen and the small one. And further, the market likes a white egg, a prejudice that [illegible] will be overcome. Just how, or less an [illegible] can be built up for the [illegible] and brown eggs, the [illegible] will do well to [illegible] the popular White Leghorn.

CLEAN ORCHARDS.

Don't neglect [illegible] orchards. The need will depend upon the [illegible] and varieties, but the need is there for every [illegible] in the state. Back yard [illegible] afford to overlook this matter, whether they have to do their spraying with [illegible] or [illegible] a spray rig, which usually can be obtained at a reasonable price. Clean orchards mean more fruit, better quality and more profits.

Cottrell reported excellent progress in arrangements under way for closing the existing gap on this route across the nation to Nevada and California North.

"Completion of the Lincoln highway, pioneer of transcontinental motor roads and the best known, nationally and internationally, of all highways, will provide another great national motor road across Nevada into California North," Cottrell says.

"Now that the Victory highway west of Salt Lake City is nearly completed—so nearly that Governor-elect Balzar of Nevada State has assured the Down Town Association of San Francisco that the Nevada section would be completed in 1927—attention should be given to completion of the Lincoln highway also.

"A careful check discloses that all but forty-one miles of the famous Lincoln highway has been improved by federal, state or county aid. From New York to San Francisco, the motorist may now travel the 3,142 miles of Lincoln highway, well marked by enameled steel signs, and find an improved road for 98.7 percent of the distance.

"The only unimproved section lies in one county in western Utah. A few years ago a controversy developed in Utah as to whether the Lincoln highway or the Victory highway should be first improved. Realizing the necessity of an improved road between Salt Lake City and San Francisco as a transcontinental link, the California State Automobile Association espoused the cause of the Victory highway because the conclusion was reached that sentiment in Utah and Nevada made possible completion of this route first.

"In taking this stand, the automobile association went on record with the definite understanding that as soon as the way was cleared for finishing the job on the Victory highway it would use the same efforts to secure completion of the Lincoln highway. That time has now arrived.

"Toward completion of the unfinished link in western Utah, Lincoln highway sponsors donated and Utah expended $185,000 before the federal aid program was initiated. California will not be asked to contribute to this project, for Secretary Hoag gives assurance that the Lincoln Highway Association is holding in its treasury a special fund of $75,000 which, matched with

Took flight—a fledgling native to the skies,

To hold aloft the banner of the West!
No strangers thou and Phoebus meeting there
In Heaven's firmament among the stars,
Did not thy Sun-born state by God-right share
Elysian fields divine where nothing mars
The calm procession of ethereal days?
So sprang the mother-land for filial praise!
Fair goddess come, Minerva-like, a Greek,
Arched brows austere and lips impeccable,
Straight-nosed, of mien not menacing nor meek;
And daughter counterpart delectable.

The Gods are good, the Gods propitiate;
Tho' favored, yet thou ha'st not won by favor,
Tho' magical, thy talisman is labor,
Nor conquest greater than thy promise great!
As pounds the ocean on thy shining shore,
And peaks spring skyward to a loftier height,
The generations building up their store
Increase thy glory and preserve thy might.

federal aid at the Utah quota of 76 to 24, will provide approximately $300,000 for this work.

"United States Senator Oddie is urging the completion of this link as vital to his state and, as a high ranking member of the Senate Post Office and Post Roads Committee, will seek federal aid. Governor-elect Balzar of Nevada pledged completion of Lincoln highway as a plank in his platform. Governor-elect Young of California has expressed his deep interest.

"With the co-operation of civic bodies of California, it is anticipated that 1927 will see this project well along toward completion. When the Lincoln highway route is finished, much travel now diverted to southern routes, or entering California through the Oregon gateway, will come direct from the East across Nevada over newly improved, historic Sierra routes to the cities by the Golden Gate."

SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO'S MINSTREL SHOW DRAWS 'EM.

South San Francisco Parlor No. 157 N.S.G.W. had its fifth annual minstrel show December 11 at Masonic Hall, Third street and Newcomb avenue. About 1,200 were in attendance, the largest crowd ever gathered at an affair in that particular hall. This speaks well for the committee in charge and for the participants, to whom a great deal of credit is due.

Out of the troupe of forty, thirty-seven are members of South San Francisco, and their annual show, along with the other activities of the members, keep enthusiasm at a high ebb in the Parlor. The show was under the direction of Fred Rasmussen, and Fred R. Squires Jr. was chairman of the committee.

J. Julian Dresser was the interlocutor and Mildred Doughty the accompanist. The end men were Fred Rasmussen, Phil Brandt, George Nilan, Carl Prignitz, Eddy Averdeick, Jack Reid. The soloists included I. Traponi, Lloyd Dornell, John Sheerin, Paul Harasin, William Roberts, Ed. Keating, Bert Cuevas, John Ryan, Fred Pellegrini. The chorus was made up of Dan Nilan, John Casenave, Willard Spelman, Justin Casenave, Lloyd Doering, Vincent Turner, Edward Cassidy, James Bailey, Raymond De Bono, James W. Brady, Edmund Olsen, Thos J. O'Rourke, Walter C. Bond, Chas. Rosenbohm, Harry Maisey, Willard Sommerfeld, Walter Cavanaugh, Robert Hoare, Henry Susna, Edward Cavanaugh, Raymond Conroy, Adolph Pellegrini.

The minstrel show netted approximately $400, and the sum was used for the Parlor's annual Christmas tree at Masonic Hall December 19. Seven hundred children of the neighborhood were guests of South San Francisco and were given candy and presents. John J. Ryan was chairman of the committee in charge of this event.

MARSHALL THE CHAMPION.

One of the most interesting athletic tournaments in San Francisco has just been concluded by the Native Sons' Basketball League. This tournament was in progress for several weeks and as a result of the games played between teams representing various Parlors the fight for championship of the San Francisco Parlors narrowed down to the teams of Twin Peaks Parlor No. 214 and Marshall Parlor No. 202.

Under the rules, it was decided that the championship should be decided by the team winning two out of three games in the semi-finals. November 29 Marshall defeated Twin Peaks by a score of 39 to 21, and December 4 Marshall again defeated Twin Peaks by the close score of 32 to 30. This last game was very evenly contested and was not decided until the last few seconds of play.

A large crowd witnessed the final games, which were held at the Park Athletic Club court. Upon the conclusion of the championship game, the teams of Marshall and Twin Peaks Parlors were presented with beautiful silver cups, which were to be awarded to the winners of the semi-finals. The presentation was made by Past Grand President Edward J. Lynch.

The championship trophy will later be awarded to Marshall Parlor's winning team, which consists of the following: Forwards, Al Sandoval and Les Cassasa; guards, A. Cassasa and Joseph Belli; center, William Rose. Substitutes, Fred Eberhardt, William Cotta, Henry Band, Jack Ness, Mat Greary and Fred Vokee.

CHILDREN GUESTS.

Golden Gate Parlor No. 158 N.D.G.W. entertained the children of its members with a Christmas tree party December 13. A very fine program was given by the guests, after which Santa Claus appeared and distributed candy and gifts to over a hundred children. All voted this just another of Golden Gate's successful parties.

December 28 members of the Parlor held an after-Christmas exchange party. Each member received a present.

CHRISTMAS TREE PARTY.

Mission Parlor No. 227 N.D.G.W. had a largely attended meeting December 11, following which there was a Christmas tree party. Each member was dressed as a little girl or boy and all took part in the entertainment. The best assumed characters were awarded special prizes.

Santa Claus, impersonated by Trustee Minnie Davis, arrived and distributed presents and candy to all. At departure she sang a Christmas carol and wished the officers and members of Mission Parlor a merry Christmas and a happy New Year. Refreshments were served. Due to the committee in charge the evening's entertainment was a great success.

KRIS KRINGLE WAS THERE.

About 150 children were guests of Castro Parlor No. 178 N.D.G.W. at the annual Christmas party December 17. An excellent program had been prepared, which was thoroughly enjoyed by the children of members and friends. From the tiny tot who gave a song and fancy dance to the children of 10 and 12 years who took part in the program, the interest of young and old alike was held.

With the arrival of Kris Kringle the real fun began. All the kiddies desired to tell Santa what they wanted at once. After he had made the circuit of the room, shaking hands here and there, he distributed the collection of gifts from a glittering Christmas tree which reached almost to the ceiling. It was a happy little band of children that went home to dream of Santa Claus.

Those who took part in the program were: Earl Howard, song; Martha Postel, recitation; Lucille Rutherford and Marjorie Thompson, dance; Baby Clover, recitation; Luella Hurley, dance; Jerold Gallagher, piano solo; Paul Gallagher, recitation; Roseline Puish, song and dance; Carl Wickhom, piano solo. Alice Lane was chairman of the evening.

CHAMBER COMMERCE FAVORS AMENDED SWING-JOHNSON BILL.

R. B. Hale, president of the California Development Association, returning from a conference on the Colorado River project at Colorado Springs under the auspices of the United States Chamber of Commerce, presented a resume of his observations to the board of directors of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce December 16. He concluded a comprehensive statement with:

"It has taken a tremendous amount of time and labor to iron out the contentions of interested parties in the various states. At the recent regional conference of the National Chamber of Commerce in Colorado Springs only one objection was raised to the amended Swing-Johnson bill—it referred to the right of the secretary of the interior to make a common carrier of transmission lines installed by private interests. Except for the foregoing objection and the differences between Arizona and California regarding their respective claims for water and power, all interested parties are in accord. After all the involved problems have been settled—after the years of labor given freely by public-spirited citizens—after the mass of engineering reports and recommendations have been studied, mastered and co-ordinated, and in recognition of the constantly recurring peril to the property of thousands of our citizens, it appears a crime to delay the enactment of legislation which would bring about a solution of this involved problem. Differences of opinion regarding Western measures can rarely be settled in Washington. They should be met squarely in free, frank and friendly interchange of views and settled in the interests of all concerned. Then, with a united front, we of the West may go forward and secure our fair share of favorable legislation from the Congress of the United States.

"Apparently only two steps remain to be taken. First, the amended Swing Johnson bill should be passed by the present session of the Congress of the United States. If it will not endanger the passage of the bill at the present session the bill should be modified so as to overcome the objection referring to the making of a common carrier of transmission lines.

"Second, after the passage of the Swing Johnson bill a conference of representatives of business and other interests of Arizona and California should be held to discuss and agree upon the respective claims of Arizona and California for water and power distribution. In the event of the conference failing in its purpose the questions to be settled by arbitration. These suggestions appear fair and reasonable and would undoubtedly settle the last of the long list of intricate problems which have beset the solution of the Colorado River question."

After full discussion, the statement of Hale was approved by the board and it went on record as favoring the amended Swing-Johnson bill by adopting a resolution in line with the suggested "two steps" that, apparently, remain to be taken.

DISABLED REMEMBERED.

The annual bazaar and Christmas tree of Twin Peaks Parlor No. 185 N.D.G.W. December 4 was the most successful affair, socially and financially, ever given by the Parlor. December 10 a Christmas tree was enjoyed by the members. Santa Claus distributed presents from a beautifully decorated tree. Refreshments were served. Emily Van Noy, captain of the drill team, entertained the members of the basketball and drill teams with a Christmas party at her home December 20. Great preparations are being made for the official visit of Grand President Pearl Lamb, January 14.

The veterans' welfare committee of the Parlor took complete charge of a ward in Letterman Hospital for Christmas. The members donated generously and the boys were given well-filled Christmas boxes. December 24 an entertainment was presented, after which refreshments were served.

CALIFORNIA'S OLDEST HISTORY

AFTER A LAPSE OF NEARLY A CENtury and a half, the oldest history of California, said to be one of the greatest treasures of American history, written by Father Francisco Palou, founder of the Mission Dolores in San Francisco and right-hand man to Father Junipero Serra, has been rescued from obscurity in the archives of Mexico and translated into English, so that the American public may read at first hand the story of the founding of California.

As a result of a remark by Professor Herbert Bolton, chairman of the department of history at the University of California, that, "If there is one thing for which San Francisco should be ashamed it is its neglect of Palou," which was heard by Sidney M. Ehrman, a businessman of that city, the complete history of "New California," as Father Palou called it, is now off the university presses in a four volume set.

Ehrman, struck by the significance of a history written by a man who was an eye-witness of most of the events of which he spoke, volunteered to finance the project, and after four years of research the work of translating and editing the history has been completed.

Much of the history was written within the walls of Mission Dolores itself, Professor Bolton asserts. In speaking of Palou, he says: "Few men were in a better position to know than Palou, and none equalled him in habits of observation and journal keeping. His 'Noticias' were written at Carmel and Mission Dolores during a period of ten years and although they were concluded in 1783, they have never been available heretofore in the language of the people who have inherited Palou's legacy."

Following the death of Father Serra, Palou, who formerly had served as vice-president of all missions in New California, succeeded his lifelong friend as president of the missions. He wrote in the following year his well known "Life of Junipero Serra."

In 1785, Palou carried his history to Mexico and filed it in the archives of the College of San Fernando, in Mexico City, of which he was appointed superior. Later the original holograph disappeared, but not before an exact copy had been made of it by a fellow monk, Francisco Garcia Figueroa, in response to orders received from the king of Spain.

Speaking of the method of editing, Professor

Bolton says: "I have chosen to present his narrative as nearly as possible unhampered, and to relegate to the back of the volume most of the apparatus of technical scholarship. Though Father Palou figured in California history only less conspicuously than Serra himself, very little has been written about him. As a result he is known to scholars principally as the biographer of Serra, and to the general public not at all. Some day, I predict, he will be the subject, as he deserves to be, of a longer biography than I have space to give him."

Regarding the letters contained in the appendices, of which there are a number giving vivid accounts of the wanderings of Palou and other missionaries up and down the length of Southern California from San Francisco to Mexico in the interests of the faith, as well as those dealing with the death of Serra, Professor Bolton says: "The earlier of these documents throw a flood of fresh light on the Franciscan regime in Old California, and on the preparation of the Portola-Serra expedition to New California; and the later ones vivify the story of the pioneer years in New California."

The meeting-hall, which was decorated in keeping with the Christmas season, was thronged with members of the Parlor and visitors from surrounding Parlors. Here the guests were presented with corsage bouquets. A class of candidates were initiated, and the excellence of the ritual's rendition brought commendation to the officers of No. 124; especially complimented was the pianist, Pearl K. Dwinell. Addresses were made by Grand President Lamb, Grand Secretary Roberts, D.D.G.P. Hitt, Grand Trustee Thomas, Past Grand President Irwin, Mrs. Schoneman, Past Grand President Stoermer and Past Grand President Bertola, the latter saying that the oneness of the great State of California should be preserved.

For the Parlor, President Calista de Soto presented a piece of silver to Grand President Lamb. Past President Kathryn Ronan presented a gift to Grand Trustee Thomas, Annie L. Adair presented a sterling silver pen and pencil to Past Grand President Stoermer,, and Grand Trustee Thomas presented a token to D.D.G.P. Hitt.

At the close of the perfect evening a tamale supper was served. The tables were gaily decorated with the Order's colors and tiny candles twinkled through the golden-hued flowers. Miss Grace Norton was chairman of the efficient committee which had charge of the arrangements for the Grand President's visit.

MOTORING IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

WHEN THE NATIONAL EDITORIAL Association was assembled in convention in Los Angeles City last summer the Automobile Club of Southern California offered cash prizes for the best story written by the editors on their impressions of motoring thereabouts. The judges have announced H. L. Snyder, publisher of the "Shepherdstown Register" of Shepherdstown, West Virginia, winner of the first prize. His story, titled "Motoring in Southern California," follows:

"Motoring in Southern California is another name for earthly bliss. If there is anything more pleasant than a journey through this wonderful country, over its splendid highways, I have not yet found it. One of my chief joys while we editors were in California was the motor trips radiating from Los Angeles. One of these was the drive from Los Angeles to San Diego, a distance of about a hundred and thirty miles over the Camino Real—the royal road, or the king's highway—a perfect road through a delightfully interesting country. This road was the route over which the patient padres slowly made their way northward from southernmost California, a hundred and fifty years ago. They somehow laid out a true course with easy grades for a distance of some six hundred miles, and though modern engineers have replaced the ancient trail with marvelous hard-surfaced roads, they have changed the route but little. The padres established missions a day's journey apart, and many of these are still standing, at least in part, and they are fascinatingly interesting.

"When we started out on this drive to San Diego the enticing road called us on and on, and yet at almost every turn there was some new beauty that beckoned us to stop and enjoy in leisurely fashion the lovely landscape or the charming towns and modern cities along the way that seemed so prosperous.

"Although the highway ahead was always alluring, there were at the same time side roads that seemed to demand investigation, canyons that were irresistible in their appeal for exploration, and I wished for a month in which to make that trip. Now we were driving between great groves of orange trees or walnuts, then fields of living green stretching in restful quiet almost as far as the eye could carry, again vineyards with luscious grapes growing in the balmy sunshine. For a long stretch this road runs along the Pacific, and the shining sea, with the breakers rolling gently in upon the sandy beach, somehow grip your heart even as they delight the eye. You wish that the road might run along the sea all the balance of the way. Yet when you get back inland again and see the mighty hills and the mountains purple in the distance, you know that this is also good.

"Over the Torrey pine hills with the sunlit sea on the one side and the misty mountains on the other, and the road unfolding new beauties ahead —this thrills the very soul and you wish that the day might stretch into weeks so that you could take in all this beauty and strangely fascinating charm. It is such a peculiar combination of the beautiful in nature and the cleverness of the modern constructor of roads and the builder of cities and towns and individual homes, that you hardly know which to enjoy the most.

"There are so many charming towns along the way that mention cannot be made of all—but La Jolla (pronounced La Hoya and Spanish for 'Jewel')—is so lovely a place that we could not resist the temptation to stop here and enjoy its beauty. It is right on the ocean's brink, and there is a singular fascination in standing on the cliffs and looking down into never-ceasing waves that have been breaking there for so many countless ages that they have worn caves and grottoes and passages in the solid rock.

"It was hard to leave La Jolla, but we had to ress on and soon were in the city of our desti- ation, incomparable San Diego, beautiful and ell favored beyond description as it proudly oc- upies its place upon the hill overlooking the plendid harbor and the sea beyond. I think hat we might not have been able to leave San Diego afterward had it not been that we knew he return trip would be just as delightful as the ourney there.

"There was another motor trip that was also ruly delightful—from Los Angeles to lovely anta Barbara. Here, too, much of the road lies long the beach, and it was hard to pass on and ot join the happy throngs that lounged along he shore or fished among the breakers with such xcellent luck. There were places along this ighway—still a part of the Camino Real—that eemed good enough to have been a part of Para- ise, and one could hardly decide which was the ost fascinating, the bold hills that were just s nature made them or the cultivated valleys hat man has caused to yield so abundantly of he fruits of the earth. Santa Barbara, our ay's objective, was especially interesting, and e lingered long there.

"Somebody has said that one could motor for hree months in Southern California without re- eating and yet never get off of good hard roads. verily believe it. I traveled many of the hrough highways and some of the lateral roads, nd yet I think that I did not get to see a hun- redth part of the interesting places to which he roads might have led me. I saw something f the mountains and the valleys, the cultivated pots and the desert that grip one's very soul. saw the ocean and the islands in the shining ea, and still it seems to me that I but touched he high spots that remain to the fortunate ones ho might have many months—or years—in hich to motor through Southern California at heir leisure.

"As for me, it takes all my will power not to o there again, for they say that a third visit is atal. I have been there twice, and if I am to ve and die in the good old Valley of the Shen- ndoah that I love so well I must not again go o the Pacific Coast with all its alluring beauty nd comfort."

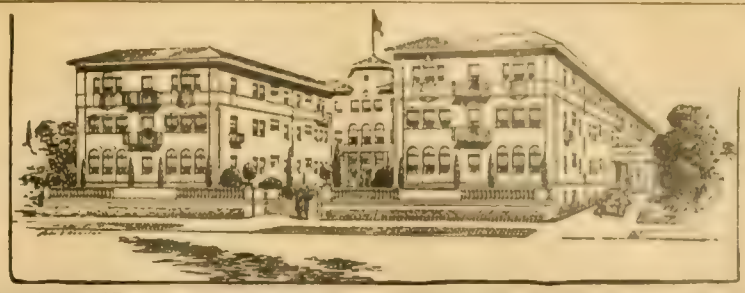
entennial Exposition in Philadelphia won the rand prize. It was built and maintained by the os Angeles Chamber of Commerce.

The exhibit was in the form of an old Spanish ission, and measured ninety feet in length by hirty-five feet in depth, while the top of the ower was thirty-five feet above the floor. Dior- mas, similar to those in the exhibit hall on the ain floor of the local Chamber of Commerce uilding, depicted the agricultural, industrial, ommercial and recreational advantages of Los ngeles County. A troupe of Spanish troubadors ntertained visitors.

BEAUTIFYING CAMPUS.

With a hundred thousand plants already grow- ng, and preparations under way for more, the ursery established by the University of Califor- ia on the new site of the Southern Branch at Westwood is assuming proportions indicative of he plans being made for the beautification of he new campus. Shrubs and trees of all kinds re being started for use in the landscaping of he grounds at the future home of the institu- on in Los Angeles.



Plans for the landscape development of the ew campus are well under way. While it will ot be possible to beautify the grounds around he buildings until construction has been com- leted, work on the campus in other sections will o ahead. When the buildings are completed, he necessary plants for the landscape plans will e ready.

The work of pruning and treating by tree sur- ery the oak trees on the new campus already as been done. The new site, donated by the unicipalities of Los Angeles County, lends itself lendidly to the landscape architect, and it is elieved it will be one of the most beautiful uni- ersity locations in the United States.

PLANNING FOR SESQUI-CENTENNIAL.

Plans have been started for making Los An- les City the scene, in 1931, of the greatest fes- val ever held. The occasion is the one hundred id fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the ty.

During the sesqui-centennial year, it is sug- sted, a special feature of entertainment should provided each week. All national conventions ill be asked to meet in Los Angeles during the ar, and the Orders of Native Sons and Native aughters will be urged to have the state-wide dmission Day celebration here.

DAYS OF FORTY-NINE RECALLED

GOLD OF OPHIR PARLOR NO. 190 N.D.G.W. of Oroville, Butte County, has a most interesting collection of early-day California history relics to which additions are being constantly made. Recently Mrs. Florence Boyle, in charge of the relics, obtained from M. Thomas of Cherokee, Butte County, a promissory note of the vintage of 1849. The text follows:

"This article of agreement made and entered into this 9th day of April, in the year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Forty-nine between Hiram Hewes of the one part, and Alexander Campbell, both of Freedom, in the County of Washtenaw, and State of Michigan, witnesseth:

"That the said Alexander Campbell, being desirous of enlisting in the enterprise of emigrating temporarily to the Territory of California on the Continent of North America for the purpose of engaging in the Gold Mining business, or otherwise collecting gold or other precious metals that may be found in that vicinity, and the said Alexander Campbell not having the means at his command essential to a proper outfit for a journey of so expensive and hazardous character, and not being willing to risk all the expenses as well as the fatigues incident to the enterprise, has applied to the said Hiram Hewes for two hundred dollars as a loan to be expended in the journey and business aforesaid, and for the attainment of the objects of said journey as hereinafter expressed.

"Therefore it is hereby stipulated, bargained and agreed by and between the parties hereto, that the said Hewes will, and hereby does furnish unto the said Campbell the sum of two hundred dollars. But in consideration of the said two hundred dollars, the receipt of which is hereby acknowledged by the said Campbell, he the said Campbell agrees to & with the said Hewes, that he will join immediately as soon as may be, some Company about to embark for California, and that if his life and health are spared, he will devote himself faithfully and attentively to the business for which said money is invested, to wit: laboring in the business of mining as aforesaid and continue therein until one year from the first day of next July, when he will return to the State of Michigan and Township of Freedom as aforesaid and pay to the said Hiram Hewes, his heirs or assigns, one half of the products or proceeds of the business, over and above the Two Hundred dollars hereby invested as herein expressed. The said Campbell is to give his time, and expend the Two Hundred dollars as aforesaid and the said Hewes is to furnish the same as herein stipulated.

"In witness whereof We have hereunto placed our hands and seals this 9th day of April, 1849.

AUTO INDUSTRY CONSUMES VAST QUANTITIES MATERIAL.

Comparing the automobile industry with other large enterprises of the country, some interesting figures are noted: Automobiles have absorbed 84 percent of all the rubber consumed in the United States. One-half of all plate glass manufactured in this country goes into motor cars, and also 65 percent of all the upholstery leather used in this country.

That motor vehicles are co-ordinating with steam and electrical traffic is indicated by the fact that there are 251 street-car companies in the United States using motor busses, and twenty of the steam railroads have adopted motor transportation as an auxiliary to their main lines.

GAS TAX DISTRIBUTED.

California's fifty-eight counties received November 29 a total of $4,335,779 as their share of the gas tax collected by the state during the six months ended September 30. The allotment to each county was based on the number of auto registrations.

Los Angeles County, with the greatest number of cars, 621,110, received the biggest slice of the tax-melon, $1,706,365. San Francisco with 123,301 cars, got $336,742, and Alameda County, with 115,847 machines, was awarded $318,264. Other counties getting good slices were: San Diego $157,999, Fresno $146,092, Santa Clara $123,427, Sacramento $109,973, Orange $105,069.

For the year ended September 30 the total gas tax in California was $16,055,159, an increase, compared with the previous twelve-month period, of 16.87 percent.

SOUTHERN AUTO CLUB CELEBRATES TWENTY-SIXTH BIRTHDAY.

The ancient tradition that 13 is unlucky has been shattered by the Automobile Club of Southern California, which celebrated its twenty-sixth birthday anniversary December 13. History records that on December 13, 1900, some forty-six proud owners of "horseless carriages" filed articles of incorporation for an automobile club.

In contrast to conditions today, the drivers of the "one-lungers" of 1900 had no paved roads, no auto camps, no garages or filling stations and their machines chugging along the dusty roads were about as popular with the average citizen as a certain small furry animal that resembles a kitten but smells worse than gasoline.

The club in those days was a social organization, and one of the events of the season was a club run. This usually was at the week end, and those participating would attempt to make thirty miles one day, and get back the next, but as a rule only about half of them made the jaunt successfully.

After twenty-six years the club has a membership of approximately 122,000 with offices in thirty-one cities in the thirteen counties of California South. It performs every service for members that the motorist requires, and has been the leading factor in the southern section of the state in promoting good roads, sane legislation, reasonable insurance rates and safety on the highways, and in extending courtesies to visiting motorists.

Congratulations have been received by the big motoring organization from all sections of the country, as it has thousands of well-wishers throughout the East who have enjoyed its courtesies while motoring in California.

SAFE DRIVING DEPENDS ON CLEAR SIGNALING OF INTENTIONS.

Too many motorists fail of perfection in driving, experience accidents and run up car operation costs because they neglect the first fundamental of good motoring—the giving of clear, sharp signals of their intentions—according to Percy E. Towne, chairman of the public safety committee of the California State Automobile Association, who suggests that every motorist might profit by taking an inventory of driving practices.

"None of us who operate automobiles are absolutely immune from carelessness or thoughtlessness in signaling," Towne says. "There are times when business worries or home cares press heavily upon everyone and under such circumstances one drives more or less like an automatom assuming, subconsciously, that the other man's mind is alert and that his keenness can compensate for our own preoccupation. Such an attitude is not fair. It is 'buck passing' that the average motorist would not commit if properly considered.

"Successful driving—that is, driving that is free from accidents of every variety, even the most minor—depends upon each driver removing the element of mystery from his every intention. Thousands of accidents are caused annually in all parts of the country because some driver fails to give a signal and, another, assuming that he knows the first man's purpose, guesses wrong.

"It is a problem for each motorist, individually. Unless each makes it a business to improve his or her own driving by complying with signal regulations, far-reaching results cannot be achieved."

Successful Cleaning—A successful window and windshield cleaning job must be done in the shade because the sun dries the water too quickly leaving streaks and spots. Sponge the glass with clean water, wipe with damp chamois and polish with gingham cloth.

1927 AUTOMOBILE REGISTRATION COMMENCES JANUARY THIRD.

State registration of motor vehicles for 1927 will begin January 3 and continue until midnight of January 31, when a penalty of 100 percent will be added. Will H. Marsh, chief of the State Division of Motor Vehicles, predicts 1,725,000 licenses will be issued during 1927.

The new license plates, maroon background with cream-colored lettering and numerals, read: "19 California 27," doing away with the abbreviation "Cal." The letter symbols have been discontinued, too, the complete license number being displayed.

The procedure for renewal registration follows that of last year. The license fee of $3 for gas pleasure cars remains the same, and that for electric cars is $13. "Wagon houses"—camp wagons and cars used for camping purposes—pay the $3 pleasure car rate.

EFFORT WILL BE MADE TO HAVE UNIFORM TRAFFIC REGULATIONS.

The California Municipal Traffic League, composed of law enforcement and legislative officials of cities throughout the state, will engage in a state-wide campaign during 1927 in support of the movement for uniformity in municipal traffic regulations. This was decided at the league's November convention in Fresno.

An ordinance titled "Uniform Traffic Ordinance for California Cities" will be presented to every municipality for adoption. It has the backing of the Automobile Club of Southern California, the California State Automobile Association, the California Municipal Traffic League, the California Public Safety Conference, the California Development Association and other civic organizations.

EAST AND WEST MUST CO-OPERATE TO SOLVE NATIONAL AUTO PROBLEMS.

National chiefs of organized motordom, representing more than a million motorists in the United States, are preparing for the greatest year of westward-bound tourist travel in automotive history as a result of the recent visit to California of the officers and directors of the American Automobile Association. That California is becoming more and more the mecca of motor tourists was the consensus of opinion of the visiting delegation.

In the course of an address at San Francisco, Thomas P. Henry of Detroit, president of the A. A. A., declared:

AUTO-PAS SAFETY LIGHT

AUTO-PAS light on your machine will make the "other fellow" think of you and see you at night.

It is a safety light for automobiles, attached to the left running board opposite the driver's seat to eliminate front, rear and side collisions and side-swiping. Just as important protection as headlights and tail lights. Meets a want never cared for heretofore in successful manner—3 lights in one.

It reflects a white light upward, a green light forward and a red light toward the rear. The white light shows the hand signal plainly for a great distance; heretofore it has been difficult to see the hand at night—it is generally conceded the hand signal is the most practical and safe signal to use. The passing driver realizes that by clearing the green or red lights he takes little chance of running off the highway and passes in safety.

At intersections, the driver approaching from the left sees both green and red lights, indicating your right of way.

Because of its location the AUTO-PAS is the only light on your car that you can always be sure is burning, and if your tail light goes out the AUTO-PAS red light furnishes a satisfactory substitute and may save you a fine.

"The East is turning in greater and greater numbers toward the playgrounds of the West and the Pacific Coast. From this has come a keener appreciation of the need for more complete links of transcontinental highways, also for accelerating the work under the federal highway aid system. These problems are national, and in no sense sectional. In order to get the best results, the East, the Middle West, the intermountain states and the Far West must act together.

"All motorists, irrespective of sections, are interested in the continuation of federal highway aid, in the elimination of unreasonable taxes, in the development of a uniform program for street and highway safety and in the early completion of all-weather year-round transcontinental roads. There are many other problems on which the co-operation of the East and the West is vital, such as a uniform motor-vehicle law."

CROSSING FATALITIES INCREASE.

During the first seven months of 1926 there were 3,068 train-auto accidents at crossings on railroad lines of the country, exclusive of the short-line or interurban railway lines, which were also involved in a large number of such accidents.

Those 3,068 accidents resulted in 1,292 fatalities. Similar accidents during the same period in 1925 resulted in 1,154 fatalities. Not a very good showing for the various "safety" schemes.

GAS CONSUMPTION INCREASE.

According to State Controller Ray L. Riley, each California motorist used an average of 585 1/2 gallons of gasoline during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1926. For the previous fiscal year the average was 562 2/3 gallons.

During the 1925-26 fiscal year 1,493,972 cars were registered in the state, and they used 859,325,904 gallons of gasoline. During the 1924-25 fiscal year, 1,327,612 machines consumed 747,002,315 gallons of gas.

Extra Caution Time—Operation of an automobile in the rainy season calls for exceptional caution, for this is the time of the year most fertile in accidents.

¶ The Order of the Native Sons of the Golden West is founded upon the same broad patriotic principles that have been the inspiration of similar organizations in older States of the Union. Each State has its history. Into that history is interwoven a narrative of deeds performed by a mighty race of men who frontiered and pioneered the pathway for the countless thousands to follow. They transplanted the spirit, the life, the institutions of the Colonists, and wherever a State was erected there were established the ideals of the Fathers of the Republic.

¶ Therefore, the membership of our Order is limited to those born within the State, because we believe that pride of nativity is inherent in the breast of every person and moves that person to a consecrated loyalty to his native land. We do not maintain that birthplace alone confers any special privilege; rather do we teach that this casts upon the citizen an increased obligation to become interested in all material matters affecting its development and progress. National strength and national greatness have been commensurate with State strength and State greatness.

¶ California was the thirty-first State to be admitted into the Union. She contributed a citizenship and a golden treasure at an opportune time in the affairs of the nation. The many events connected with its settlement and organization as a State played a prominent part in shaping the destiny of the American people, and geographically she occupies a strategic position in the world-wide problems of the present and the future.

¶ We have taken an active interest in the conservation of our natural resources; the preservation of our scenic wonders and making them accessible to all; the retention of the State and its soil for the White race; all legislation, Federal and State, affecting the State and its interests.

¶ In our Fellowship endowment at the University of California we have expended over fifty thousand dollars in the preparation and preservation of the history of California and the Pacific Coast, and it has become the incentive for the Student Body of that institution and of the high-schools throughout the State to learn and teach that history. In this work we have laid the foundation for a text-book to be used in the public schools.

¶ We visit places where important events transpired and we have identified and marked the same with tablet and monument. Responding to the patriotic objects of our Order, we observe each recurring anniversary day of the Admission of California into the Union by public ceremonies in the various cities of the State. We actively participate in public dedicatory ceremonies of grammar-school and high-school buildings, on which occasions the students and citizens are addressed by officials of our Order on patriotic subjects.

¶ We maintain a "Homeless Children" Bureau and have placed in the childless homes over twenty-six hundred homeless boys and girls, insuring their development into a splendid citizenship amid elevating environments. In this activity we have expended over two hundred thousand dollars, contributed generously and voluntarily by the membership of the Order.

¶ It thus appears that the work of our organization appeals to every citizen of the State, irrespective of place of birth. It matters not where we were born in this land of ours; we are all citizens of a common country, we pledge our allegiance to one flag, and we are best evidencing our love of country and our loyalty to that flag by deservedly wearing the badge of public service wherever we exist and have our home.

¶ We welcome to our Membership the sons of California, and we promise nothing in return, save that compensation which comes to the citizen who conscientiously endeavors to perform his part in the cause of a greater and better civilization.

Grand President, Native Sons of the Golden West.

JUSTICE TO AMERICA NOW!

READERS OF THE GRIZZLY BEAR will recall that, in 1925, several articles from the pen of W. B. Shearer were published in these columns, dealing with unpreparedness, as reflected in the United States Navy's condition, and owing that this country had been buncoed at e "limitation of armament" conference. It s said then that Shearer dealt with facts, and did. Those facts are now being presented in e Federal Congress halls in an endeavor to ake the navy what it should be the equal of at of any other country and adequately pre-red for any and all emergencies.

In the United States Senate, January 3, Sen-or Hiram W. Johnson of California delivered characteristically powerful and convincing ad-ess, in which he discussed the naval strength the United States and contended that this untry is lagging behind other nations, partic-arly Great Britain and Japan, in the matter of val construction. Quoting Senator Johnson:

"In endeavoring to present today the condition of our sea wer, and the neglect and deterioration of our navy, while eprecate the fatuous policy which brought upon us such consequences, I speak not at all in militaristic vein. I not and never have been militaristic. I abhor war in ater degree than the professional preachers of peace. t I decline because the repetition of a word or the uthing of a phrase is for the moment popular, to over-k realities or to deny my country its adequate need of tection. . . . I demand the naval equality we fondly gined we were guaranteed by the disarmament confer-e. I understand full well the anxiety of many of our diests and some of our people to win Europe's good ion, but desirable as the commendation of Europe may our first duty is to the United States. No man here but eeves the 5-5-3 ratio meant that Great Britain and the ited States would have equal navies and their relation to an's naval strength would be as 5 to 3. If those who ticipated in the conference of 1922 had, at its conclusion, d the American people that its result was immediately to troy the sea dominance of the United States, and then, s brief time, leave our country in naval power woefully aken than Britain, and far inferior to Japan, even foreign paganda and a press sympathetic with England could not e stemmed America's indignation and condemnation. d exactly this is what has happened. Today the navy of United States is in comparison with Great Britain and an, underbuilt, insufficient, inadequate, and so far infer-as to humiliate the national pride and imperil the na nal safety.

"Three things are self-evident. First, it is our right der the spirit of the solemn agreement of the disarma-nt conference to have a navy equal to that of Great tain, and stronger than Japan's in the ratio of 5 to 3. condly, our importance economically, commercially, and erwise, requires a navy at least equal to what our people e told they were to have under that agreement; and rdly, world conditions and the attitude of the nations of earth toward us, imperatively demand we have our max-m of naval strength commensurate with our plighted rd.

"The facts should arouse in the most flabby and timid a ge of patriotism, and if patriotism has no appeal for se who have chloroformed love of country with a foggy rnationalism, then a decent regard for safety, and just dinary common sense demand action. No war bogies are pured up here, no conflicts prophesied, no hatred of any ion or people invoked. A set of circumstances is de-ied with meticulous care and studious accuracy. With understanding of them, and their harmful consequences, at ought to be done? We sought to disarm with a t to us infinitely greater than to any other nation. We e scrupulously kept our faith, both in letter and spirit. the facts tell whether the faith of others has been kept. d if not kept by others, shall we, disliked by all, stand ed and defenseless? Far better, before too late, to rem the wrong. In our ignorance of what was done to us, haps we may be pardoned our past inaction, but now h full knowledge, only God can forgive supineness.

"If we had the love of every people and the friendship of ry nation, there might be excuse for unpreparedness and ay, but if all peoples and all nations dislike us, what do edom and prudence and common sense dictate? In what eem does the world hold the United States? There is w no difference of opinion, the answer is sorrowfully con-ded by all. While the United States pursues a course of ty and generosity, good will, and friendliness toward all world, it is a regrettable but none the less obvious fact, ich we cannot blink, that there is scarcely among the na ns of the earth a single one but regards us with hostility d ill will, and in many cases downright hatred. . . .

"The American people have, as Jefferson expressed it, 'a ssion for peace.' But after the humiliating experiences of new Republic in 1812 Jefferson sternly demanded ade te preparedness as the real means of maintaining peace r country, pacific in intention, desiring no nation's lands r the conquest of any people, by precept and example will d in peaceful paths. But dumb is he to the lessons of past, blind to conditions of the present, who will strip of our defensive armor and leave us at the mercy of any rderous assault. With an understanding of our unwel ne position with the nations of the world, realizing how h views us askance and wishes us ill, knowing now that cle Sam has no defender but Uncle Sam, let us look at t department of our government upon which, and upon ich practically alone, we must depend for the safety and petuity of the Republic. . . .

"When we examine into what actually happened to Amer n sea power at the Washington conference and then com-pare the facts of the case with the impressions which were conveyed to the American people through their own press at that time, and which are still being so conveyed, we begin dimly to realize with what skill that British publicity staff performed its task. Neither can we escape the conclusion that the same influences and skill are at work today when we read articles by British writers constantly appearing in American journals, or read the many articles of unknown authorship appearing from time to time in so-called American papers which have British affiliations.

"In all, the United States has laid down sixteen vessels, of which six are river gunboats, a type of vessel built for police purposes and of no fleet value. A few of the same type have been laid down by other powers. Omitting river gunboats, we have the following comparison of vessels laid down since the Washington conference: United States, 19; Great Britain, 33; Japan, 112; France, 87; Italy, 16. Italy, that was able to pay but 20 percent of her indebtedness to us, lays down forty-six.

"It is thus seen that Great Britain has laid down more than three times, Japan more than eleven times, France more than eight times, and Italy more than four times the number of ships which America has laid down since the conference. If we bear these figures in mind it is apparent how absurd is the suggestion now saturating our press and platform that by proposing to add ten cruisers to our small building program we are in any sense beginning a new competition in naval armaments. . . .

"The present deplorable and humiliating condition of our sea power is justified by different sets of individuals in various ways. A few of our people and perhaps a small part of our press rather disingenuously intimate that we deliberately set out to destroy our superiority in order gladly to accept inferiority, and that Great Britain's far-flung empire requires a much larger navy than any other nation, and we should be content to nestle under its protecting wings. Until very recently some others have said 'economy' was the reason for pushing us farther down the scale of inferiority. But 'economy' in a nation such as ours, has come to be recognized as the sorriest excuse for imperiling or endangering either its economic life or its future safety. Then recently it has been claimed that our country designedly has accepted a position below any first-rate power because the United States is expecting to call another disarmament conference to remedy the entire situation by another disarmament agreement. Were we to have another disarmament confrence with another disarmament agreement like the last we probably would have no navy at all, but the talismanic words 'peace' and 'disarmament,' it is assumed, quiet every alarm, answer every objection, close our eyes in beautific slumber, and of themselves provide wholly for the national welfare and defense. Peace everybody longs and prays for, disarmament all desire. Neither is debatable. But does disarmament mean, in the eyes of our government, disarmament for us alone and for no other power? Some light has been thrown lately upon the suggestion of another disarmament conference. We have had one disillusioning disarmament conference. Out of it we have come disarmed, and out of it Great Britain and Japan have come wholly armed. We went into the last disarmament conference the richest nation on earth, able to carry out a definite, fixed naval program which we had adopted, and with a superiority in certain directions unquestioned. In the one direction in which we could consummate to its highest degree this superiority of ours, no other nation was able to follow us. We came out of the disarmament conference with the abandonment of the program of superiority in which none could follow us, with the destruction of our preeminent position, and we find ourselves, as a result of it, relegated to the rear, with a navy inferior to those with whom we dealt presumably in good faith; and as the years have gone by since that disarmament conference we find ourselves, with each recurring period, farther and farther behind, and with an inferiority more and more pronounced. . . .

"When the superiority of Great Britain and Japan is thus so marked, with all the ingenuousness of a countryman buying another gold brick, we suggest another disarmament conference, and Great Britain out of her affectionate regard very sweetly and generously says, 'Oh, yes, we'll have a disarmament conference based, of course, upon the present status quo.' That is, we may again indulge our catch phrases and, rolling our eyes at one another in an ecstasy of fervor, have another disarmament conference provided that we accept the 'status quo' and naval strength less than one-third of that of Britain and far inferior to that of Japan. . . .

"I am not content that the United States should remain in such a position. To leave our country thus, aside from every other consideration, is neither the part of prudence, wisdom, nor statesmanship, and no man coming from the western coast with a knowledge of the past and vision of the future should for an instant consent to it. But with the present turmoil of the world, with the attitude of the nations of the earth toward us, it is sheer madness. But beyond both of these reasons there remains the redemption of the promise made our people when we sunk in the sea some hundreds of millions of their money and sacrifices of the world's finest shipping—a promise that our sacrifice, greater than the combined sacrifice of all other nations, should not be in vain, and that the destruction of our superiority at sea should leave us at least on an equality with all others.

"I am not here advocating any encroachment upon the rights of any nation. I am not here seeking superiority in arms in any direction, over any nation on the face of the earth. I am not here pleading for a competitive naval race. But today there is much at stake for our country. Like some of the cherished policies of this republic are in the balance. I recall to you that the Monroe Doctrine is just as strong as the United States Navy and no stronger. Our foreign policy rests for its foundation not upon our ability but upon our ability to defend that will. We have with a generosity unparalleled in history yielded the power that was ours, and have accepted a situation equal to that of others when we were far beyond them, with the possibility of outstripping all the nations of the earth combined. We have been more than just to Great Britain and Japan. What I ask, is that there should be some justice to America now."

A total of 1,662 fires which burned over 584,601 acres is the 1926 fire record for the national forests of California. These fires killed 296,000,000 feet of federal-owned timber in addition to large amounts of young growth, and caused damage amounting to a million dollars.

Most of these fires should not have occurred, for sixty-eight percent of them were, according to the United States Forest Service, due to human carelessness. The forests must be protected, and the best way to protect them is through the exercise of the greatest care when visiting them.

If the Federal Government would exercise its prerogative and deport, for moral turpitude, several of the aliens in the movie-world claiming Hollywood and Beverly Hills as their abiding-places, the nation, the state and the moving-picture industry would be immeasurably benefited.

The only ones who would suffer from such action on the part of the United States would be the undesirable aliens—with which the movie-colony is infested—and the scandal-dispensing newspapers.

There is now before the State Legislature a bill designed to prevent aliens ineligible to citizenship, which includes Japs, from taking fish or shellfish from the waters of California, for commercial purposes or for pleasure.

A similar bill was before the Legislature two years ago and was well on its way to enactment into law when a Jap-lobby arrived at the scene of law making. So, following a banquet, paid for, it was common report, by Jap-dollars, that bill was defeated.

THE INEVITABLE

(SARAH K. BOLTON.)

I like the man who faces what he must
With step triumphant and a heart of cheer;
Who fights the daily battle without fear;
Sees his hopes fail, yet keeps unfaltering trust
That God is God; that somehow, true and just,
His plans work out for mortals; not a tear
Is shed when fortune, which the world holds dear,
Falls from his grasp; better, with love, a crust
Than living in dishonor; envies not,
Nor loses faith in man; but does his best
Nor ever mourns over his humbler lot,
But with a smile and words of hope, gives zest
To every toiler; he alone is great,
Who by a life heroic conquers fate.

CALIFORNIA HAPPENINGS OF FIFTY YEARS AGO

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

THE ATTENTION OF THE CITIZENS OF California and of the nation was riveted February 1877 upon the Federal Congress, where the Senate was endeavoring to cope, by legislation, with the presidential election muddle. An electoral commission, composed of eight Republicans and seven Democrats, all prominent in national affairs, was finally created to settle it.

The commission, by a party vote, decided not to go behind the returns as made by the official canvassers of the several states. This decision gave the electoral vote of Louisiana to Hayes and Wheeler, and elected them by one electoral vote. The people soon gave their attention to other affairs and all indications of serious dissension quickly disappeared.

February 1 there were 100 banks in California, located in thirty-five different counties. They represented a paid-up capital of $44,400,000, had deposits of $122,911,300 and cash on hand to the amount of $18,040,000.

February 7 C. T. Mills and D. D. Haskhurst donated Mills Seminary, near Oakland, Alameda County, to a board of trustees, headed by ex-Governor Henry H. Haight, to be forever held by them and their successors for the education of the young women of the Pacific Coast.

There were four mild storms during the month and the rainfall helped some, but it was not sufficient to assure good crops. A hot spell sent the temperature up. The thermometer at Santa Barbara registered 102 degrees in the shade February 22.

February 9 the report of another ore strike in the lower level of Con. Virginia sent the stock in that Comstock Lode mine up from $45 a share into the $50-figures and the San Francisco stock market became buoyant again.

I. W. Hellman and T. D. Mott were sued in a Los Angeles court for $4,000 as bondsmen of a defaulting former city treasurer.

The production of quicksilver in California during 1876 reached its maximum, over 75,000 flasks. Of this number 49,000 flasks were exported and 9,000 flasks were sold to mining companies operating in Nevada State.

Washington's Birthday, February 22, was observed as a legal holiday in California. Many flags were flung to the breeze and the public-schools were closed in most places. Parades of the national guards were featured in the cities and grand balls in the towns.

340 STUDENTS, CALIFORNIA UNIVERSITY.

The opening of the Southern Pacific railroad and the advertisement of the Southern California climate giving them an avenue for easy entrance and an inducement to go, caused Los Angeles to be overrun with tramps and their visits to the residences in search of a meal became unbearable nuisances as well as an onerous tax on the people's generosity. Steps were being taken to stop the influx. Ten were routed out of a hay barn one night by the owner. The tourists were seeking the hay to sleep in, being too impecunious to rent a bed in a lodging-house.

A Sutter County farmer named Stewart was arrested for offering a bribe of $300 to Secretary of the Interior Chandler at Washington, D. C. He wanted him to hasten a favorable decision of the department to a quarter-section of government land. His excuse was that as President Grant's cabinet was going out of office he thought the secretary, without a job, needed the money.

February 1 the University of California at Berkeley, Alameda County, had twelve professors and 340 students.

The February 1 report of the Los Angeles City superintendent of public-schools showed twenty-five teachers employed and 1,057 pupils enrolled. Twenty-three of the teachers were "school-marms."

Due to an oversupply there was a slump in the San Francisco market in potato and egg prices. Spuds were selling at 40c a cental and hen-fruit at 8c a dozen.

Enroute from Nevada State to Yuma, Arizona, to be used from there in the transportation of freight to Arizona points and eastward, a caravan of forty camels passed through Los Angeles this month.

A couple of fishermen again reported seeing the San Diego sea serpent disporting in the bay.

A record shipment of oranges for the season, 90,000, was sent from Los Angeles County by steamer February 14. The oranges sold wholesale in San Francisco at $35 a thousand.

J. W. Scott, at Santa Monica, Los Angeles County, from the top of a ladder was picking tomatoes off a three-year-old vine twenty-five feet high growing on a lattice against the side of a house.

In Los Angeles City at this time there were practicing eighty-one attorneys and eighty physicians.

A four-mile-and-repeat race for $5,000 was run February 22 on the Bay District track, San Francisco. Owing to the inclemency of the weather only about 5,000 people attended. "Mollie McCarthy" was a 2-to-1 favorite over "Bazaar," an Oregon runner, "Lady Amanda" and four other entries. She rewarded her backers by winning the first heat in 7:48¾ and the second in 7:42½.

BUSINESS FAILURES CAUSE ALARM.

An anti-Chinese political party was organized in San Jose, Santa Clara County. It put a ticket in the field for the municipal election and was, in part, successful. This was the first movement of the kind in the state making a political campaign of the Oriental issue.

The business failures in the interior towns of California and Nevada amounted to about 100 since the first of the year. So alarming had they become to the wholesalers of San Francisco that a meeting was held February 24 to take some action on the situation. It was claimed that only ten percent of them were honest failures in bu ness. A. P. Williams was selected to presi W. W. Montague was the leading spokesman a he detailed the situation as being alarmir Isaac Hecht blamed the condition upon the acti ities of the drummers, who were inducing t interior merchants to buy beyond their abilit to pay when bills became due, and said that t giving of too extensive credit was bringing abo the insolvency of many otherwise good-payi merchants. He asked that employment of t too energetic traveling salesmen be discontinu A committee of fifteen wholesalers was appoint to investigate conditions and to report at a l ture meeting.

Garrzusky, the San Francisco correspondent the "New York Times," in one of his letters t tacked the characters of a number of the pro inent citizens of the Bay City, one of who meeting him upon the street, gave him a sev caning.

The Order of Caucasians was organizing cam throughout the state and held the supreme c campment in Sacramento February 22. Its pu pose was to stop Coolie immigration and eli inate the employment of Chinese cheap lab John Greenwell of Sutter Creek, Amador Cou ty, was elected supreme master and P. S. Dorn of Sacramento constable.

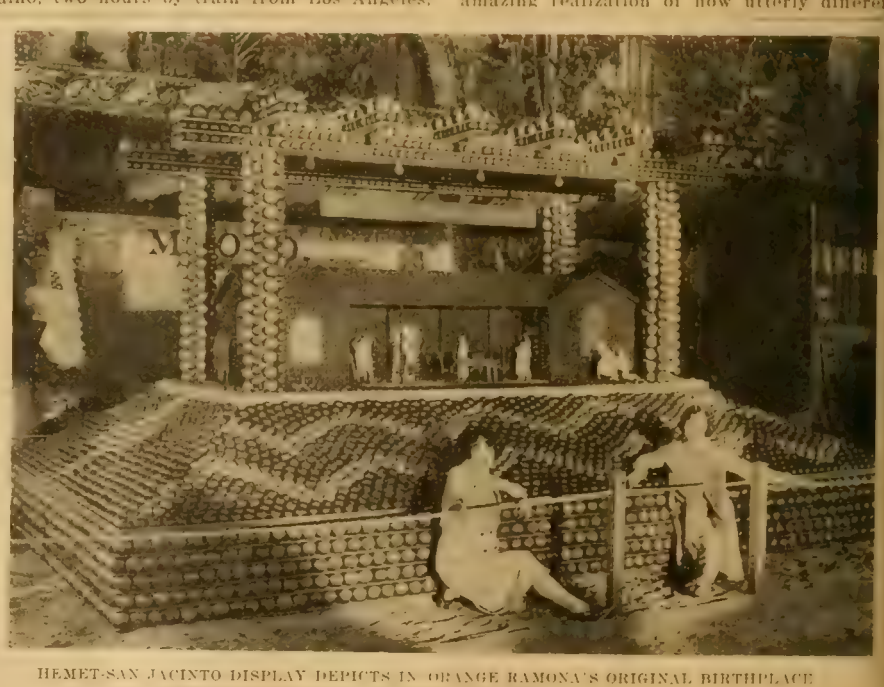
WORLD'S FAIR OF CITRUS FRUIT



E. M. Gore

POETS HAVE SUNG OF THAT SUBTLE season when the "roses are flowering in Picardy." There is utter loveliness, they have intoned to "tulip time in Holland." But as this is written the golden globes are ripening in the cool, green depths of the groves of Southern California; and shortly—during mid-February, to be exact,—it will be orange time in the sun-kissed southland. And then, as has been the case for the last seventeen years, will be produced in the City of San Bernardino, two hours by train from Los Angeles, an epic exposition—a veritable poem in statuary and decorations and music and lights—in honor of this sublime California season; in honor of the Orange.

This epic "World's Fair of Citrus Fruit," as it has been termed, is the coming Seventeenth National Orange Show—a great show whose fame has become classic and world-renowned; truly, California's greatest midwinter event.

The word "midwinter," as used in this connection, is in reality a misnomer. Midwinter—or the "dead of winter"—conjures up in the minds of most persons something harsh and dead and white and cold; frostbitten feet, icy panes, ro ing fires which serve but partially to keep the icy breath of Boreas, locked lakes, storm a sleet and slush. It is idle to say that most p sons know that no such things exist in Southe California's lowland winter-time—that one mu climb the highest of mountains here in order get a glimpse of snow, even when the cold seas elsewhere is at its feiest heights.

Yet it has often been said by winter visito to Southern California that nowhere do th really get the surprise of contrasts—the rea amazing realization of how utterly different this kingdom of the orange—than when t step through the doors of the National Orat Show in San Bernardino, especially if they h just come from some less-favored spot.

So, climb aboard your fast train from the Ea sit in the comfort of its heated observation and watch the snow-drifted fences and the b ren prairies fly by. See them presently turn the paradoxical green of spring, belying the c endar. Notice that the porter is opening windows. Green trees flash by; a breath f pleasant air bears the lilting notes of the me owlark or the mockingbird. The train slows he tune of one long blast from the giant loco-notive's whistle. Streets—lovely avenues paved nd palmed—appear. You are in San Bernar-lino!

You look about as you arrive. Contrasts! There in the distance, a sackcloth purple against he sapphire sky, tower the mountains peaked with high-lying caps of white. Lower in the oothills the purple is graded into a pastel green -the distant blur of forests. Still closer to you seeming even nearer in the brilliant air—are he foothill orange groves, emerald and golden n a seemingly summery sun.

The city itself is ablaze with color and the ayety of carnival time. Flags and gala-colored unting toss in the soft breeze from every pole, r flaunt a merry beckoning from the fronts of tores or soft-tiled, semi-tropical houses. Crowds re there. Crowds of merrymaking people from verywhere—from East and Mid-West and North nd South. The cars throng the streets, and all with their noses pointed in one direction. There s little need even to notice the many signposts which direct "To The Orange Show." You fol-ow the crowd.

At the show grounds, a forty-acre tract owned by the great co-operative and non-profit organi-ation, you will find a splendidly constructed and rtistic edifice—the big permanent home of the National Orange Show. Passing within the gates nd through the main entrance doors, your eyes will be feasted to a most spectacular sight: liter-lly a vision of fruit—of fruit which has been ransformed by the art of decoration into a fairy-and of oranges.

Turreted castles, ancient missions with their uaint bells suspended from arched towers, love-y homes, bridges, palaces—every conceivable tructure of beauty and uniqueness which the ream of America's designers could conceive—will be there. And all will be ablaze with the orgeousness of colored flood lights and scenic ffects; effects such as only Southern California, oasting a colony of artists that create the splen-lors for Hollywood's screen drama settings, ould create.

Such is a general picture of the yearly classic. t is a picture which might do for any year. This ear, specifically, however, the ensemble will car-y out a motif of "Starkist California."

The men in charge of the National Orange Show this year are veterans at the business of iving the public the finest and best that can be btained. Roy H. Mack, general manager, has een with the show organization since its incep-ion. The president for the current season is Arthur J. Brown. Publisher of one of the San Bernardino daily newspapers and a veteran jour-nalist of the West, he is eminently qualified to now the pulse of the public. And this combina-ion of leaders, ably assisted by former execu-ives and members of the board, will for the 1927 exposition of navel oranges and subsidiary itrus fruits produce, it is forecast, the finest National Orange Show America has ever wit-nessed.

"Starkist California"—a setting of striking eauty showing typical California gardens under star-studded sky of blue—is the decorative cheme which has been worked out. And, aug-nenting the beauty of this arrangement of lomed canopy and flower-filled gardens, will be vast panorama of twenty-six huge paintings, ach representing a scene typical of California. The way from San Diego and her beautiful Bal-oa bridge, on the south, to Sacramento's pic-uresque Fort Sutter on the north, will be em-raced in this striking series of paintings, each f which will be illuminated with colored floods, ight and day.

Such will be the beauty of this year's show. And this beauty will be augmented by more prac-ical things. Rack displays of the finest citrus ruits of the season will surround the main fea-ure exhibit department. There will be instruc-ion and information booths for those who raise ranges, or who have a hankering thus to in-rease their pile of worldly wealth. There will e auxiliary show attractions—the great indus-rial and automobile show, and an "Orange Trail" of mardi-gras frolic where merrymakers nay hold high carnival midst the ferris wheels nd barkers' spiels. In other words, a poly-hrome, manifaceted, all-embracing exposition, with King Orange sitting on the throne and sur-ounded by his princes, Sir Grapefruit, Sir Lemon nd lesser knights of the citrus realm.

The coming show, starting February 17, will e a ten-day fiesta—as they say in this Latinized outhland—in which the visitor will be feasted o an exotic spread of "eye and ear entertain-nent."

All right, Mr. Station Master, sound the cry: "All-a-board for San Bernardino—train starts ight-a-way for the Seventeenth National Orange Show!"

SAN FRANCISCO'S APPAREL INDUSTRY

Capen A. Fleming

(MANAGER, INDUSTRIAL DEPARTMENT, SAN FRANCISCO CHAMBER COMMERCE.)

SAN FRANCISCO'S APPAREL INDUSTRY, in all its ramifications, is what is known as a loft industry; that is, the various plants are housed, for the most part, on the upper floors of multi-story buildings usually in the downtown section. The person who is not acquainted with the custom in this respect is inclined to think that industry is always housed in large, isolated factory buildings.

Such a person would indeed be surprised to see the vast amount of industry that is carried on in the loft buildings which line San Francisco's streets. We, of course, have here many of the large segregated factories as well as the loft type, but this latter type is less evident and might be overlooked by the ordinary layman if attention was not drawn to it.

In order to provide better facilities for the apparel industry in San Francisco and to raise its standards, the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, in conjunction with the Federation of Apparel Manufacturers, worked out a plan whereby many of these industries could be housed in a central building which would become the apparel market center of the West. These efforts have resulted in the fine seven-story Apparel Center building, a high-class loft building which will be formally opened on Saturday, February 26. This building will center the industry and dignify it. It will be a central place where the department-store buyers may go. Although some of the apparel industries will not be located in the building, it will nevertheless be a great step toward establishing a definite market center.

The type of our loft apparel industry to be considered here is that of men's hats, caps and gloves.

Men's felt hats, such as almost all men wear every day, are made here in five different factories, but the felt itself is not made in the West; that is, the fur felt of which hats are made. Wool felt is made at Alhambra, California, this being used in making pennants, pads, etc.

Although the hat bodies are made only in the West, a word about how the fur felt is made may be apropos. The fur of Australian and Belgian rabbits is used. This is blown about under a hood in the center of which revolves rapidly a finely perforated round-topped cone about four feet high. The draft of air which is stirring the fur within the hood is sucked through the perforations of the cone, which is kept continually wet. As the air is drawn through, the fur is drawn with it as far as the wet wall of the cone and shrunk by being dipped time and again in boiling water until the exact size has been obtained, the shrinking causing the minute barbs of the fur to mesh. These felt bodies, although dyed to the desired shade, are very seedy looking articles, but they are now ready for the San Francisco hat manufacturer to work up into fine looking street or dress hats.

In this manufacture of hats, the felt body is first stretched very tightly over a block of the style and size of the finished hat, the felt being steamed to aid in the stretching. The hat crown is finished before the brim is given attention. As the felt of the crown is stretched tightly against the wooden block, which is the same shape as the finished hat before it is creased, it is clamped on a machine which rubs the felt with fine sandpaper and, ingeniously imitating the movements of the human hand, gives the felt a soft, even finish. Next the block carrying the hat is clamped on to an electric ironing machine, and between the movements of the hat and the electric iron the crown is ironed.

The hat brim must of necessity be stiffer than the crown, and, although it is a part of the single piece of felt making up the hat, it is treated separately, being baked in a hot oval iron form of the same shape as the finished brim. Following the baking, the brim is sand-papered and another machine curls the edge, after which the binding, lining, leather band, ribbon band, etc., are added, the hat going now for the final flanging, or shaping of the brim, which is done by clamping the brim tightly over a form with an ironing cloth drawn tightly over the felt. The hat is brimside up, the crown being suspended for protection in the cancave receptacle. The cloth then is dampened for ironing. A hand iron is run over the curved brim surface, and the hat, still in the form covered by the cloth, is placed under a heavy hot sandbag for a few minutes to secure permanency of shape for the brim, after which it is ironed again, when the hat is ready for the merchant's shelf.

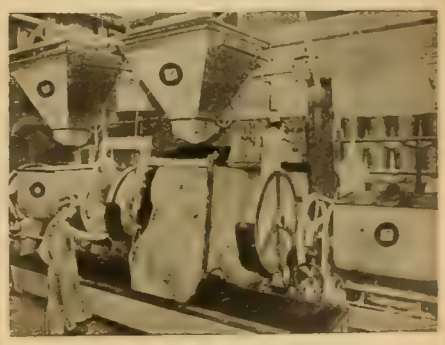
In addition to the ordinary street hats and derbies, many cowboy and highly festive rodeo hats are made here in San Francisco's hat factories.

Besides the five hat factories, there are twenty-one others making cloth hats and caps for men and children, the output including uniform hats and caps of all kinds. By a cloth cap, is, of course, meant the ordinary street cap, turned out either as a one-piece or an eight-piece cap. The quilted cloth hat is made of various shades, being closely stitched to give body. Just at present this style of hat is being manufactured in considerable volume for children. Here, in our twenty-one cap factories, we find the many shapes and styles of men's caps and children's headgear which are exhibited on shelves and under the glass showcases of our retail stores.

But besides these, one or two of our San Francisco factories make all types of uniform caps, such as those so commonly seen worn by porters, conductors, brakemen, station hands, milk deliverymen and oil station employees, as well as lodge and fraternal hats and caps, class caps for schools, etc. If it is the liveried chauffeur or the lad coming home from school with his "beanie" cap, the cap of either may well remind you of the fundamental industrial payroll of San Francisco, for both are made here, or could have been, and it is the payroll paid out to make these articles, and many others, which gives the mass of San Franciscans their staple purchasing power with which to make their purchases at the stores, to buy their tickets at the theatres, to support the churches, to aid the community chest, to pay their taxes, to deposit their savings in our banks, and, in short, to make a prosperous San Francisco.

And our liveried chauffeur wears driving gloves made in San Francisco. The men occupants of the car may also wear fine dress gloves made here in one of our six glove factories. In other words, all six of our glove factories make work gloves and fine driving gloves. In addition, one of them turns out dress gloves, which are sold throughout the Western states.



Practically all women's gloves, however, are imported, the fabric gloves being made almost exclusively in or around Chemnitz, Germany, while the fine suede and kid gloves come from France and Germany. In fact, one of our San Francisco importers of gloves owns a large German glove factory, the entire output being shipped to this country with San Francisco as headquarters. In this country, Gloversville and Johnstown, New York, are the large glove-making centers.

Goat leather is used for the finer men's gloves turned out in San Francisco, while horse and cow hide are used in making work gloves. In their manufacture, the leather is first stretched, then cut somewhat into glove shape by dies, and finally sewed together into the finished article. Gloves are usually made wrong side out, then turned and pressed on a four-fingered hot iron. The glove fingers are pulled snugly over this form for a few seconds, as over the fingers of one's hand. Another form likewise presses the thumb.

San Francisco is probably best known for its high-class welted driving gloves, which are in demand all over the Western states, although we have large production in the various grades of work gloves. It is estimated that San Francisco makes and ships more gloves than any other Western city.

In this connection, there is one unique industry here which is of world-wide significance in its line, and that is our boxing glove manufacturer. This concern has, for the past thirty years, made the boxing gloves for every championship fight staged, the latest important one being the Dempsey-Tunney bout. Orders come for these San Francisco-made boxing gloves from all over the world. In addition to making gloves for the championship matches, this manufacturer makes them for high-school and university gymnasium work. Handball gloves are also made in these workrooms. The leather for both the boxing and other types of gloves is sheep skin, largely tanned locally.

EXCELLENT SHOWING.

A compilation of financial statements of American cities, prepared by the Bureau of Census and just recently made public by the Federal Department of Commerce, has this to say regarding San Francisco's receipts and expenditures:

"The payments for maintenance and operation of the general departments of San Francisco for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1926, amounted to $24,568,522, or $43.72 percapita. In 1925 the comparative percapita for maintenance and operation of general departments was $38.01 and for 1918 $24.64.

"The departments showing the largest increases in 1926 for cost of maintenance and operation were police, fire and school. Payments for the operation of public-service enterprises (waterworks, electric light and power system, auditorium and street railway) amounted to $2,951,795; interest on debt $3,689,720 and outlays for permanent improvements, including those for public-service enterprises, $13,014,598. The total payments, therefore, for expenses of general departments and public-service enterprises, interest and outlays, were $44,224,635.

"The total revenue receipts of San Francisco for 1926 were $44,901,847, or $79.90 percapita. This was $13,691,810 more than the total payments of the year, exclusive of the payments for permanent improvements, and $677,212 more than the total payments including those for permanent improvements.

"Property taxes represented 66.1 percent of the total revenue for 1926, 67.7 percent for 1925 and 63.8 percent for 1918. The increase in the amount of property taxes collected was 87.1 percent from 1918 to 1925 and 23.6 percent from 1925 to 1926. The percapita property taxes were $52.85 in 1926, $43.47 in 1925 and $26.32 in 1918.

"Earnings of public-service enterprises operated by the city represented 12 percent of the total revenue for 1926, 9.7 percent for 1925 and 12 percent for 1918.

"The net indebtedness of San Francisco on June 30, 1926, was $80,701,666, or $143.60 percapita. In 1925 the percapita debt was $138.47 and in 1918 $88.65. The increase in net debt reported for 1926 was due, principally, to bond issues for schools and water-supply system.

"For 1926 the assessed valuation of property in San Francisco subject to advalorem taxes for city corporation was $733,822,980. The levy for all purposes for 1926 was $30,306,889, or $53.93 percapita. The percapita tax levy was $42.94 in 1925 and $26.76 in 1918."

BRIGHT WITH PROMISE.

Bright hopes for California motordom during 1927 were expressed January 22 by Burton A. Towne of Lodi, San Joaquin County, following announcement of his re-election as president of the California State Automobile Association at the annual meeting of the association's board of directors in San Francisco.

"The year before us is bright with promise for motordom," said Towne. "We see on the calendar of 1927 completion of transcontinental highways, continuance of federal aid on construction of inter-state arteries, probable lessening of the national tax burden on the motorist, progress toward better traffic legislation through uniformity in regulations for motorists and pedestrians, and high hopes of solution by the current session of the State Legislature of California's highway financing problem.

"The California State Automobile Association has taken an active part in bringing nearer the realization of these objectives of motorists and will continue to do so. The present year holds high hope of marking an even brighter chapter in the history of California motordom."

ARRANGING BIG INITIATION.

The San Francisco Extension of the Order Committee, consisting of delegates from the twenty-seven local Native Son Parlors, met in Native Sons Building January 14 with nearly every Parlor represented. Officers of the committee are: Frank Biederman (Stanford No. 76), chairman; F. R. Hauck (Alcalde No. 154), vice-chairman; Harold J. Regan (South San Francisco No. 157), secretary; Charles A. Koenig (Golden Gate No. 29), treasurer; Virgil Orengo (Rincon No. 72), sergeant-at-arms.

As one of the objects of this committee is to increase the membership, it was decided to have a class initiation, in honor of Grand President Hilliard E. Welch, in Native Sons Building Saturday evening, April 2. A quota of five percent was determined on, which will assure a class of approximately 500. The ritual team for the occasion will be selected from among the present officers of the San Francisco Parlors, and James F. Stanley, a ritual authority, was delegated to visit each Parlor and make the selections.

Many other important matters were discussed, among them athletics, and a committee was appointed to consider them and to report, with recommendations, at the next meeting.

PAST PRESIDENT REMEMBERED.

Officers of South San Francisco Parlor No. 157 N.S.G.W. were installed January 19 by D.D.G.P. I. M. Peckham, Daniel Nilan becoming president. Six candidates were initiated by the new officers, who were highly complimented for the very efficient manner in which they conducted the ceremonies. In an eloquent address in which he extoled the services of George J. Nilan, George Schonfeld presented to him, on behalf of South San Francisco, a past president's emblem. Nilan expressed his pleasure at receiving the gift and at the conclusion of his remarks was presented by Past President Henry Delagnes, for Mrs. George Schonfeld, Mrs. Henry Delagnes and Mrs. Herman Dratz, with a basket of beautiful flowers.

Two hundred enjoyed the banquet which followed the meeting. A splendid entertainment, arranged for by George J. Nilan, was presented. Addresses were made by D.D.G.P. Peckham, George Schaefer and George Schonfeld of Olympus Parlor No. 189, Dr. M. O. Squires, President Daniel Nilan. With Organist Lionel R. Smith at the piano, songs were rendered by Carl Prignitz, Eddie Averdieck, Dr. M. O. Squires, Lloyd Dornell, John Sheerin, Ted Andrus, "Bill" Hyland, George Nilan.

LARGE CLASS INITIATED.

Officers of Stanford Parlor No. 76 N.S.G.W. were installed January 11 by D.D.G.P. Harmon D. Skillin, Arthur T. Poheim becoming president. A large class of candidates were initiated. Walter McGovern was the speaker of the evening and Frank Morris had charge of the entertainment and refreshments.

BUSY WITH ATHLETICS.

January was a very busy month for Niantic Parlor No. 105 N.S.G.W., insofar as its activities were concerned. In the athletic field teams representing the Parlor in baseball and basketball made enviable records. In the Native Sons' baseball league Niantic's team is tied for second place and the outlook is bright for it to win the pennant. The basketball team, which made several trips out of town, has won nine and lost five games; it is entered in the city series, which league commences play next month.

Casper P. Hare of Niantic led a party of San Francisco Native Sons to Columbia, Tuolumne County, January 30 to officiate at the dedication of a bronze tablet on the original office of Wells-Fargo Company in that town. The ceremonies were held under the auspices of Columbia Parlor No. 258 N.S.G.W. C. W. Banta of Stanford Parlor No. 76 N.S.G.W. presented the plaque on be-

POPULAR NATIVE SON SHOWERED.

Harmon Skillin, assistant district attorney of San Francisco, was installed as first vice-president of Castro Parlor No. 232 N.S.G.W. January 18 by D.D.G.P. Frank Shea. Prior to the ceremonies the N.S.G.W. Friday Luncheon Club of San Francisco, of which Skillin is a member, gave him a shower, in view of his approaching marriage to Miss Dorothy Whelan, private secretary to District Attorney Matthew Brady.

The articles presented, for personal and household use, are both useful and ornamental and were greatly appreciated by Skillin who, in accepting them, made one of the finest addresses ever delivered at a Native Son gathering. Each article was presented by the donor who, in a clever manner, described its usefulness and gave his reason for presenting it. The following members of the club made presentations: Eugene O'Donnell, Grand Trustee Alfred H. McKnew, George Schonfeld, Harry W. Gaetjen, Charles A. Koenig, James A. Foley, Grand Secretary John T. Regan, C. George Cuthbertson, Dr. William Maison, Michael J. McGovern, Frank M. Buckley.

KIDDIES' HEARTS GLADDENED.

At the annual Christmas tree party of La Estrella Parlor No. 89 N.D.G.W. Santa Claus, impersonated by Emil Boldemann, gladdened the hearts of the seventy-five children present by giving each a gift and a bag of candy. Games were enjoyed by the kiddies, the winners receiving prizes. The beautiful hope-chest, in preparation several months by a committee headed by Past Grand President May C. Boldemann, was awarded Mrs. Phoebe Torpey.

La Estrella's birthday parties are very popular. Each month a party is given to members whose birthdays occur during that month. Birthday greetings are sent to the out-of-town members.

ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATED.

Officers of Golden Gate Parlor No. 158 N.D.G.W. were installed January 10 by D.D.G.P. Marguerite Sullivan and an efficient corps of assistants. Pauline Goetgen was presented with a past president's token and in accepting the gift said that she hoped the new officers would get the same pleasure from doing the work of the Parlor that she did. Refreshments were served.

January 19 the Parlor observed its nineteenth institution with a banquet. There was a large attendance and a good time was enjoyed.

GRAND PRESIDENT VISITS.

Officers of Twin Peaks Parlor No. 185 N.D.G.W. and Twin Peaks Parlor No. 214 N.S.G.W. were jointly installed January 12 at a public function. Addresses were made by Grand Trustee Dr. Frank I. Gonzalez, Prof. George Barron, D.D.G.P. Ruthe McDonald and D.D.G.P. August Sandell. The ceremonies were followed by refreshments and dancing.

Twin Peaks N.D.G.W. was officially visited by Grand President Pearl Lamb January 14. The ritual was exemplified and an interesting address was delivered by Mrs. Lamb. Other speakers were Grand Trustee Mae L. Edwards and D.D.G.P. Elizabeth Muller. The meeting-place was beautifully decorated with greens and poinsettias, while yellow was the keynote of the banquet-room decorations.

Following a month's vacation the drill-team of No. 185 gave an exhibition drill January 29 at the athletic carnival and dance of Twin Peaks N.S.G.W.

MAKE 1927 SAFETY YEAR.

Urging that motorists join in renewed efforts to reduce the toll of street and highway accidents, Percy E. Towne, chairman of the public safety committee of the California State Automobile Association, suggests that this slogan be adopted: "Make 1927 the Great Safety Year."

The record of 123 motor vehicle fatalities in San Francisco during the past year, an annual toll equaled only by 1922, was cited by him as one of the evidences of the need of continued community activity in public-safety work.

"We should make 1927 the great safety year, even if we fall short of the records we are creating in other fields of endeavor," Towne declares, "and while the automobile association appeals primarily to motorists to aid in reduction of fatalities and accidents, every element in every community should make safety a common cause.

"There is always danger that we may depend too much on legislation and forget the personal equation and the personal responsibility which means so much in safe driving by motorists and in safe walking by pedestrians. If every car owner and every pedestrian were to bring personal behavior up to the standard of excellence to which manufacturers have brought motor cars, our problem would be more than half solved. We need model motorists and model pedestrians just as much as we need safe brakes, safe headlights and safe highways."

WOMAN MAKES CONVINCING PLEA.

At Sacramento February 26 the Eighth street sewer blew up with an explosion of sewer-gas that was heard over the entire city. The sewer for a distance of four blocks was heaved to the surface and about 1,000 feet of it was destroyed.

A forged check for $10,700 was cashed by the Nevada Bank in San Francisco February 1 and was not discovered as such until a fortnight later, when the utterer of it had departed from the state. It caused much excitement in financial circles.

A quack doctor calling himself "Dr. Cornbloom" attained notoriety and arrest in San Francisco by treating a patient for deafness by dropping crotton oil in his ear. While out of jail, on bail, he strolled into the mining stock board room just at the close of a session February 2. A broker, espying him, escorted him to the center of the ring of brokers and there he was first received by having his plug hat knocked down over his ears and then, when a broomstick had been obtained, he was ridden around and around the room amid the great hilarity of the brokers who, finally and unceremoniously, kicked him out of the room.

C. L. Miner, editor of the Dixon, Solano County, "Dispatch," in an article attacked the ability of the principal of the high-school, named Boggs. The latter, with a rawhide whip, chastised the editor in the postoffice February 4 by giving him a severe trouncing.

At the session of the State Supreme Court held in San Francisco February 15 Jeanette Foster, the plaintiff in a suit to settle the title to 200 acres of land in Alameda County, to the surprise of the judges and attorneys present came forward and announced that she would argue her own case. She made a powerful and convincing plea. She was about 50 years of age and was a lecturer of some note.

Dr. Simms was delivering a lecture in a San Luis Obispo hall the evening of February 7 when a lamp exploded and set fire to the stage furnishings. The audience stampeded and made their exit without serious injury to anyone. The doctor, however, was severely burned in bravely extinguishing the flames.

Mendel Mayer and Tom Rowan, two well-known Los Angeles citizens, won $5,000 in a Havana lottery and enlivened the town with a celebration of their good luck. This was the fourth time Mayer had won, but his former winnings were of small prizes.

HANFORD COMES UPON MAP.

Boys in Los Angeles were lassooing and delivering to the pound every untagged dog they could find, earning 10c a dog. It was claimed that some of the boys were removing the license tags and delivering dogs to the pound that were immune. The parents of many of the boys were venting their indignation at the temptation offered by the poundmaster.

Miners employed in the hydraulic mines at Timbuctoo, Sucker Flat and Smartsville struck February 1 against a reduction in pay. A demonstration was made by 175 of them in a parade, headed by a brass band, through those mining towns. It was peaceable, but talkative.

Quincy, Plumas County, experienced a lively earthquake shock February 28.

A whale fifty feet long, washed ashore dead February 1 on a beach in Sonoma County, gave the ranchers for miles around a supply of oil.

C. H. Hoffman, an extensive farmer of Merced County, completed the largest barn in the state. It was 150 by 100 feet.

STOCKTON SHIP CHANNEL MERITS NATIONWIDE ATTENTION

G. L. Fox

(INDUSTRIAL ENGINEER, STOCKTON CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

FORMULATIVE WORK INITIATED BY Stockton citizens and encouraged through half a century in behalf of a deep water ship channel to this city nears its culmination. The second—construction—period in the project's history approaches and already preparations are in order for the third—operation.

The proposal that a deep water port be created at the hub of California's great central valley is not based on sentiment or biased theory, but on the positive fundamental fact that transportation by deep water vessels is cheaper than by any other practical means. The development of a port at Stockton will eliminate costly hauls on thousands of tons of merchandise, farm products and materials moving annually between points of the world and the Sacramento-San Joaquin Valleys and northern Nevada. In addition, it will stimulate new industries and commerce which otherwise would not be practical.

Scores of communities will be benefited, and not one will be negatively influenced.

PRESENT HEAD OF NAVIGATION AT STOCKTON.

While most of the activity in connection with the project has been concentrated at Stockton, its influence will be far more than local. Citizens throughout the length and breadth of the Golden State will find it worthwhile to familiarize themselves with the project, what it entails and what its significance will be. No other single public undertaking in California has been of so much importance to as wide an area as will benefit through the Stockton ship channel.

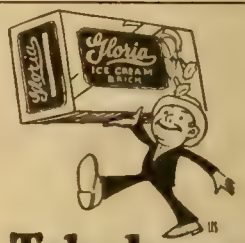
At present, a review of the project's formulative stage and a few facts regarding construction will prepare the foundation for future considerations.

CONCEIVED 56 YEARS AGO.

In 1871 a group of Stockton citizens had a survey made as to the feasibility of improving the San Joaquin River and Stockton Channel to accommodate deep water vessels. The San Joaquin River connects Stockton Channel with Suisun, San Pablo and San Francisco Bays, the Golden Gate and eventually the Pacific Ocean. By water, Stockton is about 100 miles from the Golden Gate.

The group considered founding a private corporation to undertake the work, and while the report was favorable little was accomplished. The Manchester ship canal in England, for example, was sponsored by a chartered company and has proved a worthwhile investment.

Due to the benefits to be derived by the public, the Federal Government during 1876 made its first appropriation in behalf of the San Joaquin River and Stockton Channel, which extends into the heart of the city. Since that time the United States and Stockton have expended something over $1,700,000 in the improvement of these waterways and harbor facilities. The channel now has a minimum depth of nine feet and a minimum width of 200 feet, and hundreds of thousands of tons of miscellaneous freight pass through long transit sheds and over extensive wharves at Stockton annually.



U. S. CONTROLS STREAMS.

Through the War Department, the Federal Government controls all navigable waterways in the United States. In this connection, under the secretary of war come the chief of engineers, the board of engineers for rivers and harbors, a division engineer and a district engineer. Stockton is in the Second District of the Pacific Division.

Progress on the Stockton deep water project has been made with congressional support through this line organization, although the personnel involved has changed a number of times during the project's history.

After the Federal Government made its initial appropriation for the river and channel, these waterways were given constant attention and steps taken in 1906, 1908 and 1910 resulted in authorization of the nine-foot channel, the people of Stockton constantly urging deeper water.

In 1919 the formulative work which is now approaching a conclusion was initiated and brought about visits to Stockton by the board of engineers, congressional committees and other influential parties. The nine-foot project kept the San Joaquin River and Stockton Channel before the division and district engineers and their interest has been important.

SURVEY AUTHORIZED.

On July 27, 1916, as a result of work by Congressman Charles F. Curry and others, Congress passed a river and harbor act authorizing a preliminary examination and survey, respectively, of the San Joaquin River and Stockton Channel with a view to their improvement to accommodate deep water vessels.

Pursuant to this act, army engineers commenced studies of the physical problems involved and the Stockton Chamber of Commerce compiled various tonnage data. A number of hearings were held and under date of March 17, 1919, Col. L. H. Rand, district engineer, submitted a report on the project to the chief of engineers.

On June 24, 1919, a delegation of Stockton citizens appeared at a hearing in Washington. Due to various factors some delay was then experienced, although army engineers visited Stockton in connection with the project in 1920. Dated August 25, 1921, a detailed report on engineering aspects of the proposed improvements was submitted by Major U. S. Grant III, district engineer, and a party of engineers again visited Stockton in 1924.

Shortly following this 1924 visit, August 19, 1924, was designated as the date for a hearing before the board of engineers, when evidence from representatives of the city would be received.

ECONOMIC SURVEY MADE.

Preparatory to this hearing, a comprehensive survey to show the need and prospective business for a deep water channel and port was sponsored by the City of Stockton with the co-operation of the Stockton Chamber of Commerce. The report of this survey was exceedingly favorable and with testimony by representative Stockton citizens was submitted to the board of engineers at the hearing in Washington on August 19th.

Immediately subsequent to this hearing, a report pertaining to the prospective required depth of the channel was submitted in behalf of the city. On October 25 and November 18, 1924, Major Grant submitted supplementary reports and then the entire project was carefully analyzed by the board of engineers.

This study of the data at hand resulted in a report to the chief of engineers, dated December 9, 1924, by Brigadier-General Edgar Jadwin, senior member of the board, favoring the project with various recommendations as to physical characteristics, etc.

Under date of January 6, 1925, Major-General H. Taylor, chief of engineers, recommended the project to the secretary of war who, in turn, submitted it to the speaker of the House of Representatives. The matter was referred to the committee on rivers and harbors.

STOCKTON VOTES BONDS.

The entire proceeding had been made contingent on the people of Stockton providing funds for a portion of the work. To provide the necessary money, a bond election was held on April 21, 1925, when bonds in the sum of $3,000,000 were authorized by the overwhelming vote of more than 12 to 1.

The committee on rivers and harbors some time later fixed January 14, 1926, as the date for a hearing on the project, and on January 18 and 19, 1926, received evidence and testimony from a delegation of Stockton citizens in Washington.

The committee approved the project and reported favorably, causing its inclusion in House Bill No. 11616, known as the River and Harbor Bill. The House passed this measure on June 4, 1926, and the Senate voted its approval with certain amendments on December 21, 1926. The bill has come out of conference successfully and now awaits the president's signature.

After the president signs the bill, the project will go into the active files of the War Department and, according to normal procedure, an item for it will be included in the department's next omnibus appropriation bill, which would make federal funds available early in 1928.

An appropriation by the Federal Government will warrant sale of Stockton's bonds and actual construction will begin. This would be the normal procedure, and there is only a remote possibility that work might commence before 1928.

ESTIMATED COSTS.

The total cost of the project will be something over five million dollars. The federal bill provides for $2,407,500, of which $1,307,500 will be furnished for dredging and levees. The balance will be used for dredges if necessary and the work is not let by contract.

Of Stockton's $3,000,000, $1,307,500 will be devoted to dredging and levees and the balance to rights of way, spoilage disposal areas and terminal facilities. Large acreages have already been secured by the city for deep water purposes.

The State of California is being asked to provide $419,000 toward the acquisition of rights of way, as the project will benefit the state as a whole; the channel improvement will be helpful in solving reclamation problems; and the state has various rights in all streams.

It has been recommended that the Federal Government's initial appropriation be fixed at $950,000 and that the remainder be furnished in three approximately equal annual installments. This would indicate that the government plans total completion of the project within four years after initiation. However, vessels carrying lumber and other commodities will undoubtedly begin using the channel within six months or a year after work is commenced.

TO MOVE BIG YARDAGE.

In a general way, the ship channel will follow the present course of the San Joaquin River and Stockton Channel from deep water in Suisun Bay. It will have a minimum depth of twenty-six feet and a minimum bottom width of one hundred feet. The levees will be set back 230 feet from the center line of the stream, and the right of way will be 750 feet wide. Movement of over 21,000,000 cubic yards of material will be necessitated. This is enough material to make a pile two yards high and two yards wide reaching from Stockton to New York City. In other words, it is enough material to cover the entire City of Stockton to a depth of over twenty-seven inches.

Terminal improvements between the present head of navigation and the San Joaquin River will include 800 linear feet of transit sheds, a total of 1,200 feet of wharves and adequate turning and passing basins. Facilities will be provided for the handling of a minimum of 1,000,000 tons of freight annually.

LARGE SAVING IN VIEW.

A comprehensive and careful survey made in connection with the project showed that over $462,000 could have been saved on 513,000 tons of freight moving between valley points and ports of the world during a representative year. With these figures as bases, conservative estimates which have been affirmed by War Department engineers indicate that shortly after its completion and initial operation, 1,000,000 tons of freight, with a $900,000 reduction in annual freight charges, will be moving through Port Stockton. How many other $5,000,000 investments bring such returns to the general public?

Barley will be the principal initial outbound commodity and lumber, inbound. In the survey, the following products were considered as prospective cargo:

Inbound — Agricultural implements, cereals, chemicals, groceries, hardware, hides, iron and steel, lumber, pipe, paper, wood pulp and scrap paper.

Outbound—Almonds, barley, beans, boxboard, canned goods, copper, dried fruits, fertilizer, fire brick, cereals, harvesters, hay, leather, milk and milk products, pencil slats, wallboard, potatoes and onions, timber and wool.

Other commodities which will undoubtedly be important factors in the development of Port Stockton are fresh fruits, grape products, cotton and petroleum, and already interested parties are giving these subjects attention.

The movement of a million tons of freight between world ports and interior California points under new conditions and through Stockton will cause many fundamental changes in industrial and commercial practices throughout Northern

DELTA INDIANS

DETAILED INFORMATION AS TO THE population and village sites of the Indians of the Sacramento and San Joaquin Rivers delta districts during the Spanish regime over a hundred years ago has been collected from old documents in the possession of the University of California and published in bulletin form by W. Egenhoff Schenck, research associate.

The documents from which he worked are chiefly preserved in the form of diaries of Spanish priests who accompanied various expeditions, either punitive or of exploration, into the land of the delta Indian villages, from the year 1772 until the influx of Whites in 1849. Practically all of these documents are now in the possession of the university Bancroft Library either in original manuscript or in copy.

From these sources, Schenck found that there were probably as many as fifty villages along the main waterways, at the head of Suisun Bay and in the lower reaches of the Sacramento and the San Joaquin with an average population of 200 each. The total population of the district, he estimates, was between 3,000 and 15,000, as a minimum and a maximum.

Some idea of the rapid extermination of these peoples is given by Schenck, who says: "Whatever the original population, it probably suffered continuous reduction through the operations of the missions, and in 1833 there must have been an enormous decrease. Subsequently this decrease continued until in 1852 the census records 379 Indians in San Joaquin County (nearly equivalent to the Delta area). By 1860 the population was given as 41, and by 1870 as 5."

Schenck states that the concentration of the natives on the Delta lands was probably influenced by proximity to both water and the hilly dark country, offering radically different attractions in the way of streams, game and vegetable foods. As proof of this he cites the fact that scarcely any record of Indians on the western bank of the San Joaquin can be found, while they were plentiful on the east side and on both sides of the Sacramento, whence access could be had to more or less hilly back country.

In the matter of food supplies, Schenck says: "The early accounts make few direct statements as to native food supplies. Shell-heaps near Carquinez Strait are mentioned, also the gathering of seeds, the catching of salmon and the eating of 'torous,' a kind of pounded root. But the immense herds of deer, elk and antelope are spoken of a number of times, and later writers are astonished at the superabundance of these animals and of water fowl. It is probably impossible for us to conceive the quantity of such game and the ease with which it could be procured. Kotzebue stated that one could ride among the herds of deer without frightening them. Geese and ducks could be knocked over with a stick."

Big Lumber Cut—During 1926 California lumber companies cut 1,973,000,000 board-feet, valued at approximately $60,000,000. The main variety of timber cut was white-pine; redwood came next, followed by sugar-pine. Twenty-five thousand men were employed in the industry.

PASADENA'S ROSE FETE THRILLS THE NATION

Harry L. Roberts

(MANAGER, PUBLICITY DEPARTMENT,
PASADENA CHAMBER OF COMMERCE AND CIVIC ASSOCIATION.)

IN TWENTY MILLION HOMES THROUGHout the East and Middle West people hovered over their steam radiators on the afternoon of New Year's Day, waiting for a voice that was soon to come to them from far-off California. The newspapers had said that the transmission of this voice over telephone wires and through the ether waves would constitute the greatest feat in the history of radio broadcasting. The voice would be carried from California to New York and thence to all parts of the East over 23,000 miles of telephone lines. At important points along this gigantic network of telephone lines skilled engineers—250 of them, all told,—would be stationed to keep the circuit open and the voice moving on to its destinations. After leaving the telephone wires the voice would be sent through the air from the tall towers of thirty powerful radio stations. It would be made available, in loud speaker volume, to practically every radio receiving set, no matter how small, in the entire country.

It was the most ambitious feat that radio had yet attempted. Accordingly, everybody who owned a radio set, or could get near a set, was waiting. The audience, according to radio men, unquestionably was the largest ever assembled for any event since time began.

PASADENA ROSE BOWL CROWD AT STANFORD ALABAMA FOOTBALL GAME

And then the voice came.

"This is the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, California," it said, and it was as clear and distinct as though it were originating in a broadcast studio a few miles away. "We are broadcasting the football game between Stanford University and the University of Alabama," the voice continued. "But I do not want to talk about football. It simply is difficult to get my thoughts onto football at all.

"We are out here in this most delightful Arroyo Seco, a valley dominated by the most beautiful mountain ranges in California, near Pasadena. This is the thirty-eighth annual Pasadena Tournament of Roses. It strikes me that Pasadena, Los Angeles and these other cities really need no tournament of roses. They seem to be garden spots of roses and other beautiful things all the time.

"This afternoon is warm, and I am sitting here in my shirt sleeves, a nice breeze coming into the stadium from behind me. The sun is shining and is keeping me nice and warm. There is just enough haze to make the mountains in the distance even more beautiful than they usually are.

"What a day it is! A beautiful spring afternoon. I can't blame these people for bragging about their weather. My, the colors! It almost seems that every girl in the world must be down here. It looks like more girls than men. Practically everybody that amounts to anything in the movie world is here. You see more beautiful women per square foot than I ever saw before to the square mile. But I must talk about football."

The voice then proceeded to talk about football. But the stenographic report of the broadcast reveals that the voice quite frequently got off the subject of football and onto such subjects as weather and scenery. For instance, towards the end of the game:

"About five minutes left of the game. The sun is setting over these mountains, and, oh, man, what colors—purple, lavender and every other color of the rainbow. If anybody ever put some of these colors down on canvas, you would think they were crazy. Now the darkness is coming on. The colors are getting more beautiful. But the game is going on, and I must get back to football. All right, Stanford's ball, second down"—

Were the millions of listeners thrilled? If we may judge from the floods of letters that have been pouring into California during the last month, they certainly were. The All-Year Club of Southern California and the Pasadena Chamber of Commerce have been literally inundated with letters from people who heard the broadcast.

But what thrilled them? Was it the thought of listening to a voice that was coming all the way across the continent? Was it the thrill of knowing that the same voice was being heard at the same time by countless millions of persons? Or was it the exciting moments of the game?

As a matter of fact, it was none of these. What the letters talk about is the climate, the scenery, the marvel of roses on New Year's Day. It seems that the greater part of the East had a heavy fall of snow during the night preceding New Year's Day. While the millions sat listening to the voice from California, a cold, raw wind was blowing outside, and snow was piled in drifts. The voice told them that its owner was sitting in his shirt sleeves, with a brilliant sun shining overhead, a balmy breeze blowing from behind.

The effect of the contrast undoubtedly was made more real by the fact that almost all the listeners knew the voice that was talking to them from California. They had heard the voice many, many times, and they felt that it belonged to someone whom they knew intimately. The man at the microphone was Graham McNamee, famous announcer on the staff of WEAF, New York, who was sent to Pasadena especially for the occasion. McNamee announces regularly over the National Broadcasting Company's huge chain of stations throughout the Middle West and East. He has reported most every big event in the East during recent years for the WEAF chain of stations. He is known to every owner of a radio set in the East and to many in the West.

The letters that have been coming in are from all parts of the country. Let us just quote briefly from one written by a New York man who is an executive in one of the country's largest advertising agencies.

"At five o'clock, Eastern standard time," he wrote, "it seemed that all the radio stations in Christendom started broadcasting from the Rose Bowl. They say twenty million people listened to the proceedings, but I think the estimate a bit conservative. I have yet to meet anyone who didn't listen in, and all those who have been to California are aching to go back, and those who haven't been to California are raring to go. It was particularly effective because we had a snow storm the night before, and the air was cold and raw. It made one's mouth water to hear Graham describe the warm sun and mild air and the purple haze."

For brevity and conciseness, a letter written to the Pasadena Chamber of Commerce by a man in Bloomington, Illinois, undoubtedly takes the prize, although the sentiment it expresses is very similar to that voiced by many others.

"Heard the scrimmage out in your Rose Bowl while I sat freezing," the Bloomington man wrote, "and if your country is half as beautiful as the announcer said it was, move over, for another guy's coming out." That was all, but it was to the point.

The broadcast marked the first time that a radio program originating on the Pacific Coast had been carried East over telephone lines and re-broadcast. The event was staged by the National Broadcasting Company, and this company and its co-operating stations bore the entire cost, which is said to have been around $30,000. The broadcast was suggested by Earle C. Anthony, president of the National Association of Broadcasters and owner of KFI, Los Angeles. KFI served as the originating station for the big hook-up.

The story of the game was carried from KFI in Los Angeles over 4,000 miles of wire, via Tucson, El Paso, Dallas, Saint Louis and Pittsburg, to WEAF and WJZ in New York. From WEAF it went out over 10,000 miles of wire to the stations in the big "red chain," and from WJZ over 3,000 miles of wire to the stations in the "blue chain." For emergency use and interstation communications, 5,500 miles of lines were utilized.

(ASSISTANT SECRETARY, HOLLYWOOD CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

LED BY THE MOTION-PICTURE INDUSTRY, every industrial, commercial and civic element in Hollywood showed an increased activity in 1926 over operations in 1925. The big industry, that of making motion pictures, will show an increase of $60,000,000 at least, according to authorities reporting to the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce. Film output last year will total $226,000,000, while in 1925 the sum was $165,000,000.

Building permits in the Hollywood area for 1924 were $15,150,437; for 1925, $19,111,441, and for 1926 permits are estimated at $22,000,000, showing a steady increase in growth.

Bank clearings for the same area in 1924 were $319,140,000; in 1925, $321,473,000, and for 1926 are estimated at $375,000,000.

Bank deposits in Hollywood for 1924 were $28,000,000; in 1925, $33,000,000, and estimated for 1926, $40,000,000.

Postal receipts in 1925 amounted to $364,866,75, while the amount approximated $397,500 in 1926.

Until very recently Hollywood was not considered an industrial locality, but in the past two years the community has sprung into industrial importance. A survey conducted by the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce in November 1925 revealed the fact that the manufactured output for that year was approximately $7,000,000. The output for 1926 was at least double that sum, according to the most reliable advices. There were twenty-two manufacturing establishments in 1925, and thirty in 1926.

These figures, submitted by the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce, are descriptive of the progressive strides of Hollywood as a metropolitan center.

Based on information supplied by utility companies operating in Hollywood, there is a population here of from 145,000 to 150,000, an increase over 1925 of at least 15,000.

Further indicating the growth of Hollywood, schools, including the University of California, which is located within the territorial limits of this community, show 2,201 greater enrollment than was recorded in 1925. Then the total pupils and students was 19,771; this year it is 21,972. The university has enrolled 5,929 students this year, as against 5,721 last year. Cramped quarters are said to be retarding expansion very materially at this institution.

Hollywood has forty miles of streetcar line with eight bus lines augmenting transportation facilities. One hundred miles of street paving was completed in the past year, with a like amount scheduled for completion early in 1927, engineering office information indicates. There are a number of limit-height commercial structures in Hollywood, thirty-three banks, fourteen motion-picture houses and two more under construction, eighteen comfortable, modern hotels, two daily newspapers, thirty-nine churches, Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. institutions, sixteen grade, two junior high and two major high schools, eighteen private and parochial schools, one denominational college, one main and four branch libraries, and forty miles of bridal paths.

In the matter of baseball, Hollywood occupies the unique position of being the only suburb of a large city in the country maintaining a class a club, a franchise for which was transferred om Salt Lake a year ago to this place.

The new Hollwood Chamber of Commerce ers a home for all organizations which are rking toward one end—to make Hollywood better place in which to live and work and y. This community delights in enumerating th its populace such people as Carrie Jacobs nd, Charles Wakefield Cadman and hundreds others of that type and character; authors, rgymen, sculptors, journalists, educators, nters, composers, illustrators, musicians and tesmen, all of national and, in some instances, rld repute. To these must be added scores personages eminent in histronic art, both een and on the legitimate stage. Great auth-, great actors, great operatic stars, great play-ights, princes of romance and industry have en attracted to Hollywood and have estab-ned their homes here. In the last issue of 'ho's Who in America" appear seventy names Hollywood celebrities.
A new school every fifty-three hours is the ounding record of Los Angeles, and Holly-od has her full share of educational oppor-nities. A new district starts its development, ew new homes spring up and, "presto change," new school pops up from the ground like a shroom. Twenty public schools within the llywood area offer unexcelled educational fa-ties to thousands of pupils. The University of lifornia, in Hollywood, affords opportunities higher education.
While Hollywood is adding to its population a rate of approximately 20,000 each year, the t authorities estimate its present population 145,000, scattered over a territory of twenty-square miles. Building developments and eet improvements now under way or projected Hollywood represent a total expenditure of arly $25,000,000.

Eastern capital has seriously turned its attention to Hollywood as a safe place in which to invest its money, for with all its charm and beauty has come a great material prosperity and growth.
Behind Hollywood is Cahuenga Pass, leading directly to the great San Fernando Valley, a land rich in promise already rapidly filling with homes. To the west to the sea, miles of beautifully rolling hills, already green with the life-giving water brought from the Owens River 300 miles away, are rapidly being built up with handsome residences.
From the mountains to the sea, this garden spot of America is rapidly filling with the freest, happiest people in the world.

Hanford, Kings County, came upon the map as a new and growing railroad town. A dozen buildings were going up on the townsite.
Marysville, Yuba County, was planting orange trees along its streets for shade and to advertise a semi-tropical climate.
A shipment of 140 boxes of dead Chinamen's bones was made from interior California points to go to China by steamer February 28.
Frank Wolf and Wm. Pendleton, two Downey, Los Angeles County, nimrods went on a hunt to Kern County and vicinity. They returned with eight deer and seventeen antelope.
A hunter named Walpole went after deer in Lassen County and came unexpectedly upon a grizzly bear at which he immediately fired, and wounded. The bear made for him and before he could reload his gun was upon him. Walpole hit it on the head with the butt of his rifle just as the grizzly hit him with its paw on his shoulder, breaking it and knocking him twenty feet. Regaining a standing position he drew his knife as the bear grasped him in a hug that rendered him breathless and unconscious, and, before dropping, thrust the knife up to the hilt into the grizzly's chest. He was found in a disabled condition a few hours later by a succoring hunter and the grizzly lay dead a few rods away.
The stage from Sonora, Tuolumne County, to Milton February 24 was held up by a lone highwayman. The express box yielding nothing of value he robbed the passengers of several hundred dollars.
During the first week of February there were in San Francisco thirty-two deaths of children from diptheria and eighteen deaths of adults from smallpox. These epidemics seemed to be on the increase.

HANDSOMEST MAN DIES.

Master Willie Brown, who was publicly known as the boy orator of the Pacific Coast, died February 1 in San Francisco. He had a remarkable memory and since he was 5 years old a poem or quotation read once to him could always afterward be recited with fidelity to the text. He could quote from many authors. He had never attended school, although 8 years and 3 months old. His precocious intellectuality and oratorical powers were a wonder to the thousands who heard him. His voice was unusually strong and with his wonderful power of modulation, as well as his prepossessing appearance, made him a favorite entertainer with the people of the Pacific Coast. He appeared in public on numerous occasions. His parents were the Hon. L. A. Brown and Augusta Brown, M.D.
Levi Rosener, ex-assessor of San Francisco and a prominent and popular Democratic politician, died February 9. He was numbered among the handsomest men of that city. In feature and physique he was perfect, and was an immaculate dresser.
John Wilson, the oldest member of the San Francisco bar, died February 2.
J .A. Ammerman, prominent in state politics as a Republican campaigner and filling the position of superintendent of railway mail service, died in San Leandro, Alameda County, February 14.
Suicides continued to prevail with the astonishing frequency of an average of one a day.

LONG BEACH SKYLINE—SIGNAL HILL IN BACKGROUND

WHAT LONG BEACH OFFERS

Olin S. Proctor, D. D. S.

(LONG BEACH CHAMBER OF COMMERCE PUBLICITY DEPARTMENT.)

CALIFORNIANS HAVE AN EXTENDED reputation for excessive use of superlatives when describing people, things or conditions in this "Vestibule of Heaven." The conception that everything and everybody here moves in a plane above the ordinary, is erroneously entertained by many.

Reference to Long Beach as the "Vestibule to Heaven" is based on observation of the many here about to enter the celestial realm. Considering the very alluring destination, very few step on the gas.

There are plenty of ordinary people and an abundance of moderate hotels and restaurants. A big question with Mr. Middle Class is: "When do we eat?" What, how much, and what kind for two bits? Long Beach offers better bargains in living facilities than most places where conditions are less desirable. A big wholesome waffle with three pats of butter and plenty of syrup may be had for fifteen cents, which, with a cup of coffee, makes a breakfast for twenty cents. Most restaurants serve a classy merchant's lunch for thirty-five cents consisting of meat, salad, vegetables, dessert and drink. A good dinner may be had for fifty cents.

To those who like to do light housekeeping, will say that electricity is cheap and that they can keep house well lighted up at a small expense—but taken either way, we claim it true. The Long Beach public market in the center of the city at Lincoln Park, under municipal supervision, is the light housekeeper's delight. Here she (or he) meets the producer face to face on the public street and may get the freshest and best of everything that grows without half a dozen middlemen's profits. Incidentally, you meet your old friends from back home doing the same.

Rooms or apartments of any size or class may now be had in Long Beach as cheap as or cheaper than the corresponding accommodations anywhere in the country. Large, airy rooms within one block of the ocean front, close in on beautiful Ocean boulevard, comfortably furnished, rent for a dollar per day and up with connecting bath. Furnished apartments, suitable for four or five persons, in the most desirable locations, on ocean front, handsomely furnished with disappearing beds, closets, etc., may be had for $75 per month. Within one or two blocks, comfortable double apartments may be had for $45 per month, and single apartments at $25 to $30 per month. Bungalow courts range from $25 to $75 per month, according to class and location, etc. Four-, five- and six-room houses, furnished, are available at from $30 to $100 per month, according to location. Family beach cottages, furnished, rent for $2 per day or $20 to $25 per month. Auto courts, unfurnished, $5 per week, furnished, with two beds, light, gas, water, linen and laundering, $7.50 per week. Auto camp grounds charge 50c per day, $3 per week, no time limit. Water, gas, electricity, restrooms, shower baths, telephone, shade trees, laundry and community kitchen are provided. Tent houses rent for 75c per day, $4 per week, open all year.

Mr. Middle Class may, however, better buy a home of his own than pay rent. In a community where values are constantly increasing, you are not likely to make a mistake. The records of some of these increases are astonishing. There are records of fifty-foot lots bought a few years ago on beautiful Ocean boulevard for $400 which, today, are worth from $2,000 to $3,000 per front foot. In many parts of Long Beach, land that sold for a few hundred dollars per acre is now sold for hundreds of dollars per front foot. Desirable family homes may be bought for as low as $3,200, with a modest payment down. These are usually financed so that the balance is paid in small monthly payments.

The atmosphere is full of opportunities to invest in real estate, many of which will no doubt prove profitable. Mr. Middle Class may spend weeks looking over these realty bargains with no expense as the guest of the various promoters who provide comfortable transportation and usually a hot lunch. Many of these excursions take the whole day, and some of them include a boat trip.

Industrially, Long Beach is stepping out and making every reasonable inducement to industries of every kind, stressing her wonderful natural resources such as oil, climate, water front, rail and highway transportation, etc. Mr. Middle Class is especially interested in these developments as offering a means to "make ends meet," if he failed to do so before coming here. Unfortunately, we have not developed to such an extent that we can say there is a job awaiting everyone who wants to come here. Those who contemplate coming should have some resources or a definite job in view.

Industrial leaders such as Ford, the Dollar Steamship Co. and the Edison interests have very substantially set their stamp of approval on Long Beach.

The Ford interests have acquired 140 acres in the harbor district. The preparatory work is progressing satisfactorily and actual building will soon be under way. The plant will actually employ 2,000 people, all of whom will earn high wages. The minimum wage paid by Ford is $6 per day to those who perform the most menial tasks. The average wage of these employees will be $7.50 to $8 per day. The plant will take care of Ford car production for the entire southwest territory of the United States, the west coast of South America and the Orient.

The Southern California Edison Company's $30,000,000 steam electric-power plant, producing 280,000 H.P., is located in the western section of Long Beach. This plant is supplemental to twenty-one water-power plants of this company located over 250 miles of territory. Total capacity of steam and water plants is 810,000 H.P.

The above mentioned are the more prominent of some 335 industrial plants employing more than 15,000 people, having an aggregate payroll of $2,000,000 monthly and representing a total investment of approximately $95,000,000.

The same factors that appeal to these big industries also interest the average householder, particularly the municipally-owned water and gas plants, which supply these necessities to householders at the remarkably low figures of 75c per month minimum, and 15c per hundred cubic feet for water and 50c per thousand cubic feet for gas. Electricity is supplied by the Southern California Edison Company at correspondingly cheap rates.

In the matter of educational facilities, Long Beach ranks very high. Californians, as a whole, are powerful believers in education and are unusually generous in providing buildings, teachers, books, machine shops, athletic equipment and facilities of every sort—even pencils and scratch paper.

There are thirty-four schools, including Polytechnic high, with a total enrollment of 26,000 pupils and 790 teachers. Twenty-two school buildings are now under construction, with aggregate estimated cost of nearly $5,000,000.

The enrollment of the regular day Polytechnic high-school is 4,100 students, while that of the evening school is 5,400 and that of the part time school 417, making a total of 9,917 students, young and old, receiving the benefits of instruction in this institution.

In addition to the regular high-school course, a wide variety of vocational courses are given, including all branches of commerce, mechanical arts, home economics, bookkeeping, banking, typewriting, shorthand, commercial law, foreign trade, printing, machine shop, auto shop, forge, sheet metal, wood shop, electrical shop, dressmaking, millinery, foods, home management and nursing. Also courses in art, public speaking, dramatics and music are given. A total of 675 students graduated from Long Beach high-school in 1926.

There are five junior high-schools devoted to the seventh, eighth and ninth grades, with a total enrollment of 3,450 pupils and 196 teachers.

As to pleasure or recreation, Mr. Middle Class has the whole catalogue from which to choose something to suit his fancy—the municipal band concerts every afternoon and evening (except Mondays) are absolutely free. This band is the pride and joy of Long Beach, and music critics proclaim it one of the best in the country.

The city parks have roque, tennis, golf and horseshoe grounds, which are kept up in the very best condition. Regular golf courses in Recreation Park are waiting for Mr. Middle Class to step in and enjoy himself to his heart's content.

Fishing, as a sport, pleasure, diversion, amusement, business or labor may be enjoyed at nominal expense or profit at any time of the year.

Of this list, Mr. Middle Class would probably be most interested in the pleasure or diversion kind. To meet this demand, four giant barges are anchored a few miles off Long Beach's water front. These barges are fitted with restaurants, lunch counters and restrooms. Tackle is available to those who failed previously to secure their own.

Seated at ease on these big barges, the fisherman drops his line down among what is literally acres of big mackerel and barracuda. Light tackle enthusiasts get an especial thrill from this, for there is no gamer fighter for its size on every light tackle than the mackerel which, like the albacore, is a little cousin of the tuna, and whereas the albacore ranges from fifteen to fifty pounds, the mackerel on this part of the coast will range from one to five pounds.

The surf bathing in Long Beach, where the average temperature of the water is 64 to 70 degrees, is one of the great delights of the tourist. With our gently sloping beach of white sand and an efficient lifeguard crew on duty from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m. every day in the year to protect the amateur and those who take unnecessary chances while bathing in the ocean, surf bathing here is not only a pleasure, but a safe pleasure.

Alamitos Bay, a wonderfulu stretch of still water within the city limits, affords still and warm water for bathing, yachting, motor boating, etc.

Monday night of each week, there is given a free concert program, followed by old-fashioned dances, in the Municipal Auditorium, and Friday nights the dances follow the municipal band concert.

Religious adherents of any faith may find a church home among the three-score organizations devoted to spiritual activities. There are also the Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A. and the largest Bible class of men in the world, meeting Sundays in the auditorium.

Long Beach is a good place in which to be, even if it is a "Vestibule of Heaven."

NATIVE DAUGHTER WEDDED.

December 29, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar McFadyen, Miss Marie McFadyen, affiliated with Long Beach Parlor No. 154 N.D.G.W., became the bride of Fred D. Monroe, connected with the Federal Government forest service in Oregon. Rev. Fr. Francis C. Ott officiated, and the couple were attended by Miss Gladys Reimer as bridesmaid and Frank Monroe as bestman.

The bride was charmingly gowned, and the hospitable McFadyen home was beautifully decorated. The wedding gifts, largely of silver, were many. Following the ceremonies, which were witnessed by numerous relatives of the couple, an elaborate wedding dinner was served. Amidst showers of rice and good-wishes Mr. and Mrs. Fred G. Monroe departed for Hilgard, Oregon.

NATIVE SONS GET STATE FLAG.

For the benefit of D.D.G.P. Albert Cron, the new officers of Long Beach Parlor No. 239 N.S.G.W., with Harold Oliver as president, exemplified the ritual January 5 and initiated two candidates. Among the speakers of the evening were Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer, D.D.G.P. Cron and John Cadogan. Judge Percy Hight, a member of the Parlor, is recovering from a serious illness.

Grand Trustee John T. Newell paid an official visit to Long Beach January 19. He complimented the Palor for its activities and urged greater efforts in getting all eligibles into the Order. Past Grand President Herman C. Lichtenberger, in behalf of Grand Trustee Newell and himself, presented a California State (Bear) Flag to the Parlor, in appreciation for the excellent showing made by No. 239 at the institution of Santa Monica Bay Parlor No. 267.

On behalf of the Parlor, President Oliver presented to J. A. Max Schlemmer, retiring past president, an emblematic pin. Edgar McFadyen, William W. Brady, William B. Schweizer, Edgar C. Crowell, Stanley Houghton, Dr. S. T. Luce and J. A. Max Schlemmer were named a committee to look after the grand officers on the occasion of their visit January 28 to dedicate the new Woodrow Wilson school. Following a speechfest a tamale supper was served by M. O. Hann and Charles Seavey.

THIMBLE CLUB ELECTS.

Grand President Pearl Lamb paid an official visit to Long Beach Parlor No. 154 N.D.G.W. December 22. Following dinner, the Parlor met in regular session. Speakers included Mrs. Lamb, Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas and Mrs. Florence Schonemann. President Bertha Hitt presided, while Clara Fay was chairman of the entertainment committee. Members of the Parlor gathered December 24 at the home of Mrs. C. L. Young and under the supervision of Mrs. Julia Arborn filled seventy-nine boxes with goodies and gifts for the ex-service men and women at the Compton sanitarium. They were delivered in time for the Christmas tree that evening. The boxes were cleverly decorated by Miss Dorothy Chocker.

At the January 12 meeting of Long Beach the newly-elected officers were the recipients of beautiful handkerchiefs, hand painted with the California poppy by Mrs. Jessie Willis-Boughner. In her absence the presentation address was made by Vivian Arborn-Burke. January 20 the Parlor's thimble club met at the home of Mrs. Fannie McPherson. Luncheon was served and officers were elected, Mrs. Lucretia Coates and Mrs. Violet Henshilwood being chosen, respectively, for president and secretary. February 3 the club will meet at the home of Mrs. Kate McFadyen. Mrs. Lena Hansen, a member of the Parlor, is home again and able to receive friends.

WELL KNOWN ACTOR PASSES.

Wendell C. Wilson, born at Pasadena September 23, 1888, passed to the great beyond at Vancouver, British Columbia, where he was directing a stock company, January 9. He had attained a position which called for the fullest exercise of his ability as an actor and a director, and his passing closed a career, fraught with hardships, just as the goal of his life-ambition had been won.

Wilson was affiliated with Pasadena Parlor No. 259 N.S.G.W., the members of which greatly admired him. He will be remembered by many Native Sons and Native Daughters as the one who, in 1925, gave them a splendid treat at a theater party at the Pasadena Theater.

Pasadena Parlor sponsored a theater party at the Carthay Circle Theater, January 27, when "What Price Glory" was featured. Secretary Vincent Savory was in charge of the arrangements.

STATE WOULD ACQUIRE "DONNER" MONUMENT, NEVADA COUNTY.

Sacramento City—A bill, introduced by Assemblywoman Cora Woodbridge, is before the Legislature which provides for the state taking over and maintaining the "Donner" monument in Nevada County. It also provides for the acquisition of twenty acres of land surrounding the monument and the creation of a state memorial similar to the Marshall monument in El Dorado County.

The "Donner" monument was erected by the Orders of Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West as a tribute to the Pioneers of California.

GENEROUS BEQUEST FOR GOOD CAUSE.

Fresno City—Francis F. Reedy, for many years engaged in the manufacture of harness, died recently and his will provided that $15,000 of his estate be turned over to the Native Sons' and Native Daughters' Central Committee on Homeless Children, engaged in finding homes for homeless children without regard to race, creed or nativity.

Music Teachers to Confer—The annual conference of the music teachers in California public schools will be held at Long Beach, Los Angeles County, February 17, 18 and 19.

INSTALLMENT SELLING OF AUTOS GIVEN FEDERAL ENDORSEMENT.

"No one finds fault with the record of the automobile industry in 1926 or the conditions in the industry and outlook January 1, 1927," says the January 10 announcement of the Automotive Division of the Federal Department of Congress. "This industry continued to make progress in 1926.

"The year, as a whole, compared favorably with 1925, and the outlook for 1927 is as promising as a year ago. There is nothing alarming in the increase of about 5 per cent in production in 1926.

"The growing demand for closed cars has slowed up the sales of used open cars, which may cause some of them to be carried over until spring and largely accounts for the increase in used cars on hand.

"This industry has demonstrated that the principle of installment selling is sound. Repossessions have been high only when cash payments were low. When the installment buyer pays more than the depreciation, leaving him an equity in the car, the records show that he is not apt to turn it back.

"The year 1926 develops the following facts: Down payment of 33⅓ percent repossessions were 2.9 percent; down payment of 25 percent repossessions were 4.02 percent; down payments of less than 25 percent repossessions were 11.52 percent."

ARE RAILROADS TRYING TO SHIFT GRADE CROSSING LIABILITY?

Attempts on the part of the railways to enforce by law a full stop for all automobiles before a railway track is crossed at grade will be vigorously protested, according to reports reaching the Automobile Club of Southern California. In Ventura County a railway official has openly advocated such a law, and in San Bernardino County the matter is being pressed for consideration by the authorities. It is believed that other counties are being approached in an effort to obtain passage of local ordinances to this effect.

It is pointed out that such legislation would practically relieve the railway companies from all liability in case of collisions between trains and motor vehicles, would place unwarranted impediment upon motor-vehicle traffic, and would retard the work that is now progressing of eliminating railway crossings at grade.

Investigations by the engineering and legal departments of the Automobile Club of Southern California were so unfavorable to the passage of such a law that directors of the organization at a recent meeting adopted resolutions in opposition to any such legislation on the part of the state.

AN EPITAPH OF BAD ROADS.

They took a little gravel,
And took a little tar,
With various ingredients
Imported from afar;
They hammered it and rolled it,
And when they went away
They said they had a good street
To last for many a day.

They came with picks and smote it,
To lay a water main,
And then they called the workmen
To put it back again.
To lay a railway cable
They took it up once more,
And then they put it back again
Just where it was before.

They took it up for conduits,
To run the telephone,

Oh, the street's full of furrows,
There are patches everywhere;
You'd like to ride upon it,
But it's seldom that you dare.
It's a very handsome street,
A credit to the town;
They're always digging of it up
Or putting of it down.

ORGANIZED MOTORDOM MARKS 1926 AS RECORD YEAR.

The story of the automobile in 1926 contains a large chapter devoted to recording the greatest awakening of class consciousness among car owners in the entire history of motordom, according to a statement received by the California State Automobile Association from national headquarters of the American Automobile Association.

Interest in more good roads, more equitable taxes, fairness in legislation and dozens of other subjects has served to cause an increasingly large number of motorists to realize the importance of united action.

"One of the most vital matters before motordom is the interest in the subject of safety," says the statement. "Unparalleled attention has been focused on the safety question in every walk of life, and the leadership that motoring organizations have taken in the matter has served to draw tens of thousands into membership."

BIG JUMP AHEAD IN 1926 MOTOR VEHICLE REGISTRATIONS.

Registrations of motor vehicles in California last year totaled 1,641,551. This was an increase of 165,699 compared with 1925, when the registrations totaled 1,475,852. Here are the comparative figures for the several classes:

	1926	1925
Automobiles	1,384,152	1,224,831
Pneumatic trucks	174,671	172,277
Solid-tired trucks	41,652	42,294
Motorcycles	10,295	10,997
Trailers	30,781	25,453

California motor vehicles now make up a fraction over seven percent of the total registrations in the United States. The state has doubled its automobile registrations in four years and is second only to New York state.

TAKE CARE OF THE FINISH.

While the modern lacquer-type finishes of the automobile are extremely durable, the following rules will help keep the surface attractive for a much longer period:

Dust the car frequently and carefully. Always use clean, soft rags for dusting.

Wipe off the raindrops with a clean piece of chamois. Polish the car after dusting it, using a piece of old silk cloth.

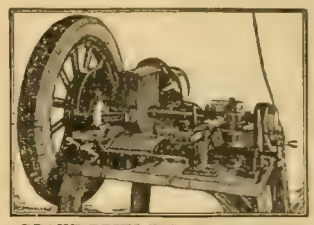
If a liquid polish is to be used, buy only the kind recommended by the manufacturer of the particular material employed in the finishing of the car. Alcohol on the new finish is sure to leave marks that cannot be removed.

GOING TO FRANCE, HEED THIS.

Motorists taking their automobiles to France are advised by the touring bureau of the California State Automobile Association that they will save considerable trouble if they have their California driving license with them. This will save taking an examination to secure a French driving license.

Those holding a California or American driving license can secure a French license in a day or so, otherwise it requires about ten days.

COMPULSORY INSURANCE.



A bill is before the California Legislature which, if enacted into law, will compel every owner of a motor vehicle in this state to carry liability insurance in the sum of $10,000.

"In at least 85 percent of the automobile accidents," declares Assemblyman Charles A. Oliva of San Francisco, one of the bill's sponsors, "the driver responsible for the affair is not carrying liability insurance and has nothing on which the injured can levy to secure even partial redress."

Save Delay—This is the time of year to protect the coil and distributor from moisture by wrapping in oiled silk or a piece of old inner tube. It may save delay on a rainy night when scores are stalled and mechanics are at a premium.

WOMEN DO THE BOSSING, STATISTICS WOULD INDICATE.

When Kipling "smote his blooming lyre" relative to the female of the species being the dominant institution of the family, motor touring had not become general. However, according to data gathered from 36,000,000 persons, he called the turn relative to women being the boss in motor touring.

When to eat, where to camp, where to go, how far, when to stop, and other important points of touring are decided by the women of the party, although the male member may be doing the driving. The male of the species at the wheel may protest, suggest, sputter or sulk, but it makes no difference in the ultimate result, if statistics may be relied upon.

While this information is transmitted to the Automobile Club of Southern California from the East, the big motoring organization does not vouch for the truthfulness of it, but merely refers the alleged facts respectfully to married men for their rejection or acceptance.

Lubricate Generator Often—A generator frequently requires a drop of light oil at each end of the armature shaft. Care must be exercised not to over-lubricate the shaft as oil may work its way through and cause the generator windings to become short-circuited. The oil leads to the shaft bearings caps, which automatically close to prevent dirt from entering the armature shaft, so it is best to note that these are in working order.

Slow Up—When a motorist is blinded by the headlight of an approaching car it is good business for him to slow up, according to recent court decisions. It was declared that a defendant driver was duty bound to slacken the speed of his car when he met two other cars and was blinded by their lights. Failure to slacken speed under such circumstances constitutes, in the eyes of the law, negligence.

Keep Spring Bolts Tight—If the spring clips or "V" bolts are tightened frequently, it will minimize the possibility of shearing the center spring bolt, which will allow the axle to shift and the brakes to lock.

Testing Battery Cells—When testing the car battery or taking a hydrometer reading of the battery cells, note whether the reading for the different cells is approximately the same. When one or more of the cells do not hold their charge, the battery should be repaired as the poor cells affect those that are in good condition.

Down Grade Safety—Descending grades with gears in neutral is a dangerous practice. Unless the car is in gear, it is impossible to keep control should the brakes heat or the braking power fail to hold against the decline.

New Road Attracts—The new all-year highway into Yosemite Valley is standing up well under its first winter of use and has resulted in a new travel era in the valley's history. For New Year's 635 autos, with 2,305 persons, registered there.

Huge Auto Tax—Auto owners of the United States had paid the huge sum of $1,100,865,983 to the Federal Government in war excise taxes on automotive products up to June 30, 1926.

BACK TO INDIANA

(MISS ESTHER CRONE.)

I'm going back to Indiana,
Where they raise the corn and all,
Where the robins sing in springtime,
And the crows caw in the fall.
Going back to rain and windstorm,—
And gets hot as blazes, too,—
Where it thunders, and the lightnings
Flash and get a crack at you.
Where winter, with cold and blizzards,
Keeps the mercury on the jump,
And the beastly mixed up weather
Makes a chap get out and hump.
Yet, there are days that are pleasant,
The sun shines sometimes, same as here,
But these awful changes of seasons
Come too often in the year.
Now, this old state, Indiana,
May be good in its own way;
'Tis not so bad to make a visit,
But you don't catch me there to stay.
I'd rather stick to California,
Where the joys of life abound,
Where you can bet your stake on climate,
For its equal can't be found!

CALIFORNIA'S 1926 MINERALS PRODUCTION

THE VALUE OF GOLD, SILVER, COPPER, lead and zinc produced at mines in California in 1926, according to the estimate of J. M. Hill of the Bureau of Mines, Federal Department of Commerce, was $19,078,000, a decrease of $4,206,354 or 18 percent as compared with the value of metals produced in 1925. There were decreased yields of 11 percent in gold, 44 percent in the value of silver and 34 percent in the value of copper, but increases of 13 percent in the value of lead and 38 percent in the value of zinc produced as compared with the previous year.

The production of gold in 1926 was 565,000 ounces, valued at $11,680,000, a decrease of $1,385,330 as compared with 1925. The output of both placer and deep mines was less than in 1925, though the dredge output was nearly as large as that of the previous year. The dry year interfered with hydraulic work in all sections, but so far as has been learned did not restrict quartz milling.

The silver produced in 1926 was 1,911,000 ounces, valued at $1,192,000, as compared with 3,054,416 ounces valued at $2,119,765 in 1925.

The production of copper in 1926 was 31,590,000 pounds, valued at $4,300,000, as compared with 46,864,913 pounds valued at $6,654,818 in 1925.

The lead mines of Southern California increased their output of lead by 1,183,800 pounds to a total of 7,750,000 pounds, valued at $643,000, in 1926.

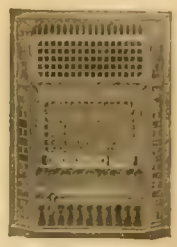
Zinc produced by California mines in 1926 amounted to 16,370,000 pounds, valued at $1,203,000, an increase of 4,880,763 pounds and $329,818 in value as compared with the previous year.

1926 MINERAL PRODUCTION OF STATE SHOWS GOOD INCREASE.

The total value of the mineral production of California for the year 1926 is conservatively estimated by the statistical division of the State Mining Bureau under the direction of State Mineralogist Lloyd L. Root to have been approximately $456,408,000.

This estimated total is an increase of approximately $24,000,000 over the 1925 production, which in turn surpassed the previous record value of 1924. This increase is due mainly to petroleum, and in part also to cement and other structural materials. Although there was a decrease of approximately 8,000,000 barrels in the quantity of crude oil, the total value is higher by around $25,000,000, owing to an advance in prices.

As building continued active throughout 1926, nearly all items of the structural group will show increased quantities and total values, especially cement, crushed rock, sand and gravel.



FIRST AMADOR GOLD QUARTZ FOUND IN 1851 BY MINISTER.

Sutter Creek (Amador County)—The first quartz in the famous gold-producing district of Amador County was discovered by a Baptist clergyman, according to Clarence E. Jarvis, Past Grand President N.S.G.W., member of the State Board of Education and resident of the Amador gold country for years.

A churchman named Davidson made the find in February 1851, Jarvis says, and because three other clergymen were prospecting with him on Amador Creek at the time the first quartz holding was known as "Ministers' Claim."

Millions From Crops—Field and fruit crops to an estimated value of $375,495,000 were produced in California during 1926; the value of the 1925 crop was $413,328,000, and that for 1924 $392,844,000.

A BIT O' FARMING

PREPARED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY M. H. ELLIS

OUTLOOK GOOD FOR LIVESTOCKMEN OF CALIFORNIA

AFTER YEARS OF DEPRESSION which hit nearly every branch of the livestock business, the pendulum seems swinging in the other direction. Woolgrowers, with their lamb crop as a by-product, have enjoyed an earlier recovery; and the dairyman has been able pretty well to hold his own. The cattleman and the hograiser have had harder lines and the break that appears now is one that has come just as many of the hard pressed were about to quit.

During the past year, the dairymen have had a better chance for profit between feed and milk prices, according to a report from the United States Department of Agriculture. Swine producers have had the best spread between feed and pork they have enjoyed for years; and while there has been a consequent rush toward the resumption of breeding, not enough breeding stock was available to change considerably the status of affairs. The increase in fall pigs was slight, and the prediction for the spring crop is not much increased. Prospects for pork production have not been better in years. While the cattleman did not have as good a year in the previous one, there are indications that the tide has turned; and if the slope up is as long as the one down, there is a long period of prosperity ahead.

The livestock situation is the brightest spot in the report of the federal bureau; and it indicates that all lines may have a bigger share of general prosperity this year. The report, of course, covers the entire nation; but it includes California, where with feed conditions better than in many seasons, there is plenty of room for optimism.

AGRICULTURE IN CONGRESS.

Congress is in session, and farm relief still is being talked. There are few optimistic enough to believe there will be anything but talk. The administration quite evidently does not believe prosperity can be forced on agriculture by legislation; but points to many laws enacted at the behest of the farmer for the betterment of agricultural conditions. Among them are the intermediate credit act, the enlargement of the scope of loans by the farm loan board, co-operative marketing acts, the Purnell Act to encourage agricultural research, bolstering up the warehousing act, revision of tariffs on agricultural products, widening of the activities of the Department of Agriculture, federal aid to highways and navigation and the reduction of federal taxes, together with numbers of lesser laws. There is no gainsaying the benefit of these statutes, but their purpose has been rather to aid the farmer than to lift him by his bootstraps into prosperity.

LEGISLATURE AT WORK.

Closer at hand is the State Legislature; and many are the bills introduced in the first weeks of the session that will be studied by the committee on agriculture during the recess. Chief in interest among these is, perhaps, the commission merchant bill. Two years ago a measure of this kind was passed, but died in the governor's pocket. This year another attempt is being made with a measure drawn by State Market Director R. L. Adams and his attorney, W. M. Bedford. A careful study of similar laws in other states was made, decisions upon them reviewed and the bill was drawn and re-drawn. Then the California Farm Bureau Federation, which for two years also has been at work on the subject, suggested changes, and it is hoped the bill is proof against onslaughts of its opponents.

There are plenty of other agricultural measures pending; and the farmers of the state, through the agricultural legislative committee, their representative, is keeping a close eye on every one of them.

WATCH THE WATER.

So far, moisture conditions throughout the state have been generally satisfactory this winter. But too much rain in some soils, and particularly in those underlaid by hardpan, means wet feet for trees and consequent exposure to winter injury or sour sap. Some farmers have dug holes about five feet deep, and when the water begins to stand in these places without soaking into the soil properly, steps are made to drain the soil. Breaking through the hardpan or digging drainage ditches in wet weather is not easy.

And where the farmer finds difficulty he may remember what he has been told about the ease of breaking up the hard undersurface with a subsoiler when the ground is dry, or by means of blasting. Storage of moisture is possible if the penetration by the water is possible. If it is not possible, damage to crops must result, perhaps permanent damage to trees. Much better and simpler it is to prepare drainage when the time is right.

FARMERS ARE STUDENTS NOW.

Perhaps the most notable thing about the short course in deciduous fruits and grapes, given at the University Farm by the University of California this winter, was the evident interest, taken by those who attended, in the fundamentals of plant life. The course offered in this was attended by nearly every farmer present, and the laboratory periods were particularly well attended.

Encouraged by this, the university has announced that the course next winter will offer more of this kind of material. And in view of this trend, it must be noted that no longer is the farmer merely a tiller of the soil. Some time ago he became a businessman and took a hand in farming. Now he is becoming a scientist as well, and will have first-hand information on his problems; and educational equipment to handle them.

PEAR BLACK END ROT.

There has been a lot of discussion during the winter of black end rot of Bartlett pears. The College of Agriculture sent M. J. Heppner into the Antelope Valley to study it, and he did a good job; but the impression got about that it was studied there because it is peculiar to that locality. If there is any part of the pear growing state free from the disease, it has not been located. Black end rot is not so particular as to its habitat. This year Heppner's studies will continue, not only in the southern part of the state, but in the other districts of California. Rootstocks apparently are a big part of the problem, but its final solution is yet to come.

USING POULTRY MANURE.

Manure is one of the valuable by-products of the poultry farm. Many poultrymen grow trees or vines in connection with their egg plants, and find added profit through the fertility given the soil from the droppings. Occasionally there is trouble, and this seems to come from improper use of the fertilizer. Poultry manure is highly concentrated, and a lump plowed under the surface is quite enough to burn up tender roots that come in contact with it.

A much better plan is to make a compost pile, or better yet a pit, and add substance through the use of straw, vegetable refuse of various kinds, or similar matter. Even then it should be well spread in application. In any case, the manure should have been applied long before this time of the year, and if it has been delayed, nothing more than a top dressing of about half a ton to the acre is sufficient. Two to five tons may be turned under in the fall, when it has time to break down before planting time.

FROST AND FRUIT.

It is close to the time of the year when the fruitgrowers of the state, or most of them, take their annual gamble with Jack Frost. Most of the time they win, but occasionally they get a loss that wipes out the winnings of many years. One walnutgrower tells of one such year of damage that would have installed and operated heaters for ten years. No wise man these days goes without insurance on his buildings, but the orchardist loses far less from fire than from frost.

GET THE GOPHERS.

Gophers in garden or lawn are a pest not to be tolerated. Vegetables are killed, beautiful flowers destroyed over night and lawns filled with unsightly hills and holes by these rodents. Carbon bisulphide used with jute or waste balls is said by some to be effective, used after the fashion in vogue for killing ground squirrels. Saturate the waste ball, toss it down the hole, stop up the outlets and a dead gopher results, sometimes. It is not so effective as with squirrels. Traps occasionally get them. Or try a few crystals of strychnine in a piece of carrot or a raisin, handled so the scent of the fingers does not linger. But perhaps the best remedy, particularly where the trouble is in the city or suburbs, is the family cat. A good mouser is a good gopherer, and succeeds where other remedies often fail.

PEAR BLIGHT ON THE WAY.

Winter brings with its dormancy for plants a too-secure feeling of safety from pear blight. Blight doesn't run in the winter, but the cankers are preparing ammunition for the spring attack. With the flow of sap these cankers begin to run, and every drop of exudation contains millions of blight bacteria. Scarify and disinfect, and disinfect again. Never cut blight without disinfecting the ends of the limbs cut and the instruments used for cutting. And when cutting blight, be sure to get far enough below the seat of the infection. Cut and disinfect. Where the long handled shears are used, a sponge swab, fastened to the instrument and saturated with disinfectant, may be used to good advantage in cleaning the cut and preventing more injury.

BIRDS AND GARDEN SEEDS.

Birds are the friend of the farmer and the gardener, but sometimes they get into mischief. Watch for them when the tender seedlings begin to come through the ground, or even before. Wire netting or brush will give protection, and the time to protect is when the seeds are put into the ground, for the feathered tribe seem to have an uncanny knowledge of just where the favorite flowers or vegetables have been seeded. Sweetpeas are particularly liable to attack, and few plants are immune.

MICE AND SMUT.

Copper carbonate dust has been proved to be by far the most effective insurance against smut in wheat. Not only does it prevent smut, but it encourages germination, and many hold it fertilizes the plant to an appreciable extent. Wheat may be treated long before time for planting, without injury and at times when it is convenient. And through this practice of treating the seed and storing it, has come the discovery that mice lose their interest in the grain thus immunized against disease. The adult mouse will consume about a third of a pound of wheat a month, and will waste much more. The value of copper carbonate from this added point of view is of great importance.

PROPER APPLE STORAGE.

Orchard storage of apples has proved to be costly, more so than warehouse storage for which the orchardist may think charges are too high. Bitter pit attacks heavily in fruit stored under the trees, and in some districts the loss last fall was tremendous. Applegrowers will do well to avoid over irrigation late in the season; and then to prevent further injury, will find storage at proper temperatures most effective. The damage to apples in boxes in the orchard runs about three or four times as heavy as in those stored properly.

REMEDIES FOR SLUGS.

There are few gardeners in California who have not an old and bitter grudge against the snail or the more common slug. Poisoning has been tried, and abandoned. Protective measures are better. Remove as many as possible of the refuges and breeding places. Cool, damp, dark retreats under boards or vines afford wonderful harbors for the pests. Having done the best possible in the way of cleanup, a line of lime about the plants to be protected will be found effective, but be sure there are no slugs inside the lime. Slugs cannot live after they touch lime, but don't let the lime touch the plants. If a single plant is to be protected, try screen or an inverted tumbler. But always remember there may be tiny slugs in the soil.

CATTLEMEN AS MARKETERS.

The California Cattlemen's Association went into the marketing business three years ago. The first year was not particularly conducive to optimism regarding the venture; but the report read at the annual meeting in San Francisco recently throws a new light on the situation. In 1923, the average for California markets was 82 percent of those in the Middle West, with 88 percent as the highest month and 77 as the lowest. The report for last year showed 102 for the highest month and 93 for the lowest, with a business averaging a million dollars a month. Membership has been holding its own, it is claimed; and the newest co-operative apparently is a success.

SOFT SHELLED EGGS.

Soft shells on eggs may result either from constitutional trouble or from deficiencies in the rations of the hens. Nine times out of ten it is the latter, and removing the cause will bring about the desired result. Of course, fright may bring thin shelled eggs, but not often; and there should be no cause for sudden alarm among the hens. If all the shells are soft and brittle, it is a safe bet the trouble is in the feed. Abnormal or soft shell eggs may result from disease, but it is not likely to affect the whole flock. Plenty of green feed, oyster shells and occasionally milk, more than likely will eliminate the soft shells. Cod liver oil or salmon oil also may be recommended to contribute toward the correction, and help the health of the flock at the same time.

GRAPE CLEARING HOUSE.

Grapegrowers of the state appear to be in earnest about their marketing plans, and the

TWO PIECE SPORTS FROCK MODERN

THE SPRING PRINTS SHOW EXTRAORdinary interest and vitality in highly imaginative flower and submarine garden designs. "Strata" colorings and landscapes are inspired by our national parks, with "war birds" and reptile designs in pastel colors, checks, plaids and polka-dots.

Spring is the most devastating of all of the seasons. Its very first breath of warmth and sunshine plays havoc in our hearts and homes. Everything that we own, or are, seems old. Spring is the season for making over ourselves and our clothes.

The mode, this season, is rich in fashion points which can easily be adapted to our last season's frock that is worn out in spots and needs renewing, or to our frock that may be perfectly whole but which we may be tired of wearing.

One of these "fashion points" may give the old frock an entirely new look. There is the dolman sleeve, for example. A straight-line frock left over from last spring may be too long and seem quite out of style. Why not shorten it and cut the armholes deeper and put in dolman sleeves of a contrasting color and fabric, such as a lightweight metal brocade lace or a print of plaid or check? Dolman sleeves give the fashionable new width to the upper part of the silhouette, and the pattern of the sleeve also gives a pattern with which to reshape the armhole of the frock.

Last season's frock, cut to blouse length, will make the upper part of this season's two-piece dress. Or, if the body of the frock is worn, the skirt may be put on a bodice top and worn with a fresh new blouse in the same or contrasting material. A different neckline, a new sleeve, a scarf end, or the wearing of three flowers in tones of one color instead of one on the shoulder, are little touches that will refresh a last season's frock.

The two-piece sports frock is thoroughly modern. Such a dress is suitable for general wear, for business or for shopping. It can be used to travel in or for week-ends in the country. It is exceedingly practical and always smart. For early spring, a light-weight wool or heavy crepe-de-chine is ever so nice for this style, made of one color with the stitching in another. It may be of two fabrics, wool jersey for the blouse and silk crepe for the skirt, or silk crepe for the blouse, with a skirt of oashmere.

Browns, from beige to russet, greens, from gray-green to reseda, and the new reds and bois-de-rose are all good; also the blues, beige and gray. Black is smart for town wear. Gray is well combined with green, and red is charming with gray. Blue has a high rating this spring in the light navy and flag shades.

Pintucks and seamings appear to have lost none of their prestige. They are often favored in diagonal outlines and generally reserved for bodice sections. Skirts continue to sponsor pleats, with side box and inverted effects outstanding.

The straightline topcoat and short-jacket suit will occupy the foremost position in sports wear for spring. Among the former, the single-breasted, one-button or wrapped type is made of novelty imported checked or plaid woolens. Decorative pockets and fur trimmings are outstanding factors.

Belts are employed in at least half the models and are most frequently made of narrow bands of leather in harmonizing or contrasting color. The wider belts appear at front, back or sides, but rarely in all-around treatment, and are often a part of the pockets or threaded through them.

Pockets are not to be overlooked, since they play such an important factor in the spring topcoat.

Sleeves are represented in set-in, raglan, saddle shoulder and dolman types. The last mentioned, however, is far in the minority.

Collars are hem length, in tuxedo, Queen Anne, shawl, mushroom or scarf effect, notched and standing. Versions and style features of these collars include strappings, contrasting borders, flat seamings, facings and tuckings, buttons and pipings.

Knitted jumpers are considered very much smarter for wear with suits of this type than blouses of any other woven fabric. These are constructed of zephyr and rayon mixtures, or all zephyr or all rayon, according to personal preference, and the square neckline shares honors with the "V," followed by round and boyish collar styles. Stripes are as important as ever in

And in this group of those who prefer the Steinway you will find the most notable figures, not only among the pianists, but in the entire world of music.

Paderewski, Rachmaninoff, Hofmann, Mero . . . Kreisler, Heifetz, Zimbalist . . . Geraldine Farrar, Ernestine Schumann Heink, Gogorza . . . Stravinsky, Damrosch, Stokowski . . . The list is endless. For the Steinway piano is regarded by the foremost musicians as quite necessary to the proper interpretation of music, as indispensable as the score itself.

The Steinway pianos used by these celebrated men and women are made in various styles and sizes to fit all homes and incomes, and to suit the acoustic conditions of the small apartment or the country home. Each embodies all the Steinway principles and methods. these knitted jumpers, but the chevron and diagonal patterns are newer.

The house dress has responded to the come-out-of-the-kitchen movement and is following the maids and matrons of the cities to their various daytime pursuits. Manufacturers, aware of the economic program, have introduced style into their washable frocks. Dresses, which formerly sold only in house-dress departments, are now found in sportswear sections. Women have interested themselves in attractive washable frocks.

The washable dress will be popular this season. Cotton and linen materials are most attractive. Since the silk dress is available to everyone, it has lost some of its prestige and will give way to cotton, to an extent, in the wardrobes of the very smart.

The general opinion for millinery is that the straw mediums will register a volume interest throughout the spring and summer seasons.

Crochet visca is outstanding, being adapted to the small, draped hat. Often the crowns are quite snug, with just a suggestion of a drape.

The small, close-fitting black hat is most favored for wear with the tailored suit.

The vogue for felts of all types persists and evidences no indication of slowing down. The narrow-brimmed, modified high-crowned hat, banded by grosgrain ribbon, is said to be favored.

Some of the most interesting milans are in matron styles with silk facing and have a tendency toward more trimming.

Dance hats are of metal and jeweled effects, or gold and silver lace.

BOOK REVIEWS

(MARGERY BOYD.)

"LOOKING FORWARD."

By Booth Tarkington; Doubleday, Page & Company, Publishers, Garden City; Price, $2.00.

Looking forward—all of us do, at one time or another, sometimes in dread, sometimes in happy anticipation. "Looking Forward" with Booth Tarkington, however, lessens dread and quickens anticipation. It is, perhaps, his light, whimsical manner of dealing with ponderous issues, making them at once salient and scintillating, that creates such delightful reading.

There are only half a dozen in all, in this short series of essays: "Looking Forward to the Great Adventure," "Nipskillions," "The Hopeful Pessimist," "Stars in the Dust-Heap," "The Golden Age" (fifty to sixty) and "Happiness Now"—these topics contain the gist of "Looking Forward."

Those readers who enjoyed "Alice Adams," "Penrod and Sam" and "Monsieur Beaucaire" will find the same pleasure in "Looking Forward," plus the added stimulation of some probable prickings in the region of the cerebrum.

NOTED PIONEER'S FIRST CALIFORNIA HOME TO BE PRESERVED.

Auburn (Placer County)—The Placer County Chamber of Commerce meeting here January 5 voted to purchase and repair the historic Stanford home at Michigan Bluff, this county.

This was the first California residence of Leland Stanford, deceased, once governor of the state, one of the builders of the Central Pacific railroad, now a part of the Southern Pacific system, and founder of Leland Stanford Junior University at Palo Alto, Santa Clara County. He lived in the house from 1851 to 1856.

Miss Rose H. Meehan, who had taught in San Mateo County schools since 1885, passed away at Burlingame. She was a native of San Francisco, aged 65. While in charge of the little country school at Montara she had as one of her pupils Peter B. Kyne, the noted author.

William H. Edwards, a Pioneer of 1852, died in San Francisco. Prior to locating in that city he taught school in different sections of the state and for many years was a principal in the San Francisco school department. For a long time he was the grand lecturer of the California Grand Lodge, F. & A. M.

SAN DIEGO'S HISTORICAL PRE-EMINENCE

THE RANGE STEER WAS THE FIRST historical character in the commercial life of San Diego. He it was who drew the ships from far-off New England, furnished material for an export trade with the United States, Mexico, South America and the Sandwich Islands, and even laid the foundations of social life at Old Town by supplying an interest to attract and support a population, including some families of large means, when the military society began to pass away.

It was the Spanish soldiers who made the first gardens at Old Town. Doubtless as they looked down from Presidio Hill they had an eye for choice spots of land where they would one day make a comfortable home for their old age and live under their own vine and fig-tree, in the literal sense of the term. The very first house in Old Town was doubtless the tule hut of a retired soldier.

And the pioneer of successful gardeners was Captain Francisco Maria Ruiz. He planted the spot which afterwards came to be known as Rose's Garden, and his pears, olives and pomegranates bore goodly crops for seventy-five or eighty years. These trees were planted early in the last century and it is only a few years since the last survivors of them, which happened to be pear trees, were removed. This pioneer garden was in the same block as the residence of George Lyons. The olive trees at the mission, and the famous old palms at the foot of Presidio Hill, were the only plantings which antedated the orchard of Captain Ruiz. There is no possible doubt that the two old palms were the first ever planted in California, and as such they constitute a most valuable and interesting historical exhibit.

Agriculture never acquired any great importance in all the years of Spanish and Mexican dominion. True, there is a record of grain exports in 1817, as already noted, and this is evidence of progress when it is remembered that it had formerly been necessary to import this staple from Mexico; but the exports never reached an important stage. The easy-going inhabitants were well content if they produced enough to meet their own needs, and their methods and implements were ridiculously crude. Until the Americans came, there were no plows in the country except those made of the fork of a tree shod with a flat piece of iron. Grain was cut with a short sickle, and horses threshed it with their hoofs.

The pioneer ship in the hide trade between New England and California was the "Sachem" of Boston, which first came to the coast in 1822. Her Captain was Henry Gyzelaar, while the supercargo was William A. Gale, a man of considerable note. He had been engaged in the California fur trade and his glowing report of the resources and possibilities of the country was very influential in developing a fleet of trading ships and giving California its first boom. The Boston merchants who became interested included Bryant & Sturgis, Trot, Bumstead & Son and W. B. Sweet. The important San Francisco firms engaged in this trade at the time were J. C. Jones and Paty, McKinlay & Co. Captain Henry D. Fitch, the first great merchant of San Diego, was a member of the latter firm. The "Sachem" did not call at San Diego, securing a cargo elsewhere, but she was soon followed by other ships and a thriving trade in hides was established, which flourished until the Mexican War was well under way.

For the purpose of storing the hides, a number of large warehouses were erected by the Boston firms at a poinf on the shore nearest the anchorage, known as La Playa (the beach), near the site of the present Federal Government quarantine station. These houses were framed in Boston, sent out in the ships and set up here. They were named after the ships, and the names of four of them are recalled by old settlers as the "Admittance," the "California," the "Sterling" and the "Tasso." There do not appear to have been more than four in existence at one time.

The first hide house was built by the carpenter of the "Brookline" and occupied by James P. Arthur, mate of that ship, with a small party, while curing hides, in 1829.

The hide and tallow trade practically ended with the transfer of California to the United States. This was a mere coincidence, due to economic rather than to political causes. New England found that she could get her hides cheaper somewhere else. The trade had marked the high tide of prosperity in old California days and supplied an interesting and romantic episode in the history of the country.

Next to the cattle industry and the trade in hides and tallow, the fisheries made the most important contribution to the early commerce of San Diego. And the fisheries included the exciting chase for the sea otter, which was very valuable for its fur.

By the time the Americans began to settle at San Diego otters were not so common in the bay, but along the coast of Lower California and its adjacent islands there was still good hunting. Philip Crosthwaite was one of the earliest and best-known otter hunters. He stated that there were two companies of hunters at San Diego, in 1845, which were fitted out each season by Captain Fitch. The hunting season was during the spring and summer months, when the otters could be found among the kelp, often asleep, and shot with rifles from boats.

Although twenty-three governors—ten Spanish and thirteen Mexican—ruled California before the days of American dominion, only two of these impressed themselves upon the history of San Diego. Governor Echeandia loved the place so well that he virtually made it the capital during his administration, and Governor Pico was himself a San Diegan in whom his neighbors felt considerable pride. Several of the others appeared for a moment upon the stage of picturesque local life, but few exerted any influence upon the course of events in this neighborhood.

When the Spanish flag went down and gave place to the emblem of Mexico, April 20, 1822, the people of San Diego submitted gracefully, but without enthusiasm. Only far echoes of the revolutionary struggle had reached them during the previous decade and their sympathies clung fondly to the Spanish tradition of the country. It is related that there was no flagstaff upon which to hoist the new colors; that the soldiers grumbled because there was no distribution of money; and that the next day they cut off their queues as an expression of their disgust. In December, the imperial commissioner, charged with the change of government in Upper California, stopped in San Diego for a week on his way home, but there is nothing to show that he transacted any business at this place. He gambled with a rollicking priest, named Fernandez, quarreled with Santiago Arguello about it, and departed in an unhappy frame of mind.

San Diego was never the capital of Upper California in the proper sense of the term. The political events here during the thirties were due simply to the fact that Governor Echeandia preferred it as a residence and chose to order the assembly to meet here. It was, however, for a few years during and following Echeandia's administration, a hotbed of political activity.

The pueblo of San Diego was organized by an election of the necessary officials December 21, 1834. These officials consisted of an alcalde, or mayor, for which the successful candidate was Juan Maria Osuna, who was elected over Pio Pico; a first regidor, or alderman, Juan Bautista Alvarado; a second regidor, Juan Maria Marron, and a syndico procurador, or town attorney, Henry D. Fitch. Thirteen votes in all were cast, and the officers entered upon the discharge of their duties on the first day of January, 1835, which marks the beginning of civil rule. They constituted the first ayuntamiento, or town council

The new town was governed by its own council for only three years. The country was not prosperous and population decreased until, in 1838, there were not enough people to entitle it to a council, the number required being five hundred. Accordingly, from the 1st of January, 1838, until the Mexican War, San Diego was part of the sub prefecture of Los Angeles and governed by judges appointed annually by the governor. Jose Antonio Estudillo was the first judge, or juez de paz.

August 25, 1842, San Diego had a last glimpse of Mexican military glory in the arrival of Governor Micheltorena in the brig "Chato." He remained about a month, drilling and outfitting his "battalion of cholos," as they have been justly called. This invasion was the last of the convict colonies sent from Mexico. Fortunately, they did not remain long here, but moved on to devastate the rest of the country. They showed themselves very poor soldiers, but exceedingly expert night prowlers and pilferers.

establishment of a clearing house to eliminate the gluts that have brought disaster to so many vineyardists of the state. A crop worth $125,000,000 is involved, and red ink has been returned just once too often, say those in the business. C. E. Schultz of the United States Department of Agriculture has been delegated to assist in the organization. His proposals include the compilation of market reports to the end that only so many cars be allocated to any market as can be consumed there; and that the others be diverted to other potential carlot distributing points, while still more consumption and development of markets are encouraged.

Elimination of Sunday loadings, prevention of week-end and holiday accumulations, diversion of over-supplies into by-product channels, discouraging of the shipment of poor quality fruit, co-operation with raisingrowers to control supplies of raisin varieties held on the vines late in the season, dissemination of complete market information and giving preference to cash business are among the others of his recommendations.

GET MOSS OFF TREES.

Caustic soda, or lye, three pounds to a hundred gallons of water, will be found pretty effective against moss on trees, or Bordeaux, 5-5-50, will be found effective. If the lye is used, care must be taken to protect the face. Automobile cup grease or vaseline will guard against injury that otherwise is apt to be serious and most likely to be painful. If there is an infestation of scale, the three pounds of lye may be added to 100 gallons of oil spray and the two pests killed with one operation.

FEED COWS REGULARLY.

Some dairymen are very careful to see that their cows are milked at regular hours, but not so careful as to when the cows are fed. Experiments by the United States Department of Agriculture show that cows may be milked irregularly without measureable loss of production; but when their meal times are varied, the milk flow drops about 5 percent. At the time this experiment was conducted another was tried to determine whether the use of the same man in milking the cows had any effect on the flow. Where changes were made frequently it was found there was a decrease of about 0.05 percent as against those milked by the same man, a difference so small as to be almost negligible.

BATS AND CODLING MOTH.

Spraying for codling moth is the best possible protection, of this there is no doubt. Trapping with lights has been tried, but without much success. Dr. Joseph Grinnell of the University of California says, however, that the natural enemy of the codling moth is the bat, and tests have shown them to consume myriads of the fruit pests. There is a tendency toward the extermination of the flying mammal, but the fruit grower is warned he has a friend in the winged mouse. One orchardist runs horses and cows and hogs in among his trees, and lets the wormy fruit that drops is consumed at once, the worm destroyed and the feed for the animals conserved, with a not inconsiderable amount of fertilizer dropped on the soil. But with all the bats and animals and light traps, effective as they may be, the orchardist must not omit the arsenate of lead application.

SALT AND SAN JOSE SCALE.

San Jose scale is omnipresent. Controlled, persistently fought, it does little damage. Neglected, it becomes a factor in the red-ink column. Lime sulphur, the orthodox remedy, will be found effective, in most cases, although some growers say it will not control longer; that through years of spraying and survival of the strongest scale, a strain almost immune to the spray has been bred. Some old-time growers add salt to the spray solution, and claim their troubles end right there. Various strengths are used, but an average seems to be about 50 to 60 pounds of sulphur, half as much lime, 10 pounds of salt and 200 gallons of water applied during the dormant period.

Passing of the California Pioneer

(Confined to Brief Notices of the Demise of Those Men and Women Who Came to California Prior to 1860.)

MRS. LOUISE KIRK, NATIVE OF MISsouri, 85; came across the plains to California in 1848 and after two years' residence in Hangtown (now Placerville), El Dorado County, settled in San Jose, Santa Clara County, where she died; three children survive. She was the widow of Socrates Kirk, Pioneer of 1850.

M. S. Peters, native of the Azores Islands, 98; came in 1848; died at San Leandro, Alameda County.

Native Daughters of the Golden West

SPANISH FUNCTION FOR GRAND PRESIDENT

SANTA BARBARA—REINA DEL MAR NO. 126 entertained Grand President Pearl Lamb with a Spanish banquet Tuesday, December 21. Under the able chairmanship of Mary Ruiz a committee beautifully decorated the hall with yuletide and old Spanish decorations. On all sides were Christmas trees and large bouquets of poinsettias and Christmas berries, while upon the walls were four flags under which California has been ruled —Spanish, Mexican, Bear and American. Upon the altars were old candelabras from the Santa Barbara Mission, loaned by Father Augustine, in appreciation for the contribution the Native Daughters have made to the restoration of the mission; it was the first time the candelabras were used outside of the church walls. In one corner the first Christmas was pictured, with small figures about the crib in a miniature stable, while the modern American Christmas, with a large decorated tree, was displayed in another corner. Members and many of the guests wore Spanish costumes. Soledad Birabent was chairman of the banquet committee, Evelyn Eby of the service committee, composed of the daughters of the members of the Parlor, and Irene Quinn of the program committee.

The banquet opened with the singing of "I Love You, California," by the membership, followed by the blessing, given by Flora Stewart. During the course of the meal a number of old Spanish songs were sung by Hortense Maguire, Vera Pacheco, Angela De Wolfe, and there was group singing by the program committee. Two Spanish dancing numbers were given, one by a group of eight members and a solo dance by Teresa Janssens. Edna Sharpe, acting as toastmistress, introduced the speakers of the evening, whose talks gave accounts of the Parlor's activities of the past year. Mae Sprietz told of "Our Children" and their placement. Mary Wood recounted the work of the history and landmarks committee before and during the Spanish fiesta days, told of Father Serra day, of the pioneer program on Admission Day and of the restoration of the Santa Barbara and Santa Ynez Missions. Mrs. Nancy Emery of the local Associated Charities gave a very interesting account of the milk fund, which originated with Reina del Mar and is now taken care of through the community chest. Miss Marvel Thomas, Grand Trustee, Mrs. Florence Dodson-Schoneman of the Grand Parlor History and Landmarks Committee, Grand President Pearl Lamb and D.D.G.P. Anna E. McCaughey each responded with a short talk.

Following the banquet and program the regular business meeting was called to order by President Mamie Harrison. Six candidates were initiated. Just before the close of the meeting Past President Edna Sharpe, on behalf of the Parlor, presented Grand President Lamb with a book, "Pictorial History of California," and D.D.G.P. McCaughey with a Spanish shawl.

D.D.G.P. Anna E. McCaughey entertained a group of Miss Mary Wood's most intimate friends among the membership of Reina del Mar with a bridge luncheon shower at the home of Past President Katherine Leslie, January 8. Miss Wood, who is to become a bride in February, was the recipient of many beautiful gifts. It was she who called Reina del Mar's attention to the sad condition of Santa Ynez Mission a little over two years ago and who, since that time, has been acting as the chairman of the Parlor's history and landmarks committee.

Former Grand Secretary Weds.

December 29, at the Reno, Nevada State, home of Past Grand President Mrs. Frank E. Humphrey, Miss Laura J. Frakes of Upper Lake and James Toman of San Francisco were wedded. Both are former popular residents of Amador County. The bride is particularly well known throughout California as an educator and, for twelve years, efficiently served the Order of Native Daughters as Grand Secretary. The couple will reside in San Francisco.

The setting for the ceremony was perfect, the drawing-room being transformed into a miniature forest of cedar, pine and fir from the high Sierras; a brilliantly decorated Christmas tree and poinsettias from California South gave the touch of color. Rev. Brewster Adams officiated, Mrs. Humphrey attended the bride and Ernest Mattinson was the bestman.

Immediately following the ceremony, at 6 p. m., a wedding supper was served. At a large round table, beautifully decorated with Clunie lace, pink satin streamers and pink roses, sat the bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. James Toman, and the wedding guests: Rev. Brewster Adams, Ernest Mattinson, Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Humphrey, Mr. and Mrs. George Mapes of Oakland, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Witte of Standish, Marvin and Ellis Humphrey.

New Parlor in Prospect.

Mrs. Florence Schoneman of Rudecinda No. 230 (San Pedro) has been appointed a district deputy grand president for San Bernardino County, and reports that prospects are excellent for the institution of a parlor in San Bernardino City in the near future. Several names have already been attached to the charter petition.

Those interested in the formation of a parlor in San Bernardino should communicate with Mrs. Schoneman, whose address is 1521 Fifth avenue, Los Angeles.

Aged Made Happy.

Alturas—The big social event of the holiday season here was the Christmas ball given under the auspices of Alturas No. 159. In a dancing pavilion decorated in the gay holly colors of the season the dancers made merry until long past midnight. The proceeds were most gratifying and a goodly share was sent to the Central Homeless Children Committee as the Parlor's donation.

The aged inmates of the Modoc County hospital were made happy Christmas morning, when a committee conveyed the Parlor's best wishes, together with an overflowing basket of goodies and personal gifts.

The January meeting of Alturas terminated in a gay party at which the members, their husbands and friends enjoyed themselves at cards and dancing. At midnight a banquet was served.

Ever mindful of the welfare of the homeless children of California, the Parlor is proud to report the placing of another little one in one of this community's best homes.

Goodly Sum Netted.

Jackson—The thirty-third annual masquerade ball of Ursula No. 1, New Year's Eve, was the largest attended and one of the merriest in the Parlor's history. The net proceeds amounted to $284.66. Daisy L. McFarland heads the corps of officers for the January-July term.

Dual Celebration.

Santa Ana—Grand President Pearl Lamb paid an official visit to Santa Ana No. 235 December 19, which was also the first institution anniversary of the Parlor. Accompanying her was D.D.G.P. Bertha Hitt. The dual celebration began with a 6 o'clock supper, the dining-room being decorated with Yuletide emblems.

In a prominent place in the meeting-hall, which all repaired following the feast, was a Christmas tree, beautifully decorated and electrically lighted; it bore bags of candy and popcorn balls for all. Four candidates were initiated.

Grand President Lamb in her address praised the Parlor for the progress made during its year of existence and said that many older Parlors were not so proficient in their work. President Mamie Conn Schonberg, on the Parlor behalf, presented Mrs. Lamb with a silver bread tray and Mrs. Hitt with a cluster of wax flowers.

Following the meeting a program was presented by Miss Virginia Pope, Mrs. Don S. Mosley, Miss Muriel Bray and Organist Fredda Messer Barges, and refreshments were served. Mrs. Mae West was chairman of the committee who had charge of the function. Mrs. Mamie Conn Schonberg has been re-elected president of the Parlor.

January 6, at the home of Mrs. Cora Ross, thimble club was organized by members of Santa Ana with these officers; Mrs. May West, president; Mrs. Mary Moore, vice-president; Mr Faithful Service Remembered.

Oakland—January 13 Piedmont No. 87 had a joint public installation of officers with Piedmont No. 120 N.S.G.W. Miss May Barthold was the installing officer for the Native Daughters and Patricia Reardon became the president of No. 87. Past Grand President Addie L. Mosher presented the past president's emblem to Mildred Gluck, retiring past president.

Gretta Murden, chairman of the evening, presented gifts to President Reardon, Past President Gladys West and Charter Past President Jennie Brown. The latter, in appreciation of her thirty years of service as an officer of the Parlor, was the recipient of a beautiful floor-lamp. Following the installation ceremonies dancing was enjoyed.

Social Functions Featured.

Chico—The term ending December 31 was a very successful one for Annie K. Bidwell No. 168, social functions being particularly featured. The Parlor's eighteenth institution anniversary was celebrated with a dance for the members and their families.

The annual Christmas party was held December 23. "Josh" gifts from a prettily decorated tree entertained the members until the call came from the dining-room. Red hearts and stockings entwined among cedar boughs, with a fireplace as the center-piece, formed the table decorations. After partaking of a delicious tamale supper the party broke up amid best wishes for 1927.

Jack Horner Pie Creates Fun.

Folsom—Officers of Fern No. 123 were installed January 4 by D.D.G.P. May Lucas, Grace Darrington becoming president. Presentations were made to Minnie Imhoff, retiring president, Mary Kipp, who retired after several years' service as financial secretary, and President-elect Lucas. A Jack Horner pie created much merriment at the supper table. Each guest drew a favor from the pie, and to each favor was attached a slip of paper upon which was written some witty comment or prediction.

Anniversary Observed.

Martinez—Las Juntas No. 221 observed its fourth institution anniversary at a banquet January 3. Plans for an active year were outlined. As the first of a series of social affairs a card party is to be given February 7.

Ovation for Grand President.

San Jose—Grand President Pearl Lamb was given an ovation on the occasion of her official visit January 6 to Vendome No. 100. The hall was artistically decorated and there was a very large attendance, including many visitors. A large class of candidates were initiated. There were many presentations, including a silver steak set from the Parlor and a silver vanity from the Past Presidents' Club to Mrs. Lamb. Following the Grand President, who commented on the Order in general, there were talks by Past Grand President Mamie Pierce-Carmichael, Grand Marshal Josephine Barboni, D.D.G.Ps. Native Sons of the Golden West

STEPHEN M. WHITE—HIS RECORD, BRIEFLY

STEPHEN MALLORY WHITE IS BEING recalled to the minds of Native Sons. He was born at San Francisco January 19, 1853, the son of William F. and Fannie J. (Russell) White, Pioneers of 1849. In 1874, shortly after his admission to the bar, he settled in Los Angeles City, where the career which made him famous as a lawyer and as a legislator began.

In 1883 Stephen Mallory White was elected district attorney of Los Angeles County, in 1886 he was sent to the State Senate from the district including Los Angeles, and in 1893 he was chosen to represent California in the United States Senate. There, because of his unusual ability and wonderful oratory, he became a leader. His great achievement in the Upper House of the Federal Congress—the accomplishment which gave him a prominent place in the hall of fame of California's noted Native Sons—was his tireless, and eventually successful, contest for the establishment of a free harbor at San Pedro.

Stephen Mallory White died at Los Angeles City February 21, 1901, his demise being directly due to his untiring work in the United States Senate to have the Federal Government establish at San Pedro a free harbor for The People. In memory of his sacrifice and service, there stands in the Los Angeles County court-house yard a bronze statue of this distinguished native Californian.

Stephen Mallory White was the charter president of Ramona Parlor No. 109 (Los Angeles). His final words, whispered to those gathered about his bedside, were: "The evidence is all in; the case is submitted."—C.M.H.

Grand President Appoints.

Grand President Hilliard E. Welch has appointed Justice John E. Richards (Observatory No. 177) of the First District Appellate Court a member of the Grand Parlor Board of Appeal to succeed the late Justice Thomas J. Lennon (Mount Tamalpais No. 64).

For organization work, Grand President Welch has assigned Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer (San Diego No. 108) to the Sacramento Valley, and Deputy Grand President Sidney B. Witkowski (Los Angeles No. 45) to the San Joaquin Valley.

Past Grand Is Speaker.

San Rafael—Past Grand President William J. Hayes of Berkeley delivered a brilliant address on "Organization" before members of Mount Tamalpais No. 64 January 10. He sketched the interesting and romantic history of California from the earliest days to the present time, and gave many helpful suggestions to increase interest in the Parlor, strongly recommending the discussion of early California history.

Hayes pointed to the worthwhile achievements of the Order, which has accomplished much in many fields of endeavor. "In fact," he said, "its success has attracted nation-wide interest and admiration, and citizens of many states are making inquiries, with a view to building up organizations modeled along similar lines."

Newman Cohn also spoke on the same subject. He was instrumental in bringing Hayes to San Rafael and promises to secure other speakers, at least once a month, to address the Parlor on matters of especial interest.

Annual Ball Big Success.

San Bernardino—The most successful social function in the history of Arrowhead No. 110 was the New Year's Eve annual grand ball in the Municipal Auditorium. The financial returns were such that, it is reported, a substantial contribution to the Grand Parlor entertainment fund being accumulated by Sepulveda No. 263 (San Pedro) will be made by the Parlor. D.D.G.P. J. S. Mee was chairman of the general committee which had the affair in charge. Fred Grant was the floor manager.

Grand Trustee John T. Newell paid an official visit to Arrowhead. A musical program was presented by Leslie Haloche and Monte Weeks, and refreshments were served. January 19 the December and January birthday parties were held. Financial Secretary M. Guy Hale was in charge. Officers were installed at this time by D.D.G.P. Mee, John J. Cadd becoming president.

Joint Installation.

Oroville—Officers of Argonaut No. 8 and Gold of Ophir No. 190 N.D.G.W. were jointly installed January 7 by D.D.G.Ps. Florence Boyle and W. H. Hibbard, Hibbard and Elizabeth Phillips becoming the respective presidents. The hall was beautifully decorated for the occasion by Norma Levulett and Addie Roderick.

Excellent reports of the Parlors' progress the past year were made and there were several presentations. Following the ceremonies delicious refreshments were served by a committee from Gold of Ophir composed of Lauretta Rose, Mardel Mastellar and Cornelia Lott.

Anniversary Observed.

Sacramento—Officers of Sunset No. 26 were installed January 17 by D.D.G.P. Edward Kuechler, Harry Chalmers becoming president. January 17 several members of the Parlor accompanied Grand Trustee John T. Skelton on his official visit to Auburn No. 59.

Sunset celebrated its forty-third institution anniversary with a past presidents' night January 24. A banquet preceded the meeting and tales of the past days were recounted by several speakers.

After Undesirable Aliens.

Fresno—Grand President Hilliard E. Welch paid a visit to Fresno No. 25 January 14, the purpose being to consult with the membership regarding the San Joaquin Valley campaign for more Parlors and additional members. Several candidates were initiated. Among the speakers of the evening, in addition to Grand President Welch, were Past Grand President William F. Toomey, President Frank M. Lane, Lucius Powers, C. K. Wakefield and Sidney B. Witkowski (Los Angeles No. 45).

The Parlor is sponsoring a movement to rid the country of undesirable aliens—"those who commit crimes, those who evaded the draft during the world war, and those who make no attempt to become citizens of the country." H. G. Wildgrube, David Peckinpah and Leland Barbour constitute the committee in charge, and it will endeavor to get action in both the State Legislature and the Federal Congress.

Fresno is already at work on its Independence Day plans, the local celebration of the Fourth of July being in its charge. A tentative program includes literary exercises in the morning, sports in the afternoon, fireworks and dancing in the evening. The Parlor's present meeting schedule provides for social functions twice a month and initiation the intervening meetings.

Membership Standing Largest Parlors.

San Francisco—Grand Secretary John T. Regan reports the standing of the Subordinate Parlors having a membership of over 400 January 20, 1927, as follows, together with their membership figures January 1:

Would Restore Markers.

Santa Ana—Santa Ana No. 265 will undertake the restoration of the mission-bell signposts along El Camino Real through Orange County. A committee has been appointed to that end, and communications have been ordered sent to the Parlors in San Diego and Los Angeles Counties requesting them to co-operate, in order that the markers may again grace the historic "king's highway" in southernmost counties of the state.

Husband and Wife Install.

Petaluma—Officers of Petaluma No. 27 and Petaluma No. 222 N.D.G.W. were jointly installed January 4 by D.D.G.Ps. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Berger, Andrew Smith and Mrs. Elmira De Carli becoming the respective presidents. The affair was attended by delegations from Sonoma, Sebastopol, Santa Rosa and San Rafael.

Pleasant Occasion.

Bognuda and Anne Jespersen were the installing officers, and S. J. Damon and Emma Becker became the respective presidents. Following the ceremonies whist was played, prizes being awarded Mrs. Ivy Hansen,

In Memoriam

GEORGE RICHMOND SMITH.

George Richmond Smith, a charter member and for a number of years recording secretary of Kelseyville Parlor No. 219 N.S.G.W., has answered the final rollcall and departed from this life to take his place in the great beyond where the good of this world are gathered together.

While we deeply deplore the loss of such a worthy brother, one who devoted the last twenty-three years of his life to the upbuilding and the uplifting of our fraternity and its members, we feel that after living such a good and upright life, his happiness in the next life is assured. In his private life he endeared himself to all who knew him. His gentle, pleasing disposition, his unselfish character, his honest and upright dealing with his fellowmen won for him a great number of friends who mourn his untimely end.

In offering this tribute to his memory we trust that time, which alone can console the afflicted, may lessen the grief of those by whom he was cherished. We hope that

LUCILLE RYCE ZOCCA.

"And the stately ships go on
To their haven under the hill,
But, oh, for the touch of a vanished hand
And the sound of a voice that is still."

Whereas, It has pleased Divine Providence, in His infinite wisdom and love to call to her eternal reward our devoted sister and friend Lucille Ryce Zocca, and whereas we bow with resignation to the Divine will, yet do we sorely miss our sister and deplore our passing while we recognize her many womanly virtues and her enduring qualities of fortitude and patience which so endeared her to us, therefore, be it

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to her bereaved family, that a copy be spread upon the minutes of the meeting of Manzanita Parlor No. 29 N.D.G.W. and that a copy be sent to The Grizzly Bear Magazine.

CATHERINE O'NEIL.

To the Officers and Members of Eltapome Parlor No. 55 N.D.G.W.—We, your committee appointed to draft resolutions in respect to the memory of our charter member and beloved sister, Catherine O'Neil, submit the following:

Whereas, The Almighty, in His infinite wisdom, has deemed fit to call to His Heavenly Home our beloved sister, we have been impressed with the lesson of the uncertainty of human life.

"No one hears the doors open,
So gentle is the call;
Like falling leaves from roses,
One by one our loved ones fall."

Resolved, That in the passing of our beloved sister, the Parlor has lost an honored member and the family a loving and devoted sister, resolved, that we extend to her family our heartfelt sympathy, be it further resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes and that our charter be draped in mourning for a period of thirty days.

Sincerely and fraternally yours in F.D.E.A.,
ANNIE W. RYAN,
ADELENE HANOVER,
MARGARET C. TRIMBLE, Committee.

Weaverville, January 14, 1927.

CHARLES ELLISON AMES.

Charles Ellison Ames, a much beloved brother of Ramona Parlor No. 109 Native Sons of the Golden West, passed on to the Great Parlor on High on January 3, 1927. Brother Ames was born in San Francisco on December 21, 1861, the son of a Pioneer of the northern part of California, brother of Mrs. Jennie M. Young, Mrs. Maria L. Stevens, Mrs. Bella Gilbert, and Miss Eunice C. Ames, who resides at Burlingame, California.

Brother Ames joined Ramona Parlor August 21, 1896. He held his membership No. 1 in Ramona Parlor, issued to him on July 31, 1925. Brother Ames always evinced a deep interest in our Order and not only retained during his whole life a keen affection, and high regard for the Native Sons, but was extremely loyal to all his many friends both in Southern California and other cities of our beloved state.

The large concourse of people who attended his burial services amply testified to the high regard in which Brother Ames was held in our community. Brother Ames came to Los Angeles about thirty-five years ago from San Francisco where he occupied the position of financial secretary of the Ingleside Club of that city.

The relatives, friends and acquaintances of our well loved brother will, indeed, miss his strong personality, warm heart and genial manners. We, his Brothers in our great fraternity Native Sons of the Golden West, extend to his bereaved family and friends our deepest sympathy.

February 13 took laudanum and shocked his friends by his unaccountable act.

A schoolteacher of some years experience in San Francisco and other cities entered a shooting gallery and, picking up a gun, instead of shooting at a target as expected sent a bullet into his ear and another into his mouth. He was a widower with nine children.

Two young men named Dudley and Barber went across San Francisco Bay in a sailboat February 1. They were caught in the ebb-tide and a high wind prevailing carried them out to sea beyond the Golden Gate, where the boat capsized and they were drowned. One was the son of A. P. Dudley, a prominent attorney, and the other a son of John Barber, a Montgomery-street banker.

A. B. Spooner, a prominent citizen of Morro, San Luis Obispo County, while rowing across the bay became exhausted, drifted out to sea where his boat upset and was drowned.

OLD MEN IN FATAL QUARREL.

In San Quentin State Prison February 13, just as the noon whistle blew and work stopped, John Whitemore went insane. He was using a heavy flatiron in the tailor shop and threw it at a fellow-prisoner named Varney, standing near, hitting him upon the head and killing him. He then dashed across the room, grabbed up a knife lying upon a table, and cut his jugular vein, dying in a few minutes.

February 1 two old men, both near 70 years of age, named See and Perry, quarreled in a Downey, Los Angeles County, saloon. See was ejected and thrown down upon the sidewalk. Arising, he went to his home and, obtaining two pistols, was returning to the saloon when Perry, who had secured a double-barreled shotgun, appeared and got the drop on him. See attempted to retreat into a butcher shop, when Perry fired both barrels, loaded with buckshot, striking See's head and neck, killing him instantly. See left a large family, and one of his grown-up daughters, securing a revolver, made an unsuccessful attempt to shoot Perry while in the custody of an officer.

Thomas Whelan, a salesman from San Francisco, went on a spree at Caliente, Kern County, and becoming obstreperous was taken in charge by Undersheriff Lightner February 4. He assaulted the officer, who drew his gun and shot him, inflicting a mortal wound.

John Woodeford and Charles Quillet, at St. Johns, Colusa County, February 3 quarreled over a game of cards. Woodeford shot and killed Quillet.

Harmon Phelps quarreled with J. F. Taylor, a neighboring farmer in Livermore Valley, Alameda County, while proceeding homeward in a wagon. He shot and killed him and then, after wandering around and calling at different places, went to his own home and hung himself in the granary.

A. C. McDonald, a prominent citizen of Santa Rosa, Sonoma County, was found the morning of February 13 lying in his front yard, murdered by having his head split open with an ax. J. W. Church was subsequently arrested and charged with the crime.

February 26 Owen Conlon and Owen Growner, San Francisco longshoremen in a saloon drinking together, finally quarreled over a religious discussion and came to blows. Conlon hit Growner upon the head with a beer glass and killed him.

A little boy in Sacramento was given a piece of ground to make a vegetable garden. In a short time he was in great distress over the fact, as he told his mother, that his beans were coming out of the ground upside down.

BIG PROJECTS UNDER WAY AT SAN PEDRO

(STANLEY A. WHEELER.)

WHEN THE GIANT ELECTRIC dredger "Turbine" began to draw up sand and silt the morning of January 17, San Pedro and Los Angeles Harbor began to simultaneously acquire a new thirty-five-foot ship channel and a new twenty-acre seaside playground. The two projects form one of the largest undertakings for a Pacific coast port since the building of the San Pedro breakwater during the years from 1899 to 1912.

Under a Federal Government contract for $607,450, a dredging company will deepen the main channel from its present depth of thirty to thirty-five feet. This will permit the largest of commercial ships plying the Pacific to move into the inner harbor district at Wilmington without consideration of tides.

At an additional expense of $250,000, raised by the City of Los Angeles through a voted bond issue, the sand and silt taken from the dredging operations are being conveyed through a two-mile pipeline to the site of Cabrillo Beach, San Pedro's new bathing beach. Over shallow-lying rocks close to Point Firmin the sand will be laid, making both a beach and a playground. Part of the reclaimed land will be outside of the breakwater.

Although on the coastline, San Pedro has been denied the use of a bathing beach in recent years, due to the industrial development of the harbor, which now does $800,000,000 worth of business a year and is a port of call for 157 regularly scheduled steamship lines. Cabrillo Beach will be the second largest artificial beach in America when complete, the first in size is at Coney Island.

Upon completion of the channel deepening it is the intention of the Federal Government to remove historic Deadman's Island at the entrance of the harbor. This would permit a uniform channel width of 1,000 feet and afford filling material for the site of a new quarantine and immigration station.

COMING SOON, TWO BIG EVENTS.

In preparation for the 1927 N.S.G.W. Grand Parlor meeting in San Pedro next May, Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 is laying plans for a number of benefit entertainment features.

For February 12 a boxing program at the giant arena of the Wilmington Athletic Club has been arranged. President J. M. Love of the club has donated the use of the Wilmington Bowl and several high-class fistic matches have been lined up. The card will include a number of navy bouts, featuring sailors of the United States battle fleet. Ten dreadnaughts will be based in the harbor at San Pedro at the time.

A big dance, in which many civic organizations and clubs of San Pedro and Wilmington will co-operate and participate, will be given February 22 at Fellowship Hall.

Later in the spring Sepulveda Parlor will again stage one of its famous barbecues at White Point, now well known to natives in the southern part of the state. It is but a short distance from the spot where the young Canadian, George Young of Toronto, finished the recent Wrigley ocean marathon after swimming twenty-two miles acro[ss] the San Pedro Channel from Santa Catalina Island.

All events will be under the supervision of Sepulveda's Grand Parlor arrangement committee, of which James W. Mo[ore] is chairman. In addition to his duties as a Native Son and a railway official, "Jim" is executive vice president of the San Pedro Chamber of Commerce, president of the local Lions Club and a trustee of San Pedro Lodge of Elks, all of which are co-operating in making the coming Grand Parlor a record-breaker socially.

BIG SUCCESS.

Native Sons and Native Daughters to the number of 700 and more thronged the second floor of the home of San Pedro Lodge of Elks January 13 to witness the joint installation of officers of Parlors of both Orders in Los Angeles and Orange Counties. Arrangements for the big success were made by committees from the San Pedro Parlors Sepulveda No. 263 N.S.G.W. and Rudecinda No. 230 N.D.G.W., headed, respectively, by William Durr and Hazel Raines. Previous to the ceremonies John T. Newell, Grand Trustee N.S.G.W., presented the orchestra of Vaquero Parlor No. 262 N.S.G.W. (Los Angeles), which delighted with several selections.

Officers of Long Beach Parlor No. 154 and Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 N.D.G.W. were first installed by D.D.G.P. Bertha Hitt, assisted by Mary Brittain as chairman, Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas as past president, Jennie Raymond as marshal and Pearl Dwinell as organist. Fannie McPherson and Clara Fay became, respectively, the president and secretary of Long Beach, and Gertrude Riepe and Charlotte Bennett of Rudecinda.

D.D.G.P. Burrell D. Neighbours officiated at the installation of the Native Son officers, and was assisted by D.D.G.P. Albert Cron and a corps of officers. The new presidents of the participating Parlors include: Raymond L. LeMoine, Los Angeles No. 45; T. Dwight Crittenden, Ramona No. 109; Albert G. Boschke, Hollywood No. 196; Harold W. Oliver, Long Beach No. 239; J. L. Breiner, Pasadena No. 259; Gabriel E. Ruiz, Vaquero No. 262; William F. Durr, Sepulveda No. 263; Loring E. Kent, Glendale No. 264; James B. Ult, Santa Ana No. 265; George Kirchenschlager, Monrovia No. 266; Dwight C. Freeman, Santa Monica Bay No. 267.

Following the ceremonies dancing was in order, splendid music being furnished by the orchestra of the "West Virginia."

NATIVE DAUGHTERS INITIATE.

At its meeting January 20 Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 N.D.G.W. initiated two candidates, the new officers exemplifying the ritual. An emblematic ring was presented Past President Catherine Ross and to President Gertrude Riepe was given a bouquet. Refreshments were served by the good of the order committee: Hazel Raines (chairman), Amy Hagenow, Victoria Adler and Charlotte Bennett.

GROWING.

Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 N.S.G.W. received an official visit from Grand Trustee John T. Newell January 12, when plans for the May Grand Parlor were discussed. Commencing February 3 the Parlor will meet every Thursday night in Friendship Hall, I.O.O.F. Temple, Tenth and Gaffey. Visitors are always certain of a friendly welcome.

Six days following their installation the new officers of Sepulveda initiated a class of candidates. President "Bill" Durr says initiation will be held twice a month during his term to take care of the large number who are applying for membership in the Parlor, which holds the growth record of the Order.

Mrs. Ann Louise Baly, who settled in the harbor district fifty-six years ago, passed away January 20 at San Fernando at the age of 71. A husband and three sons, among them Battalion Chief John C. Baly, a member of Sepulveda, survive.

LOVED NATIVE DAUGHTER PASSES.

Mrs. Carolina Oden-Sepulveda, charter member of Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 N.D.G.W., passed away January 19. She was a daughter of George V. Oden and Maria J. Machado, California Pioneers. Her passing is mourned by hundreds of friends throughout Los Angeles County.

CALIFORNIA'S "MAGIC" CITY

LOS ANGELES' 1926 RECORD

REPORTS FROM VARIOUS RELIABLE sources the past month show that Los Angeles City during 1926 made substantial growth, and indications are that the upward and onward trend will continue during 1927. The estimated population of the city is now 1,322,453. Here are some comparative figures for the last and the previous year which tell, better than words, the story of the "Magic City":

Bank clearings—$8,917,424,296 (1926), $7,945,493,931 (1925).

Building permits—$123,006,215 (1926), $152,646,436 (1925). New residences constructed totaled 11,194, apartment houses 495, hotels 23, theaters 17 and school buildings 77.

Realty transfers—411,335 (1926), 385,949 (1925).

Postal receipts—$9,089,918 (1926), $8,226,710 (1925).

Harbor commerce — Tonnage: 22,170,035 (1926), 22,449,067 (1925). Value: $852,067,129 (1926), $727,976,531 (1925).

Business failures—446 with liabilities of $4,645,054 (1926), 468 with liabilities of $5,431,529 (1925).

For public improvements, including 224 miles of permanent pavement and 455 miles of sewers and storm drains, $22,814,470 was expended last year, compared with $17,720,279 in 1925. A $30,000,000 expenditure for 1927 is planned.

Some 200 industrial establishments were added during 1926, bringing the total to 5,700. Manufactured products last year were of the approximate value of $1,275,000,000, an increase of $25,00,000 over 1925.

Assessed valuation—$1,794,414,522 (1926), $1,783,167,751 (1925).

GETTING RESULTS.

The N.S.G.W. Interparlor Committee, Southern District, is meeting weekly and accomplishing much for the Order. Its first promotion, and a noteworthy success, was the joint installation at San Pedro January 13. Meetings are held every Friday at 7:30 p. m. in Ramona's clubrooms, 1816 South Figueroa, and every Los Angeles County Parlor is represented. F. J. Burmester is proving an efficient secretary.

The committee now has under discussion road markers to be placed throughout the county advising of the several Parlors' places and times of meetings, and a phamphlet to be distributed to eligibles. Plans will soon be under way for a joint initiation, in honor of Grand President Hilliard E. Welch.

WANT TO VISIT "SEA DOG"?

Captain William H. Standley, commanding officer of the U. S. S. "California," stationed at San Pedro, has extended, through Municipal Judge Louis P. Russill, an invitation to Native Sons and their families to visit the battleship Sunday, February 6.

Two hundred is the limit that can be accommodated, and those desirous of paying a visit to the "California" as Captain Standley's guests should get in touch with Judge Russill, who has the arrangements in charge.

NATIVE DAUGHTER FEBRUARY PROGRAM.

Officers of Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. exemplified the ritual for Verdugo Parlor No. 240 (Glendale) January 18. Visitors included, among others, Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas, D.D.G.P. Bertha Hitt and Mrs. Florence Dodson-Schoneman, chairman Grand Parlor history and landmarks committee, who spoke interestingly on Jedediah Strong Smith. Delicious refreshments were served at the meeting's close.

A very delightful card party was given by No. 124 January 12 under the chairmanship of Carolyn F. Wetzel. Prizes were awarded, and homemade cake and coffee were served. These card parties, the second Wednesday of each month, are pleasant affairs to which all are welcome. The dance of January 26 under the chairmanship of Calista De Soto was well attended.

Los Angeles' February calendar includes: 2nd, initiation; 9th, card party, Amelia McGinnis chairman; 23rd, dance, Helen McAnany chairman. Annabelle Dedman is recuperating from her recent illness at the home of her cousin in Venice.

TO STIMULATE INTEREST.

Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W. will ask all Parlors from Santa Barbara to San Diego to procure classes of candidates and permit its officers to exemplify the ritual, in which they are most proficient. When making the visits, No. 45 proposes to take along a corps of entertainers. The purpose is to stimulate interest in all the southland Parlors.

Los Angeles will feature a vaudeville show February 10, to which all members of the Order and eligibles will be welcome. The social committee, Lester J. Reich chairman, is in charge of the affair and promises an attractive program. February 17 will be devoted to initiation. The Parlor is considering a new home and something definite along this line will be presented in the near-future.

ORGANIZING SCOUTS TROOP.

The newly installed officers of Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W. officiated at the initiation of a class of six candidates January 21, and so well did they exemplify the ritual that they were highly complimented by the members. Grand Trustee John T. Newell paid an official visit January 7. The Parlor is organizing a troop of Boy Scouts of America; any native-born boy between 12 and 18 may join.

Ramona will entertain its life members February 4. The 18th has been set aside on the month's calendar for initiation, and for the 18th the entertainment committee, Ralph Harbison chairman, promises the "best time ever."

STAG EVENT DRAWS.

A big crowd attended the stag event of Hollywood Parlor No. 196 N.S.G.W. January 17. An excellent program, including tumbling and boxing, was presented and greatly enjoyed. A beautiful colored photograph of San Juan Capistrano Mission, presented by John W. Topham, was disposed of.

ORCHESTRA IN DEMAND

Vaquero Parlor No. 262 N.S.G.W., since becoming identified with the "East Side," has been advancing along all lines. Several new members have been added and many applications are on file. Secretary J. E. Dorsey has resigned and been succeeded by J. E. Babbitt.

In proportion to membership, no Parlor in the Order has so many members musically inclined as has Vaquero. Several of them have formed an orchestra, and they not only furnish music, both instrumental and vocal, at each meeting, but their services are in demand by other Parlors. No. 262 is considering giving another "community night" in the near future; the previous one was a great success.

BEYOND THE LAW.

Deaths in Los Angeles County during 1926 attributable to motor-vehicle accidents, reports the Automobile Club of Southern California, totaled 508, an increase, compared with 1925, of 44, or 9.9 percent.

Thirty-one of the deaths resulted from driving automobiles while intoxicated. How many of those drunken "birds" were sent to the "pen," where they belong? Search the records, then ascertain the "social standing" of each booze-murderer, and you'll find the answer and the reason. This is no puzzle, just another instance citing the fact that wealth and prominence, drunk or sober, are beyond the law in the "chemically pure" City of the Angels.—C.M.H.

THE DEATH RECORD.

Floyd Bateman, brother of Herbert Bateman (Ramona N.S.), died January 27 at Oakland.

Charles E. Ames, affiliated with Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W., died January 3. He was a native of San Francisco, aged 65.

DANCE AT GLENDALE, FEBRUARY 16.

Glendale Parlor No. 264 N.S.G.W. had initiation January 12. Among the visitors were D.D.G.P. Ronald M. Ross and delegations from Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 and Hollywood Parlor No. 196. Refreshments were served. Grand Trustee John T. Newell officially visited the Parlor January 26, when another of the popular monthly dances was on the program.

Glendale's February dance is scheduled for the 16th, at its meeting-place, 610-A East

"KITCHEN POLICE" ON JOB.

Santa Monica Bay Parlor No. 267 N.S.G.W. (Ocean Park) added a couple of names to its roster-roll January 19, the ritual being exemplified by the officers of Ramona Parlor No. 109 headed by President Dwight Crittenden. Among the speakers of the evening were Past Grand President William I. Traeger, Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer, Secretary Richard Fryer (Los Angeles 45) and Crittenden.

The "kitchen police" of No. 267 prepared, and served at the meeting's close, a Spanish supper which was greatly enjoyed. George R. Cosgrove of the Parlor passed around the cigars, a native daughter having arrived at his home January 18.

SPANISH VILLAGE.

In an effort to preserve the historical aspects of the Los Angeles Plaza and its immediate vicinity, the Chamber of Commerce has been working quietly for some time to establish a typical Spanish village surrounding that park, which was the birthplace of the pueblo that has come to be the biggest metropolis in the Western Americas.

The City Planning Commission has approved the plan, and a committee from the chamber has been working quietly for some time signing up the property owners in that vicinity on a proposition of permitting no new building in the area that is not of typical Spanish design and which does not fit into the general architectural scheme.

NATIVE SONS AND NATIVE DAUGHTERS

CALIFORNIAN TELLS OF FAR-OFF EXPLORATION

A DESCRIPTIVE ACCOUNT OF THE successful completion of a search for a little-known tribe of pygmies in the hinterland of New Guinea was recently received by letter from Matthew Stirling, graduate of the University of California and anthropological explorer. He is a native of this state, the son of Ariana W. Stirling, Past Grand President N.D.G.W.

Stirling announced in a letter to his mother, written, he said, "at our explorer camp, deep inside the Nassau Mountains, on the headwaters of the Upper Rouffar River," that he had located the tribe of infant-size people for which he was searching.

The expedition which he headed started as a private venture, aided by the Dutch government, American newspapers, and expectations of returns from travel movies taken during the trip, a great part of which was performed by airplane. Its purpose was to gather material concerning the people of New Guinea and to find, if possible, the location of a tribe of pygmies who were popularly supposed to exist somewhere in the unexplored interior of the island. A former expedition was almost completely annihilated by attacks from the natives and drowning in the swift mountain rivers.

Writing of the final step in his trip, Stirling said: "We had to cut our way and it took us ten days of hard traveling. For the first nine days we passed through a belt of rough, mountainous terrain, constituting a sort of no-man's land, with no trace of human or animal life, not even birds, and very few insects. On the ninth day we reached a large tributary stream and a fairly open valley, where the life zone recommenced. There were plenty of pig and cassowary tracks, and signs of human occupation in the shape of a small trail near the river and trees cut down by stone axes.

"Later, on the edge of a bluff, we found a bark shelter which had evidently been occupied within a week or two. Finally, in the evening, we came to a spot where the river entered a narrow gorge between two vertical rock walls. Across the entrance of the gorge, not more than fifty yards wide, hung a well-made suspension bridge, made of rattan.

"Starting next morning, we climbed steeply for four hours and finally reached a clearing and small village on top of the ridge. Tomalinda, the Dyak leader, and myself were ahead and went into the village inclosure. The only person in sight was a small girl of six or seven years. To our surprise, she smiled a welcome and waited for us to come up. I gave her some beads and she led us to a house in which was an old woman, who greeted us quietly without sign of fear or surprise. In a few minutes another woman arrived and then six men. They were pygmies and very small indeed, with a quiet, well-bred reserve of manner."

Concluding his letter, Stirling wrote: "We find the pygmies a very kindly, friendly, hospitable people, in striking contrast in every way to the papuans of the lake plain, who are nervous, highly excitable, unstable in temperament, treacherous and dishonest. The pygmies paint themselves elaborately with black and red paint, and when dressed up wear gorgeous feather headdresses of cassowary feathers, resembling at a distance the Russian fur hats. The women wear a short skirt of shredded palm leaves, and both men and women wear net bags suspended from their necks and hair nets over their heads.

"I don't believe that an expedition ever went into any country that has had as many interesting things happen as this one. I have kept a daily journal, which is quite complete and which I plan to write in book form on the trip home."

"Wisdom is a tree of life to them that lay hold upon her; and happy is every one that retaineth her."—Bible.

The Japs are now practically in control of the California fishing industry, and a law such as proposed is needed. But the Japs again have a powerful and well-heeled lobby. Wait, and see what happens to the present bill.

One of the first acts of the new head of the State Motor Vehicle Department was to cancel permits for 3,000 special badges, presumed to give the possessors immunity from arrest for infraction of the laws. "No man," said he, "no matter what his influence or political power may be, should be above the operation of the speed and traffic laws of California."

No man should be, but several men, and also women, have been, and, we'll wager, will continue to be. The department's traffic officers will probably do their bit, but the judges, ever mindful of the election-day ahead, will not concur, when it comes to those of "influence or political power."

In an address before the Commonwealth Club of San Francisco, Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, president Leland Stanford University, is quoted as saying: "While I do not believe in letting down the immigration barriers, still I think we should allow some Chinese in and not keep Orientals out under the impression that we are superior to them."

Inconsistency to perfection! If "some Chinese" are allowed to come in, the immigration barriers must, in all fairness, be let down completely, and the Oriental flood will roll in.

Except in the minds of those who are propagandaing and working night and day to remove the immigration barriers, "the impression that we are superior to Orientals" does not prevail. The Orientals are barred for the good of the country, and even though they may, by some, be recognized as superior to the Whites, they should be kept out.

The growing disrespect for the Constitution of the United States and all laws, on the part of both the citizenry and officials sworn to respect and enforce all laws, continues to cause much concern and is the subject for numerous dissertations. In the Senate of the Federal Congress, January 7, Senator Morris Sheppard of Texas expounded some facts which should be digested by those who persist in ignoring the Eighteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution:

"With the eighteenth amendment embodied in the Constitution by the processes which the Constitution itself establishes, an amendment prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating beverages anywhere in the nation, is it not clear that the makers, vendors, purchasers and drinkers of bootleg liquor repudiate the teachings of Washington and violate every principle on which our Constitution and our government rest? Guiltier than the professional criminals with whom they indirectly or directly deal are the purchasers and drinkers who move in social and business circles, without whom the bootleg market would disappear, guiltier because opportunity, education and position make their conduct all the more without excuse, guiltier because they cover their contempt of government and law with a cloak of so-called respectability. When they break one law they invite the violation of all other laws. When they make the existence of the bootlegger possible today they cannot be heard to complain, they cannot consistently invoke the protection of society when the burglar, the rapist or the murderer invades their homes tomorrow.

"With their property, their liberties and their lives safeguarded by the Constitution they become ingrates as well as lawbreakers when they disregard it. Lawbreakers in high places do more to undermine the foundations of order and progress, to encourage communism, bolshevism, anarchy, crime and red activities in general than all the denizens of the underworld. Their example is the chief cause of dissipation and lawlessness among younger people.

"O, that the apparition of Washington might appear at every feast and revel where the eighteenth amendment is set at naught and with uplifted hand repeat these sentences from his parting message to America, sentences which cannot be repeated too often: 'The Constitution which at any time exists, until changed by an explicit and authentic act of the whole people, is sacredly obligatory on all. The very idea of the power and right of the people to establish government presupposes the duty of every individual to obey the established government'."

THOUSANDS VISIT CALIFORNIA'S GREAT NATIONAL PLAYGROUNDS.

California has more national parks than any other state in the union, according to a report issued by the United States Department of the Interior. Of the nineteen national parks, with a total area of 11,710 square miles, California has four having a total area of nearly 2,000 square miles.

Not only is the Golden State fortunate in the number and area of these great national playgrounds, but each is unique and distinctive. Sequoia, more commonly known as the Big Trees National Park, embraces the oldest of living things in the world.

Yosemite National Park is a valley of world-famed beauty having not only three groves of big trees but magnificent waterfalls.

The smallest of the California parks is General Grant, created chiefly to preserve the General Grant tree, thirty-five feet in diameter and more than one hundred feet in circumference.

The only active volcano in the United States is found in Lassen Park in the northern part of the state. Lassen Peak, 10,460 feet above sea level, has become an observatory for volcanic action and is an interesting sight when it rumbles and emits smoke.

California's four national parks were visited last year by 432,949 persons. Yosemite led all of the nineteen national parks of the nation with 274,209 visitors. California's national monument, Muir Woods, headed the list in number of visitors to any monument in the nation with 97,426 visitors.

It is noted in the government report that 1926 was a record year, with a total of 2,287,828 visitors in all the national parks and monuments of the country. It is expected that with the growing love of the people for the outdoors and improved facilities for motoring in comfort 1927 will establish a new record for visitors.

RAMONA AGAIN GETS VOTING CUP.

For the second time, Ramona, San Diego County, has won the better citizenship cup offered by the California Development Association to the community of the state showing the highest voting percentage. The cup was re-presented January 18.

At the 1926 general election Ramona established the unprecedented voting record of 98.33 percent, which won over all communities of California by a wide margin.

Fruit by the Carload—California deciduous fruits to the total of 78,830 carloads were shipped out of the state during 1926; this is about 8,000 carloads less than the 1925 total shipments. The notable decrease was in grapes.

CALIFORNIA NEEDS THIS

SENATE BILL NO. 764, PROPOSING TO establish a much needed California historical association, state wide in its operations, is before the State Legislature for consideration. It was introduced by Senator Roy Fellom of Stanford Parlor No. [illegible] N.S.G.W., San Francisco, January 21. The [illegible]t of the bill, fully setting forth the purpose [illegible] the measure, follows.

Section 1. The California State Historical Association hereby established by the State of California for the purpose of promoting interest in and disseminating knowledge of the history of California.

Sec. 2. The full control and responsibility for the [illegible]ject of the affairs of said association, subject only to the Constitution and statutes of the State of California, shall be vested in a board of trustees who shall serve without financial remuneration or expense. The said board of trustees shall consist of sixteen members appointed by the governor of the State of California for a term of four years; provided only that as soon as the board shall have been created the sixteen trustees first shall divide themselves by lot into four classes so that four trustees shall expire at the end of one, two, three and four years respectively; and provided, further, that the governor of the State of California shall be an ex-officio honorary chairman of the board of trustees.

Sec. 3. All the funds of the said association shall be deposited in the state treasury and drawn upon only in accordance with the statutes and rules governing the expenditure of other public moneys. All income of the association apart from state appropriations shall be deposited in the state treasury as a fund to be used solely for the support of the said association.

Sec. 4. The title to all property, records and archives now legally held by the California Historical Survey Commission is hereby vested in the California State Historical Association.

Sec. 5. Out of any money in the state treasury not otherwise appropriated the sum of twenty thousand dollars is hereby appropriated for the support of the California State Historical Association during the seventy-ninth and eighty-first fiscal years."

Various attempts have been made to organize and conduct private historical societies, but their success, being dependent on the activity of a few competent leaders, has been, as a general rule, casual and fluctuating. The need sorely exists for an official state historical association, such as proposed in this bill.

As a state, California can well afford to support history-work. Other states with a far less romantic history, and also with far less material wealth, greatly surpass this one in their support of state historical activities.

The State Legislature should pass, and Governor Young should approve, Senate Bill 764, and thereby give California its rightful history-place among the states of the union.

As the result of the United States' called "limitation of armament" conference, of a few years' back notoriety, this country today has but a [illegible]liature navy, while Japan and Britain, parties [illegible]he agreement, have bigger and better navies. And now, another conference is proposed by the United States, in the hope, it would appear [illegible]m past history, that what little remains of [illegible]s country's navy may be entirely obliterated. Japan is enlarging and improving its navy, and will continue to do so, without regard for conferences and agreements, for Japan has a mission to perform. Its 1927-28 army and navy budget is much greater than that for the previous fiscal year.

May the Ruler of the Universe look down in pity upon these United States and protect them from the follies that would be foisted upon them by the cunning foreign propagandists in their midst, the misguided pacifists and the brainless [illegible]ality-worshipers.

Most minds and hearts are, like hell, filled with good-intentions. Were they let loose, they would ennoble their conceivers and be of benefit to the social structure. But, sad to relate, the number that are actually put into being are infinitesimal. Unborn good-intentions are beneficial to no one.

Wealthy Placer County fruitgrowers, so the press informs, itching for yellow-dollars and a spot of ease, at the expense of California, will endeavor to have the State Legislature nullify the cropping-contract provision of the California Alien Land Law.

Just continue your Jap-induced sleep a little longer, Californians, and then will you be awakened by the confronting fact that the "honest little brown men" have, and to forever hold, California! The possessors of the soil will, eventually, conquer and rule—it cannot, possibly, be otherwise.

Police-protection costs in cities of the United States increased from $3.04 in 1915 to $5.41 in 1925, according to a February 11 announcement of the Federal Census Bureau. The People were told that, with prohibition, would come a decrease in crime, a lessening in the number of law-enforcers and a closing up of many of the penal institutions—thereby decreasing police-protection costs.

Perhaps, if unadulterated prohibition be applied, alike to the rich and the poor, the prominent and the insignificant, the promise could be fulfilled. But there is no chance for its fulfillment under the enforcement-act and the enforcement-officers now in operation.

Bankers, doctors and numerous others are deserting, in wholesale, their life-callings to join the wealth-bringing bootlegger profession, and their clientele grows in number and in consumption-capacity.

The People were simply fooled! Prohibition, as administered, is the Constitution-goat, and so long as it remains such police-protection costs must increase, year by year, for the now-honorable profession of bootlegging and the Constitution-defilers must be protected, at any cost.

As was expected, the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce has gone on record as opposed to proposed state legislation designed to regulate fishing in California waters by aliens ineligible to citizenship. It fears that, should the measure be enacted into law, a few paltry dollars might be stricken from the city's trade-total.

Dollar-worship, without regard to where or how the dollar originates, prompts opposition to this measure, as well as to all legislation pertaining to the future welfare of California—this land of Heaven's peculiar grace, a land of Nature's noblest race."

The Assembly bill regulating fishing should be enacted into law, and then be rigidly enforced. But, unless the complexion of the 1927 Legislature is directly opposite to that of the 1925 state law-making body, the white- and the yellow-Jap lobby will see that it is not passed.

The Sacramento Chamber of Commerce has undertaken a big task—to have returned to the Capital City of California the head offices of various state officials, commissions and agencies now located elsewhere.

Sacramento is the capital of the state, and all state government officials and offices should be located there, except, possibly, branch offices maintained in other places for the public convenience and their attendants.

If, for any reason, a state official is opposed to making his headquarters in the Capital City, he has the privilege of relinquishing his office. His personal convenience is secondary in importance to the rights of Sacramento as the capital of the state. Success to the Sacramento Chamber of Commerce!

Having successfully invaded the fruit- and the vegetable-growing fields of California, thereby displacing thousands of Whites and securing thousands of rich acres for their worshiped mikado, the Japs are now invading the poultry ranches. When that field has been conquered, also with the aid of backboneless law-enforcement officials, they will swoop down upon the dairy farms, etc., etc. Read what Assemblyman Hubert B. Scudder of Sebastopol, Sonoma County, says:

[illegible]

The following came to The Grizzly Bear from a well-known San Franciscan, and contains food for thought:

"Oh, yes, I very much think so! Jap emperor have very big funeral. Big cost, almost so much as two million dollars. Maybe plenty come from California!

GOD'S PYRAMID

(DELMAR H. WILLIAMS.)

Where rolling sand dunes stretch away
By Morro's blue and winding bay,
And this child of the ocean's pride
Clings fondly to its mother's side;

Where gardens from the friendly shore,
Send sweetly scented greetings o'er;
Where wearied sea birds nightly flock—
All, all alone stands Morro rock.

The mountains, rising far away,
All seem to scorn her by the bay,
And dim and lofty through the haze,
To look at her in dumb amaze;

For when since mountains came to be,
Stood one alone within the sea?
God's hand it was which placed her there
His power and wisdom to declare.

Could studied annals better show
How vain a feeble Pharaoh?
No lash was used, no treasures hid,
While building this—God's pyramid.

Her slopes would scarce a lichen grow,
And man's abode can never know,
For he must deem himself content
If he may scale her steep ascent

To carve his name in bold relief
Far, far above the rocky reef,
And hope that in some future age
They'll note his "strut across the stage."

If evened out and tilled with care
E'en steeps like these might fruitage bear.
Then pause my friend and reason why
This lofty peak should pierce the sky.

You'll find that every rock and race
Has in His plan a proper place.
Hers—just to stand within the sea
And teach to men humility.

CALIFORNIA HAPPENINGS OF FIFTY YEARS AGO

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

THE REPORT OF THE UNITED STATES Senate committee investigating Chinese conditions in California was presented to that body March 1877 by Senator Aaron A. Sargent of this state; it contained 1,200 pages. The committee examined 130 witnesses from all walks of life. The consensus of opinion was that the development of the resources of the Pacific Coast had been greatly enhanced by the cheap and docile Chinese laborers. Now, however, there was an excess of it in the cities and towns of California which was detrimental to the employment of White men.

The Chinese, the report said, were living in filthy dwellings, crowded together; were eating food, mostly imported from China, of the poorest quality; were disregarding sanitary and fire ordinances and, with their vices, were corrupting the morals of the young. There is a lack of veracity amongst them, and as witnesses in the courts they have little regard for the sanctity of an oath. They are non-assimilable with the Whites, and follow closely their own national habits and mode of life. They work for a wage so low that it will not support a White man.

The report was viewed with satisfaction by the anti-Chinese Californians, who confidently expected that Congress would soon take action to suppress the coolie invasion.

Statistics showed that at this time there were 107,000 Chinamen in California. In San Francisco, about 4,000 of them were employed in making shoes, 2,000 as laundrymen, 14,000 as domestics, 3,500 in making 91,000,000 cigars annually for White men to smoke, and 2,500 in other occupations displacing Whites. The Chinamen who did not gamble were negligible in quantity.

Saint Patrick's Day, March 17, was fittingly observed in all the cities and towns where the Irish population was large in numbers. The San Francisco celebration made that which was accorded Washington's Birthday appear as a candlelight compared to a searchlight, and even the Fourth of July parades were eclipsed. A great parade in the forenoon was followed by literary exercises in the afternoon and a grand ball in the evening.

At Sacramento, over 1,000 Hibernians paraded. At a church fair in the evening Frank D. Ryan, then a schoolboy, recited "Emmet's Reply" with marked ability. He became a prominent attorney, served Sacramento County as district attorney, and was an enthusiastic Native Son, being a Past Grand President of the Order.

The Irish born do not parade now on Saint Patrick's Day and their descendants prefer to march on Admission Day, September 9, instead of March 17.

LOCATORS FLOCK TO VENTURA HILLS.

There was an absence of the usual March storms and crops were not doing well. A species of rust appeared in the wheat fields on the west side of the Sacramento Valley and was causing grave fears of serious crop injury among the farmers. It was attributed to the absence of the north wind, which was conceded to be a fungus destroyer.

Black crickets made their presence known and were devastating the Solano County wheat fields.

Owing to a scarcity of feed, sheep were being slaughtered for their pelts and tallow in California South. The Santa Cruz Island Co. was slaughtering 125,000 sheep.

A week's temperance crusade began in San Francisco March 19. A number of eloquent speakers delivered addresses each evening in the Mission Street M. E. Church.

Rev. P. E. Rich, grand lecturer of the Good Templars, began an onslaught on liquor in the churches of Los Angeles. He was aided with addresses by prominent citizens, among them Stephen M. White and Volney E. Howard, who delivered convincing and stirring temperance talks.

The Baldwin hotel, the latest hostelry to be built with up-to-date improvements, was opened on the corner of Market and Powell streets, San Francisco, March 5. It was brilliantly illuminated from basement to tower and thousands of people passed through the corridors admiring it.

E. J. "Lucky" Baldwin purchased a flock of Southdown sheep in England and arranged to import them to stock his Santa Anita rancho in Los Angeles County.

The Serape Oil Co., sinking a shaft a short distance from Ventura City over which to erect a boring outfit, struck a flow of oil that caused a flock of locators to go to the hills adjacent and locate on every section of government land for miles around. Oil was found in a number of places at a depth of 150 feet.

Two prospectors, Frame and Gasparina, found a vein of tin in the Santa Ana Mountains. They shipped a ton of the ore to San Francisco for reduction.

A vein of cinnabar was found near Ventura City that assayed 63 percent quicksilver — a fine showing.

L. Peterson, placer mining a lot in the town of Sonora, Tuolumne County, unearthed with his pick a nugget weighing over one pound.

The Corey mine, in McBride's Gulch, Siskiyou County, while ground-sluicing washed out a ten-pound nugget.

Rough and Ready, Nevada County, was proud of a calf that had one foot like a deer and another like the paw of a bear.

EDITOR OUTWITS ATTORNEY.

A whale entered Anaheim Harbor, Orange County, March 1. It was forty feet long and had been stranded by the ebb tide. Every citizen who could command a rifle or a shotgun came upon the shore and fired in volleys that did no more apparent harm than to infuriate the leviathan, which lashed the shallow water into a foam with the restless beating of its tail. When the tide came in it worked its way into deeper water and swam out to sea.

The blue glass remedy for most diseases became a fad at this time.

A monster stallion named "Samson" was on exhibition in Los Angeles. It was nineteen hands high and weighed 2,100 pounds.

Thomas H. Hendricks, late governor of Indiana and Democratic candidate for vice-president of the United States, visited California, arriving March 15. He first went to Butte County to inspect a hydraulic mine in which he was interested, thence to San Francisco on the 25th. He was constantly entertained during his stay.

Mark Hopkins, treasurer of the Southern Pacific Co., went into a broker's office on Montgomery street, San Francisco, to transact some business, and carried in his hand a package of currency just drawn from a nearby bank amounting to $7,000. He laid it upon the counter beside him and then absentmindedly walked off without it. When he again thought of it he was several blocks away and immediately returned to get it, but found it gone. A number of people had been in and out since he had left the office, but suspicion finally fell on two women who were strangers to those in the office and who could not be located, so the money was considered gone. Several days later a mailcarrier entered Hopkins' office and with other mail laid a package wrapped with brown paper, supposed to be merchandise, upon his desk. After a time it was carelessly opened and found to contain the $ 000 in currency. It had been returned to owner by being dropped into a mailbox, but whom was never found out.

Wm. Hayes, an attorney in San Francis March 20 went to the "Alta" newspaper off and demanded of the managing editor, Gene John McComb, the retraction of a stateme made in the paper regarding himself. He gu the general five minutes to write and sign a s isfactory apology, pulled his watch out of pocket to count the minutes as they ticked aw and a revolver from his hip pocket to enfo his demand. McComb smilingly looked on a engaged the irate attorney in conversation, d ing which he maneuvered for position, and th suddenly grabbed him by the collar, kicked pistol out of his hand, pulled him down stairway, shoved him into a hack and land him at the city jail, where he made a char against him for making threats against life.

STAGE ROBBERS AT WORK.

Judge Ferral of the San Francisco crimi court and the ubiquitous attorney, George Tyler, came into the limelight as combatan After a session of the court they engaged in discussion over the setting of a case for tri when Tyler told the judge he was a "king hoodlums." The judge replied with an epith and then both struck at each other and miss They then clinched, apparently to see who co hug the harder, and neither had an opportun to damage the other with his fists before th were separated. Tyler was arrested for assa and battery.

J. S. Beals, secretary of the California St Board in San Francisco, was found to be an s sconder with $18,000 of its funds. He cleve secured the signatures of the president and me bers of the board of directors to forged loan pers and thereby secured the money.

A man named Blacklock organized the Gulf California Oyster and Canning Company. claimed to have discovered in that gulf an mense oyster bed and proposed to exploit it. induced a bookkeeper named Kellogg to inv in the company, which he did by forging firm's name to two checks for $4,800 and $6,8 Blacklock, after cashing them, immediately anted, but was later apprehended in New Y and brought back to San Francisco.

Leonard Kapus stole enough merchan from his employer's stock to set himself up business a block away in San Francisco. He dis overed through selling goods so cheap the tention of other retailers was attracted and t landed him in jail.

An attempt was made by a lone highwayn to stop the stage from Los Angeles to San Di March 9. His command to halt was not obe by the driver who, lashing his team into a r dashed away. The robber fired at the driv

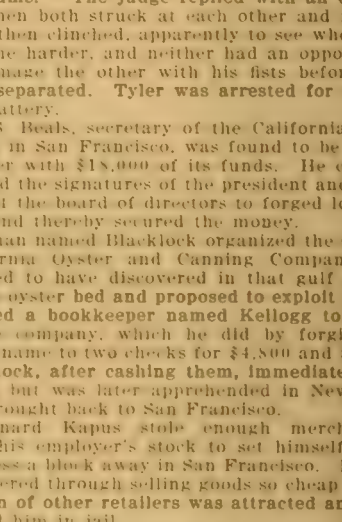
SKETCH OF A CALIFORNIAN



(MAY S. CORCORAN.)

HENRY CLAY HALL WAS BORN AT the Pine Tree Mine on the Las Mariposas, or "Fremont Grant," in Mariposa County, April 1859 and died at Corte Madera, Marin County, November 1926. His obituaries have been written. This is a light historical outline of a life that crossed and recrossed the ways of men more widely known but less impressive in character-forming of the men and women of California; of a teacher whose work, because a labor of love, will go on through generations.

In 1859 the Fremont family lived near Bear Valley. After ten years of legal and personal contest, Colonel Fremont was in full possession of the two great gold producers, the Pine Tree and the Josephine mines. His struggles for them had carried him to the courts of Europe, the halls of Congress and many times across the continent, but at last he found the home of his dreams, the one peaceful home of his manhood, a pretty house enclosed in a park-like pasture on the slope of Mount Bullion.

Among Colonel Fremont's friends was one who, differing from him in almost every issue, remained loyal. This was the forty-niner, J. H. Hall who, with his lovely young Irish wife, conducted the rather palatial—compared to present structures — boarding-house at the Pine Tree. There, into an atmosphere of hope and joy, one bright spring morning Henry Clay Hall opened his eyes to an azure sky that sifted sunlight over a face that never lost its smile.

As spring opened so cheerily for the Halls, the gates of Eden closed for the Fremonts. In their light carriage, drawn by Kentucky ho they drove away toward San Francisco, as c before. But this time they did not take t loved road down the San Joaquin and thr Livermore Pass. Instead, they hurried to St ton, thence by boat to the Bay City, where h hunting began and ended at Black Point. There Bret Hart became their constant visitor. But they missed the loyal friends of the three years on "Fremont's Grant," and they were again and forever wanderers. In 1862 John C. Fremont, with heart in Dixie Land, joined the Union army. He found sorrow and storms.

During the winter of 1861 and 1862 scarcely an echo of war-thunder reached the gay southern settlement of Snellings, the first county-seat of Merced County, on the banks of the Merced where Hall had erected a commodious hotel, but a storm came. The rain began in November and far exceeded the Noah's allotted forty days. J. H. Hutchings, a Mariposa Pioneer, in his "In the Heart of the Sierras" gives a very intimate account and quotes the following description from McKean Buchanan, a famous actor who, with his wife and daughter, were spending the winter months in the Hall hotel. "We were in the Snellings hotel when the flood entirely surrounded us and it. We left the building moving, when my wife and daughter with myself took the precaution to climb an oak tree that stood by the porch, and just as we had reached it, the entire edifice, with all its contents, floated off, sir! In less than three-quarters of an hour after our deliverance from the tree, sir, the tree itself was washed away!"

Mr. and Mrs. Hall, their two little sons George and Henry and tiny daughter, Mrs. Annie Green, a loyal N. D. G. W. whose home is now in Porterville, Tulare County, were adrift on uncharted seas, nothing left but laughter, love and faith. Back they went to Bear Valley.

In 1878, when Governor Fremont, in Prescott, Arizona, was receiving a salary of two thousand a year, out of which he paid ninety dollars a month for house rent and forty for a Chinese cook, Henry Clay Hall was teaching his first school in Bear Valley. Pupils from that school live today from Los Angeles to San Francisco, better men and women for the example set by the simple, honest life of the man they loved. The pretty town is practically gone, but his name echoes in the rocks and his influence is still statewide. Later he taught in Redwood City, Menlo Park and San Jose, was in the pension office in San Francisco, and for many years was principal of schools at Corte Madera, while he taught at night in San Francisco and found time to contribute to educational journals. At one time he made a good campaign for state superintendent of public instruction, but manfully accepted defeat.

Again history throws a picture on the screen. In the late nineties an English mining company, "The Tendron," with a Mr. Johns at the head, and the best of men in all prominent positions including that of schoolteacher, came to Mariposa County and reawakened the village of Whitlock, which had slumbered for near half a century. This new town was unique, in that each house had its library, its music and its religion, the latter a mixture of the Methodist and the Episcopalian rituals. There also was a Good Templars Lodge, where parliamentary laws were studied and dramatic entertainments were well put on, fitting the people for the larger world into which, after about six years, they were suddenly thrust. In San Francisco, Richmond and Berkeley they rose to success.

Shortly after the Tendron shut down, Las Mariposas closed its big mining works, and swift migration from the Sierras to the sea followed. The Merillee's home in Berkeley became a sort of center for the exiles. Here, in 1906, the Mariposa Club was organized, with Henry Clay Hall of Corte Madera as president; no other president was it known. Among county clubs the Mariposa was unique, in that it inaugurated not only a early or semi-yearly reunion, but a series of delightful literary, musical and dance evenings where much real talent and simple good fellowship were displayed. The initial expense, which was quite heavy, was born by a group of people who, with possibly four exceptions—Dr. and Mrs. King, Mrs. Kathryn Weiler and S. J. Trenove—have crossed the great divide. There is sufficient brilliancy remaining to revive the old club.

The third and largest reunion was held in East Shore Park September 9, 1909. Ira Dearborn, nephew of one of George Washington's closest friends, Admiral Dearborn of the Revolution, presided, John H. Corcoran, an orator by nature and Santa Clara College training, delivered the oration, Steve J. Champion, a marvelous tenor, sang, and Liberty Sterne, a loved pianist, played. Henry Clay Hall superintended and glorified all. All have gone; he was the last.

"Mariposa" ever rippled from his lips as the song of a bird, just as Fremont's last words were "Home to California." To both, the sweetest note was "Mariposa!"

ALTHOUGH JOHN COLTER DESERVES an important place in the history of our great West, hitherto his name has been almost unknown, and what was known has been so clouded in legendary tradition that it was uncertain whether the accounts of his exploits were to be considered as truth or myth. The author of this book has, therefore, performed a real service by rescuing from oblivion this hero of the Rockies.

The period of Colter's activity as set forth in the book covers the years from 1803 to 1810, a little less than seven years, and yet during this time, as shown by the author, he was a member of the first American exploring expedition to reach the Pacific Coast; he discovered Yellowstone Lake and the wonders of the surrounding region; he was the first American to set foot in what is now the State of Wyoming; he discovered many passes through the Rocky Mountains, and was probably the first to suggest the feasibility of wagon travel through those mountains; as hunter, trapper and guide he braved all kinds of dangers, often without human companionship, until his risk of life was a daily occurrence.

Colter's name has been preserved in Coulter Creek, but probably he was best known in the local traditional name applied to the region now known as Yellowstone Park, namely "Colter's Hell." By careful study of contemporaneous literature, together with the Biddle map of the Lewis and Clark Expedition published in 1814, the author has been able to gather the data necessary to a more complete understanding of Colter's life during the period.

Colter seems to have belonged to one of the many Scotch-Irish families of western Virginia and Kentucky. It was from here that he enlisted with the Lewis and Clark Expedition as it made its way down the Ohio River in 1803. With that party he served as hunter and came to occupy a position of consideration. He was released from that expedition in 1806, in advance of others, when he had an opportunity to return to the mountains as guide and partner with a small party of trappers.

In the year 1807 Colter was again approaching civilization when, near the mouth of the Platte River, he encountered the expedition of Manuel Lisa on its way to the upper Missouri region. He again was persuaded to return to the mountains and for the next three years was engaged in those activities for which he is entitled to a place in frontier history. Lisa established his fort at the mouth of the Big Horn, but too late in the year to engage in the beaver catch of that season. Since Indian trade was also an important object he decided to summon the Indians of the region to his fort to trade. Colter's knowledge of the district, together with some knowledge of the native languages, indicated him as the man most fitted to act as runner. It was this expedition of 1807 that led Colter to the sources of the Yellowstone and the discovery of Yellowstone Lake.

The Biddle map of 1814 undertook to show "Colter's Route in 1807," doubtless based upon a report made by Colter to William Clark. Since the region was relatively unknown and since Colter's knowledge was of necessity not based on careful surveys, it is but natural that many discrepancies should appear in the Biddle map. Vinton, however, has made a careful comparison of that map with the geographical facts as now known and finds that the route can be followed upon a modern map with a reasonable degree of assurance. A study of the map indicates that he left Fort Manuel and passed up Pryor's Fork to Clark's Fork of the Yellowstone and thence to the Shoshone (Stinkingwater) River, whence he crossed the mountains to Jackson's Hole. Since the waters here flowed in the wrong direction he decided that the Yellowstone lay further to the west and crossed the Teton Range, coming at Pierre's Hole onto the headwaters of the Snake River. He now knew he was beyond the source of the Yellowstone River and re-crossed the divide and came to Jackson Lake; thence turning northward across a low divide he came upon Yellowstone Lake and the source of the Yellowstone River, which he followed down until he came to the Bannock trail, which led him back in the direction of Lisa's Fort.

Although from time to time adventuresome explorers told weird stories of what they had seen in the region of the upper Yellowstone, these reports merely served to discredit them in the opinion of their companions, and the name "Colter's Hell" became more and more a term of ridicule. Evidence, however, shows that that which once caused the report to be disbelieved is now considered the best proof of the authenticity of the Colter journey.

Vinton also gives space to recounting the story of Colter's remarkable escape from the Blackfeet Indians in 1808. Stripped to the skin and expecting any minute to be condemned to torture, Colter found that he was to be given an opportunity to try his fleetness of foot with that of the young Blackfoot braves. Since his life was the prize, he developed more than usual powers and outstripped his enemies in a six-mile race. Smiting down one Indian with his own spear he plunged into the river and found concealment under a raft of driftwood.

The book is a volume of 114 pages, including its index. It is divided into five chapters and an introduction. The map is a reproduction of a portion of the Biddle map accompanying the report of the Lewis and Clark Expedition issued in 1814. This is very valuable as a document and is essential to the volume. A modern map of the same area showing the author's interpretation of Colter's route would also have been a very desirable addition to the work, as the nomenclature to the earlier map is in many cases no longer used.

"John Colter, Discoverer of Yellowstone Park." An Account of His Exploration in 1807 and of His Further Adventures as Hunter, Trapper, Indian Fighter, Pathfinder and Member of the Lewis and Clark Expedition. By Stallo Vinton, A.M., LL.B. With a map. Edward Eberstadt, Publisher, New York, 1926. Price, $3.00.

CALIFORNIA'S "MAGIC" CITY

LOS ANGELES EXPANDED DURING 1926

NINETEEN SQUARE MILES OF TERRITORY was added to Los Angeles during 1926, according to the annual message of Mayor George Cryer to the City Council, bringing the city's total area to 454 square miles. These additional interesting facts were cited in the mayor's message:

Thirty-nine acres were added to the park system, making the total park area 4,797 acres at the close of 1926.

The Bureau of Power and Light installed 14,515 additional house water connections during the year, and laid approximately 269 miles of water mains.

Public improvements accepted by the city during 1926 had a value of $21,000,000, an increase of $4,000,000 over 1925. These improvements included the completion of 175 miles of street pavements—the city now having 4,422 miles of paved streets and the completion of twenty-one pedestrian subways.

The Public Library Department of the city consists of the main library and forty-three branches; during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1926, 5,521,899 volumes of books were handled. The department has assets of $5,629,234.

The Department of Parks has assets of $21,946,609. It maintains thirty three parks, as well as auto camps, golf links, zoological gardens, etc.

The Playground and Recreation Department has assets of $2,191,569. Playgrounds, beaches, mountain camps, clubs and swimming pools are under its jurisdiction.

LOS ANGELES COUNTY.

"Los Angeles County," says the Los Angeles City Chamber of Commerce," has been truly called 'The Land of Balanced Prosperity.' Its vast back country produces almost every known kind of raw material, which its factories convert into finished products which, in turn, are shipped to every corner of the globe. It has over 5,000 factories, turning out over a billion dollars' worth of products annually.

"Los Angeles County is an ideal year 'round playground offering in one compact area, accessible from the metropolitan centers, mountain, seashore and desert scenery typical of every part of the world.

"Scores of grassy golf courses, miles of hiking and bridle trails, vast stretches of beaches and endless miles of excellent paved roads, offer opportunities for every kind of sport or pastime.

"Los Angeles County still maintains leadership in the nation for agricultural production. During the past year, when other sections faced serious depression from overproduction and market difficulties, Los Angeles County, by reason of its wide diversity in agriculture, came through in a sound manner to retain its position as the 'White Spot of America'."

N.S. PLAN BIG INITIATION.

Los Angeles Native Sons are now directing their energies toward a class initiation, in which all the Parlors from Santa Barbara to San Diego have been invited to participate. Responses indicate that this will be one of the largest classes ever initiated locally. The ceremonies are being arranged in honor of Grand President Hilliard E. Welch who, with other grand officers, will be in attendance.

March 18 is the date, and the meeting-place of Ramona Parlor, Patriotic Hall, 1816 South Figueroa street, the place. Following the initiatory ceremonies there will be a vaudeville program, each Los Angeles County Parlor supplying a number.

The initiation is being sponsored by the recently organized Interparlor Committee, Southern District, of which Grand Trustee John T. Newell is the chairman and F. J. Burmester the efficient and hard-working secretary. Active members of this committee are representatives from all the Los Angeles County Parlors, and meetings are held every Friday at 7:30 p. m. in Ramona's clubrooms.

The Native Daughter Parlors of the county have been asked to have representatives at a March meeting of the committee, to discuss plans for the celebration of Admission Day, September 9, and other matters of mutual concern.

RITUAL TEAM WANTS WORK.

One of the best entertainments sponsored by Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W. in some time was that of February 10, put on by the good of the order committee, Lester Reich chairman. An excellent vaudeville program met with the full approval of the big crowd present. Speakers of the evening were Municipal Judge Louis P. Russill and D.D.G.P. Ronald M. Ross.

Los Angeles' March program will consist principally of visits to surrounding Parlors in behalf of the candidacy of Grand Trustee John T. Newell for Grand Third Vice-president at the San

STOCKTON, SAN JOAQUIN COUNTY

Industrial and Agricultural Capital of Interior California

STOCKTON—A METROPOLIS

A. M. Robertson

(MANAGER OF PUBLICITY, STOCKTON CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

STOCKTON IS THE FOREMOST CITY IN California today, perhaps not in size, but in point of interest. Stockton is without question attracting more attention today than any other Pacific Coast city. This is largely due to the tremendous development that is taking place because of the building of a deep-water harbor which will give Stockton all the advantages of a coast city, with the additional advantages of an inland port with all of the vast agricultural resources as added assets.

It might be interesting to note here, that the world's greatest ports are inland ports, and include: Antwerp, Baltimore, Bordeaux, Bremen, Buenos Aires, Cairo, Calcutta, Canton, Glasgow, Hamburg, Hankow, Houston, Hull, London, Montreal, New Orleans, Philadelphia, Portland (Oregon), Rotterdam, Shanghai and Yangtse.

It has been the general rule, rather than the exception, that interior cities developing deep-water harbors have had astounding growth, and that this rule will be fulfilled in Stockton seems certain and assured. This law operates from competition of buyers pushing inland with ships to the center of production, and from the basic fact that deep water affords from five to ten times less transportation costs than by any kind of land carriage. Civic leaders are predicting that within the next five years the population of this city will be doubled. Millions of dollars will be spent within the next few months in carrying the tremendous development program to completion.

Stockton has long been famous for its generous hospitality and recreational attractions, and for its vast agricultural production. Its industrial output has been no small contribution to its prosperity, but with the building of its deep-water harbor to permit entrance to its port of ocean-going vessels, these great assets will be multiplied many times. Stockton's outlook at this time is very optimistic, as is evidenced by great activity in real estate deals, building permits and bank clearings, as well as increased activity in business stores and shops. Every one of Stockton's 208 factories is operating to capacity and the agricultural outlook after the bounteous rains is very bright and encouraging.

In addition to the seven million dollars which will be spent on the development of the deep-water harbor, an additional five millions will be spent within the next few months for new buildings and other improvments, which will include the new postoffice building, at a cost of $640,000; $220,000 for new buildings at the state hospital; $1,500,000 for the building of the Calaveras flood control dam; $350,000 for highway work and construction in San Joaquin County, and $800,000 for new business buildings and apartment houses. Bank clearings for January showed a total of $13,940,800, a gain of $1,031,100 over the total for January 1926.

Strategically located at the head of tidewater, and with the development of its deep-water harbor, Stockton is the economic and agricultural center of Interior California. San Joaquin County, of which Stockton is the county seat, ranks fourth of the 3,065 counties of the nation in agricultural production, with a fifty-million dollar crop annually, which stabilizes the industrial prosperity of the city. There are 208 manufacturing establishments, the principal industries being tractors, harvesters, canneries, cereal mills, ship yards and auto trucks. As the metropolis and distributing center of Interior California, Stockton dispatches the bulk of many products from the soils, forests and mines to Europe, the Orient, Alaska, Mexico, South America and through the Panama to the Atlantic seaboard.

The geographical location of the City of Stockton makes it the portal to the recreational regions of the nearby Sierras, where may be enjoyed every out of door diversion. From Stockton you may quickly and conveniently visit Yosemite, Sequoia and General Grant National Parks, the Calaveras Grove of Big Trees, the scenic wonderland of the Mark Twain and Bret Harte country, Lake Tahoe, at the Sierra's crest, and myriads of smaller Tahoes in their mountain settings. And nearby is the Coast Range, bordering the broad Pacific, with its beaches, bathing, fishing, boating and other recreational facilities.

As has been stated previously, Stockton is attracting today more attention than any other California city, probably because of its deep-water development which will open to cheaper transportation facilities the vast production of the "Great Valley," which comprises the San Joaquin and Sacramento Valleys. In addition to Stockton's industrial production, is the vast production from agricultural enterprises, which reaches the enormous total of $50,000,000 annually. It is hard to imagine what it will mean to producers and consumers alike, when the bulk of this vast production is marketed and distributed at less cost.

To give some idea of the diversity of the agricultural production, San Joaquin County, of which Stockton is the county seat, has more than fifty farm products of commercial importance. Four crops producing at the rate of $5,000,000 or more annually, sixteen products giving an annual yield of $750,000 or more each, twenty returning annually $500,000 or more each, and ten producing $300,000 or more each. Never has this county experienced serious agricultural depression. Diversity, plus volume, means safety and prosperity. These various crops include a wide variety of deciduous fruits, such as peaches, figs, shipping plums, cherries, prunes, apricots and pears, field crops include wheat, barley, corn, oats, beans, sugar-beets and vegetables, which latter include the vast production of Irish potatoes for which San Joaquin County is famous. Market gardening has developed into an industry of considerable magnitude; grape growing, which includes the various varieties of table grapes; walnuts and almonds, poultry raising and dairying.

These crops and other miscellaneous crops attain their highest quality and production in San Joaquin County because of excellent soil, water and climatic conditions; three main factors which go hand in hand in making San Joaquin County the outstanding agricultural producing county in the nation. Coupled with these three important production factors, is the factor of

TRADE RECORDS SHATTERED AT SAN PEDRO

(STANLEY A. WHEELER.)

TRADE RECORDS FOR THE HARBOR at San Pedro and Wilmington which eclipsed all previous marks and which revealed 1926 as the largest single year in both foreign and domestic commerce, were made public recently in a statistical report issued by the Los Angeles Board of Harbor Commissioners.

The total business done by the port during the twelve-month period was $878,615,132, a figure which exceeds the year 1925 by more than $150,000,000, and betters the next best year, 1923, by more than $200,000,000.

With the exception of inbound and outbound trade with Hawaii, every class of commerce through the port increased last year. The Hawaiian trade showed but small decreases. Both coastwise and intercoastal commerce showed substantial gains in both tonnage and valuation of cargoes handled.

The harbor commission's report also revealed the fact that commerce with foreign nations through the port of Los Angeles was valued at $141,747,488, an increase of $33,203,437, as compared to 1925. In weight, the gain in foreign trade for the last year was more than one million tons.

6,684 VESSELS ARRIVED.

Commercial ship arrivals at San Pedro during 1926 showed a gain of 599 over the record of 1925. Of the 6,684 vessels arriving last year, 5,628 were under the Flag of the United States, 482 under the colors of the British Empire, 144 Norwegian, 132 Japanese, 62 Mexican, 52 French, 42 Dutch, 41 Swedish, 32 German, 22 Danish, 17 Panamanian, 15 Italian, 9 Danzig Free State, and one each of Argentine Republic, Belgium, Ecuador and Greece.

The increase of net tonnage of vessels arriving in 1926, as compared with the arrivals of 1925, was 1,802,626 tons.

Of the vessels arriving at the harbor during the last calendar year, 1,478 were engaged in foreign trade, 1,379 in intercoastal commerce, 3,776 in coastwise traffic and 51 in non-contiguous coastwise and Hawaiian trade.

Oil shipments from San Pedro approximated 107,598,056 barrels for the year. Lumber imports from the Pacific northwest reached a new high mark of 1,197,044,989 board-feet.

ANNIVERSARY OBSERVED.

"Charter members' night" was observed by Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 N.S.G.W. February 17. The date was but two days after the second anniversary of its institution, and the event was in recognition of that occasion. Six candidates were initiated. Grand Trustee John T. Newell was the honored guest and speaker for the evening. Long Beach Parlor No. 239 N.S.G.W., through President Harold Oliver, presented a $60 check for the Parlor's Grand Parlor fund. President "Bill" Durr has appointed a big "booster" committee to represent Sepulveda at all neighboring Parlors' doings, and a campaign committee, headed by First Vice-president Buchanan, to round up a large class of candidates to represent the Parlor at the Los Angeles County joint initiation March 18.

Sepulveda's much announced boxing show, to be staged for the benefit of the coming Grand Parlor session in San Pedro, is now scheduled for the latter half of March. It was postponed from the evening of February 12. The Wilmington Athletic Club, at Wilmington, has donated its big arena for the purpose.

James W. Mee, general convention chairman for Sepulveda, left his home at San Pedro early in February for an indefinite stay at Banning, Riverside County. He is now convalescing from a prolonged period of ill health. Mrs. Mee, who has also been ill, accompanied him. While "Jim" Mee is absent the work of planning for NATIVE DAUGHTER ACTIVITIES.

The card party given the afternoon of February 17 by Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 N.D.G.W. was the most successful for some time. Mary Krog and Amy Hagenow were at large. Prizes and refreshments were donated by the members, making the receipts clear profit. Prizes were awarded as follows: Door, Mrs. H. Lutz, Sr.; at five hundred, Mrs. Ethel Smith and Loretta Sarcianx; at bridge, Ebba Walsworth and Marie Wilson. Refreshments were served at the close of the play.

At the evening meeting of the Parlor one candidate was initiated. President Gertrude Riepe appointed Secretary Charlotte K. Bennett, First Vice-president Hazel Raines and Second Vice-president Abigail Hagenow to meet with the Interparlor Committee N.S.G.W. Refreshments were served by this committee. Amy Hagenow (chairman), Marie Smith, Mary Bailey, Zilda Dellan.

The Parlor's history and landmarks committee, Florence Schoneman (chairman), Esther Wilks, Lydia Boreham, is to co-operate with Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 N.S.G.W. in arranging for the marking of the Dominguez battlefield during the N.S.G.W. Grand Parlor in San Pedro in May. The homeless children committee is to resume the monthly sewing bees for the Allen Junior Home, recently discontinued. In charge will be: Carrie Kuhlmann (chairman), Modesta Contos, Victoria Adler. First Vice-president Hazel Raines has been delegated to organize a drill team.

D.D.G.P. Bertha Hitt, accompanied by a delegation of Long Beach No. 154 N.D.G.W. members, visited Rudecinda February 3, when a candidate was initiated. There were short talks by Kate McFadyen, Geneva Johnson, Lenora Dodd, Mamie Ritter and D.D.G.P. Hitt. Refreshments were served by the February good of the order committee: Mary Krog (chairman), Mary Bailey, Lydia Boreham. February 23 President Gertrude Riepe and Secretary Charlotte Bennett represented Rudecinda at Long Beach's luncheon and card party. Cora Jensen Dwight has been enjoying an extended Eastern visit.

In the first heat "Occident" broke badly and was several lengths behind at the half, but from there trotted steadily and was beaten by a neck in 2:22. "Bodine" took the next two heats in 2:23 and 2:25, trotting without making a break in any heat.

The Republican party of Sacramento held a nominating primary March 16 to name candidates for city offices at an election to be held in April. It was a precursor of the present state primary law.

The ship "Frank Jones" was being towed to sea by a tug March 29 when the hawser broke and it drifted ashore below Fort Point, in San Francisco Bay, and was wrecked. It was valued at $70,000 and was sold at auction for $4,700.

Five little children playing in the granary of James Yates, a farmer near Colusa City, March 28 caused a pile of sacks of grain to fall. A little 2-year-old girl named Farley was killed. The other children were saved from being suffocated by the Chinese cook being fortunately near and rescuing them.

A council of nine, directing the affairs of the organization, was found to have been created and a score of arrests followed.

PASADENA'S MAGNIFICENT NEW PUBLIC LIBRARY

Harry L. Roberts

(MANAGER, PUBLICITY DEPARTMENT,
PASADENA CHAMBER OF COMMERCE AND CIVIC ASSOCIATION.)

PASADENA'S NEW PUBLIC LIBRARY, first completed unit of the Crown City's $3,500,000 civic center, is now in use. The big iron gates across the half-dozen doorways which provide admittance to the patio of the building were thrown open for the first time on Lincoln's Birthday, February 12. During the day, thousands of persons inspected the splendid new structure, and at three o'clock in the afternoon it was formally dedicated by city officials and civic leaders.

Built around an open courtyard, or patio, in which shrubs, ferns and tropical trees are growing, the new building is distinctively Californian in style of architecture. The architects have achieved a definite robustness that might be traced, perhaps, to certain classical buildings of the Roman period, but the actual detail itself is more related to the Italian Renaissance than to any other period. However, the scheme does not pretend to be archaeological, but rather it is an adaptation of commonly used classical forms to the problem of building a working library in a California setting, and the resultant style might well be called Californian.

The building was designed by Myron Hunt, internationally-known architect, and his associates. The program outlined for the architects, in addition to giving the number of required square feet in different departments and the number of cubic feet which the entire building might contain, also required that there be an outdoor reading room for children and an outdoor reading room for adults. The latter requirement made mandatory a one-story building, since the outdoor reading room for children was to be adjacent to the children's department, and the outdoor reading room for adults must be adjacent to the adults' department.

The architects desired as a feature of the building some sort of an entrance court that would be reminiscent of the buildings of classical Europe. Accordingly, it was decided to combine the space required for such a court and the space required for two outdoor reading rooms into one enclosed garden that would be capable of picking up the sunlight when desired, producing shade when desired, picking up the trade wind in the summer and permitting outdoor readers to get out of the wind and yet be in the sun in winter. This was achieved by making the garden face the south, bounded by the main building on the north and by the adults' department and the children's wing on the east and west, with a typical classical wall connecting the fronts of the two projecting wings.

The resultant achievement is the big achievement of the building. Entrance to the patio makes the visitor pause, so utter is the beauty of the place within. Huge palms that have been growing for years in other spots have been taken up and re-planted here. Ferns and shrubs are growing. Broad stone benches are distributed throughout the beautiful garden. Water bubbles from an alabaster fountain which is a duplicate of the Mirador de Daraxa at Alhambra in Spain. Hedges separate the two outdoor reading rooms from each other and from the remainder of the garden. The facade of the main structure, magnificent in classical design, is only completely discerned from inside the patio.

Entrance to the circulation hall within only enhances the mood engendered by the outer aspect. Light falls softly from the high windows. All about are evidences of mellow refinement, that innate charm which goes with books and literature. Draperies in gold, orange and henna shades lend color to the rich, dark oak woodwork.

At the southwest corner of the structure is the Peter Pan room, a beautiful place for children. At the southeast corner is the newspaper and periodical room. The library and stack rooms lie in the rear of the circulation hall.

Acoustic plaster has been used in most of the rooms. Sound waves are absorbed to such an extent that a person may shout in one room and not be heard in the next.

All persons entering the library must do so through the patio and the circulation hall. Here all business of issuing and receiving books is done. Public telephones and check rooms are provided in the circulation hall. There is a "browsing corner," where standard books are placed for inspection only, and a "book-of-the-day corner," where books concerning holidays and special observances are to be had. Still another corner is devoted to new books.

While the building is essentially one story, three stories have been provided in the center of the building for stacking books. The stack rooms will accommodate 250,000 volumes. In the reference room are 5,000 books. There are other rooms devoted to bound magazines, government documents and research material. One room is devoted entirely to pictures, another to current newspapers.

In the children's department, the Peter Pan room, is a fireplace surmounted by a Peter Pan frieze sculptured and presented to the children by Miss Maud Daggett. A model ship, "Old Ironsides," more formally known as the "Constitution," a gift of L. H. Farlow, also is in this room. Bookshelves are low and the furniture has been made for children of all sizes.

The library also contains exhibit rooms and an auditorium with a seating capacity of three hundred. Motion-picture apparatus is available.

The fine arts and California room contains a valuable collection of rare books, prints and manuscripts. Among the books of unusual historic interest is the "Life of Junipero Serra," by Father Palou, written in Spanish in 1787, still in its original bindings of parchment and leather thongs. With similar bindings are a five-volume set of the "Archives of the West Indies," and a sixteen-volume set on the French missions. All are mellowed and hallowed with age.

Of interest to all Californians, are the "Dame Shirley Letters from California Mines," written in 1851, and also a set of John Muir's works on California and Charles F. Saunders' books on the trees, shrubs and birds of California. Also of much interest is the exhibit of autographs, including those of Vallejo, Pico, Sherman and John Sutter.

Total cost of the new library was approximately $850,000. Thirty contractors were associated in the work of building it and one thousand workmen were employed.

That Pasadena deserves a fine library is evidenced by the fact that the Pasadena per-capita circulation of public library volumes is among the ten highest in the United States. The library has 60,601 registered borrowers, and in 1926 circulated 939,252 books. The public library staff totals sixty-seven persons.

The library is one of three buildings to comprise the new Pasadena Civic Center. Construction of the civic center was provided for by a bond issue in the sum of $3,500,000 endorsed and supported by the Pasadena Chamber of Commerce and successful at the polls by an overwhelming vote. The new Pasadena City Hall, second of the civic center buildings, is now about three-fourths completed. It will be finished late in the summer or early in the fall of this year. The third structure, a municipal auditorium, will be built at a later date.

ONE HUNDREDTH ANNIVERSARY SHASTA'S DISCOVERY BY WHITE MAN.

Redding (Shasta County)—February 14 was the one hundredth anniversary of the discovery of Mount Shasta by a White man—Peter Skene Ogden. Shasta is a quiescent volcano, 14,162 feet above sea level.

Peter Skene Ogden, coming south from the Hudson Bay Company post at Fort Vancouver, on the Columbia River, wrote in his journal, under date of February 14, 1827: "There is a mountain equal in height to Mount Hood or Vancouver. I have named it Sastise." This is the first record of a White man having gazed upon the mountain.

The name "Sastise" was changed to Shasta. The mountain referred to in Ogden's journal as "Vancouver" is supposed to be Rainier. Shasta is generally conceded to be the most beautiful mountain in the world.

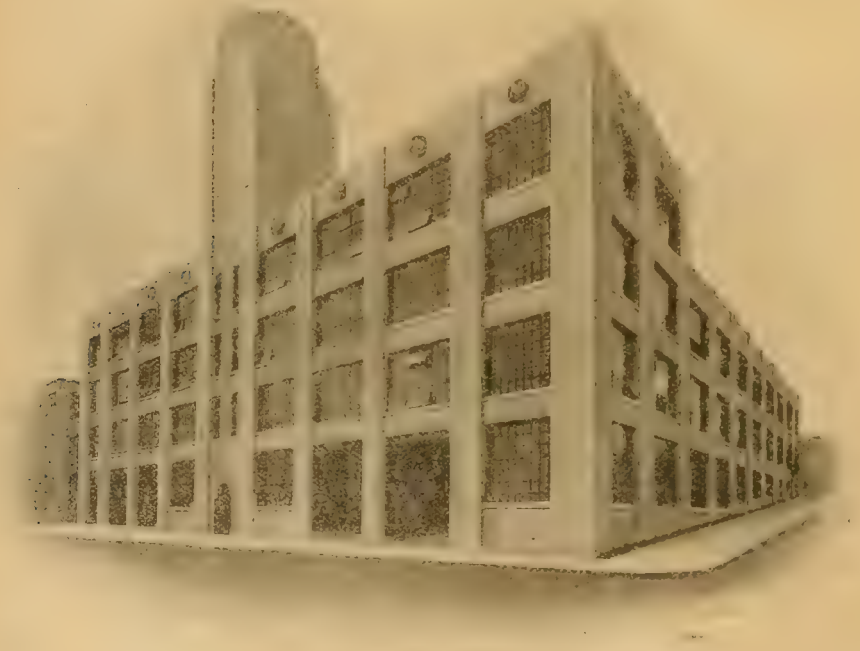
SAN FRANCISCO

THE BIG CITY  THAT KNOWS HOW

BEHIND THE SCENES IN SAN FRANCISCO INDUSTRY

Capen A. Fleming

(MANAGER, INDUSTRIAL DEPARTMENT, SAN FRANCISCO CHAMBER COMMERCE.)



SAN FRANCISCO IS KNOWN THE WORLD over as the city which knows the art of entertaining, but far too little is known of San Francisco's industry in its several lines, which makes possible the spectacular. Here we shall consider this phase of our industrial life, digressing now and then to allude to some line of manufacture immediately related to the one under discussion, although not particularly related to our entertainment industries.

Let us start with the manufacture locally of tents, especially the huge tents used by temporary exhibitions such as circuses, road shows, etc. One of our manufacturers has to his credit the largest tent in the world, the one seen about three years ago at San Carlos on the peninsula, when the Tri-Cities Chamber of Commerce held its commercial exposition. The ordinary circus tent is a six-pole affair, but this record-breaker had twenty-eight main poles.

tions, both in Reno and in the exposition grounds, as well as the building facades and interior decorations, will be San Francisco-produced, and when we stop to consider that the wealth of display, both of the Shrine convention held here in 1922 and of the Diamond Jubilee celebration in 1925, was also produced here we may know that Reno's exposition will be well done.

While we are on the subject of the manufacture of canvas goods, we must not overlook our large production of small camp tents, awnings, yacht sails and other canvas articles, as well as large tents, because these are produced here in large quantities by several plants. One of these, perhaps the largest tent and bag maker in the West, is now constructing a model, architecturally beautiful factory, covering a half-block of ground.

But, speaking of the Shrine convention, calls to mind the colorful regalia of the many lodges.

WHERE THE LARGEST TENTS AND AWNINGS IN THE WORLD ARE MADE.
A Model Factory, just completed in San Francisco, in which are produced many of the "props" for the Nation's Fairs and Carnivals.

The automobile shows of San Francisco and Oakland are held in their respective auditoriums, but not until those vast halls have been transformed by the handiwork of our San Francisco manufacturer. Those familiar with the interior of the Exposition Auditorium in the Civic Center, San Francisco, may hardly realize that the canvas canopy, or false ceiling which gracefully screens the steel girders from view, weighs twenty-eight tons. And yet, such a canopy as this is only one part of the program to be carried out in changing the auditorium into a fairyland palace for the automobile show.

This manufacturer does similar work preparatory to the grand opera season, both here and in Los Angeles. The next big job is for the Nevada Transcontinental Highways Exposition, to be held in Reno, Nevada State. All the street decora-

In this connection, too, San Francisco's industry is ready to serve. One of our two lodge and regalia makers claims to have the oldest establishment in San Francisco, carried on under the management of a continuous family. Ever since 1854 this concern has been trimming in solid gold and silver the conventional regalia prescribed by fraternal orders, their festive banners, the gold-trimmed caps of the higher naval officers, etc. This manufacturer has a reputation that brings orders from up and down the coast and from across the continent.

While considering the subject of uniforms we must not overlook the manufacturer here who turns out large quantities of uniform dresses for girls in public schools, where regulations requiring a uniform dress have been adopted. San Francisco stands high in meeting this demand, and ships these dresses to merchants all over the West.

But there are other uniforms in school life which San Francisco's industry supplies. Here are made flannel baseball uniforms, canvas football suits, basketball outfits, duck trousers and women's gymnasium clothing.

In the first place, the colorful and distinctive uniforms such as are worn by the usher staff of the modern theater are made here. Besides this we have three theater costume manufacturers who maintain establishments which would be an eye-opener to anyone who is unacquainted with what is going on here in this line. From these establishments come the costumes for many of the vaudeville acts in Northern California theaters, as well as for local stock companies, home-talent plays, university plays as far away as Arizona, minstrel shows, masquerades, pageants as far away as Texas, and the like. In the high-ceiling rooms of these costume manufactories hang thousands of different types of uniforms and costumes, which are sent from time to time to points all over the West, from which they return to be thoroughly disinfected, cleaned and pressed. If the call is for something that cannot be found in the stock of costumes already made in the workrooms, then the order is made up according to the requirement, and when it has served its purpose and has been returned it goes into stock to be ready for another call.

Besides the thousands of garments which hang in the display rooms, each of these manufacturers has an additional warehouse where many thousands more of uniforms and costumes are stored, awaiting call to duty. To give some conception of what is in these warehouses and of the ability to serve in a large way on short notice, it may be noted that two of our manufacturers had, together, 25,000 costumes in the grand parade at the time of the Diamond Jubilee celebration held in September 1925. One manufacturer supplied 3,500 Spanish suits made of velour costing $1.65 a yard, with four and one-half yards to the suit, which means that 15,750 yards of velour was used, at a cost of approximately $26,000, and all of the goods were bought locally, as well as made locally into Spanish suits for the festive march. This is just one of the variety of suits or costumes which fills the warehouses until they are called for by some town or city in our trade territory.

One of our costume makers maintains as a part of his service an agency for registration of theatrical talent, where 10,000 people are listed, and also has a try-out theater, said to be unique for the whole country, where a theater manager can arrange and practice an act while [illegible] theater is in operation, and while the costumes are being made in the rear workrooms. Another manufacturer has tin helmets and other paraphernalia of this sort, made locally under his supervision.

Hall," "The Sea Hawk," "The Scarlet Letter" and others, were you aware that you were seeing throughout the picture costumes made here in San Francisco by one of our manufacturers? An interesting fact in this connection is that there is no faking in the material or workmanship which goes into these gowns and outfits for the moving pictures. For instance, the 200 pairs of high leather boots used in "The Sea Hawk" were made in a local shoe factory as carefully and of as good material as if they had been made for permanent wear.

Incidentally, the gold, silver or bronze printed labels carrying the manufacturer's or merchant's name used in millinery, caps, garments, etc., are printed in San Francisco in at least three plants. And then, too, the coat hangers upon which finished garments of all kinds hang, or perhaps which you use in your own wardrobe, are made here in one factory.

But there are three other types of local manufacture which make possible festive entertainment and those are artificial flowers (which one concern makes for elaborate decorations), badges and flags. Badges for conventions, luncheon club members and almost a hundred and one other uses are made here. Every taxicab or other licensed driver's badge seen throughout California was made here by the lowest bidder, under state contract.

SAVE THIS RECREATION GROUND.

From Stella E. MacKintosh of Buena Vista Parlor No. 68 N.D.G.W., a member of the Tamalpais Conservation Club, The Grizzly Bear received the following, under date of February 15:

"The Tamalpais Conservation Club, with the assistance of the various hiking clubs and other organizations throughout the State of California, is attempting to secure a large portion of the southern slope of Mount Tamalpais to be added to the Muir Woods Park, or to be at the present time secured for a state park. Owners of the land are preparing to cut it up into lots to be sold, thus taking away from the sons and daughters of the state one of the finest scenic and hiking spots in the world. Our aim is to prevent the loss of this country to all but a few who might purchase the lots, and to secure for future generations a natural park.

"Bill No. 677 in the State Assembly should be passed during the session of the Legislature which convened February 23. The assistance of Native Sons and Native Daughters in passing this bill will be greatly appreciated by not only the organizations working for its passage but by the whole state when the proposition is better understood. Letters to members of the Legislature urging the passage of the bill will be a great help.

"If you, through your valuable paper, can give this matter some publicity, we, Native Sons and Native Daughters who are working to preserve the beauties of our California will be very grateful."

BASKETBALL CHAMPIONSHIP.

The team of Fruitvale Parlor No. 252 (Oakland) became the Native Sons' championship basketball aggregation of the San Francisco Bay district when, January 25, it defeated, by a score of 37 to 26, that of Marshall Parlor No. 202, the champion team of the San Francisco City Parlors. Five hundred enthusiasts witnessed the play.

In a preliminary event, the team of South San Francisco Parlor No. 157 defeated that of California Parlor No. 1 by a score of 24 to 23.

On behalf of Grand President Hilliard E. Welch, Grand Trustee Alfred H. McKnew presented to the Marshall team a handsome silver trophy, offered to the Parlor winning the San Francisco City tournament.

GOOD SHOWING.

Grand Second Vice-president James A. Wilson officially visited San Francisco Parlor No. 49 N.S.G.W. when four candidates were initiated. Officers were installed by D.D.G.P. Jesse Miller, Ernest Cogozzo becoming president. A past president's emblem was presented to Charles Hagman.

San Francisco closed the year 1926 with 436 members and assets of $14,748. Efforts are being made to secure sufficient additional members to give the Parlor another delegate to the San Pedro Grand Parlor in May. Plans are now

THIRTY-NINTH ANNIVERSARY.

National Parlor No. 118 N.S.G.W. celebrated with a banquet the thirty-ninth anniversary of its institution. At the reunion were a hundred members, among them being fifteen charter members, the oldest 69 years of age. Officers of the Parlor were installed January 27, Merton L. Meeker becoming president.

BIG CLASS PROMISED.

The San Francisco N.S.G.W. Extension of the Order Committee is actively engaged in preparing for the class initiation in honor of Grand President Hilliard E. Welch at Native Sons' Building April 2.

At a meeting of the committee February 18, attended by representatives of all the San Francisco Parlors, it was reported that to date applications had been received from more than a hundred candidates. This indicates that the April 2 class will number not less than three hundred.

TO REDUCE DEATH TOLL.

With a definite schedule of minimum penalties for violation of traffic regulations in effect, San Francisco has entered a new era of traffic law enforcement in the concerted effort launched by the California State Automobile Association to reduce the street accident death toll which has reached record figures.

Certainty of punishment was deemed the strongest deterrent to disregard of traffic regulations by the new Traffic Law Enforcement Board, organized at a conference called by the automobile association to co-ordinate the activities of law-enforcing agencies, public officials, the press and organized motordom in an intensive and sustained movement of safety education and tightening of regulations.

Minimum fines, suspension of licenses and jail sentences are provided in the schedule for those infractions of the law held most likely to lead to accidents. The penalty list covers speeding, reckless driving, passing arterial stops, ignoring automatic signals, driving through safety zones, passing street cars on left hand side, passing street cars within six feet or in excess of ten miles an hour while passengers are entering or leaving the street car, and reckless or dangerous speed at intersections or through school zones.

The San Francisco Board of Education was requested by the traffic law enforcement group to instruct all teachers to caution schoolchildren to exercise more care in the use of city streets. Children will be urged to cross at crossings and be warned against playing in the streets.

"HOW THE STORY GREW."

Buena Vista Parlor No. 68 N.D.G.W. had interesting meetings during February. The 10th Mrs. Mary L. Growny produced "How the Story Grew," featuring Miss Amanda Buhman, Mms. Helen Kennedy, Jennie Greene, Nellie Rader, Josie Parker, Jennie Morgan, May Lewis, Mary Growny. Refreshments were served by Mms. Gertrude Bury, Viola Wehe, Charlotte H. Mackintosh, H. Leader.

The 24th the whist tournament, conducted the past six months, was concluded. It was in charge of Mms. Gertrude Bury. D.D.G.P. Agnes Curry was the honor guest. The members will contribute fifty cents each for the purchase of a tree for the Parlor in the Grand Parlor's proposed Humboldt County memorial grove of redwoods. Grand President Pearl Lamb will officially visit the Parlor March 17.

SILVER ANNIVERSARY.

The Silver Anniversary of Genevieve Parlor No. 132 N.D.G.W. was celebrated with an elaborate banquet and musical program. One hundred and fifty members were present. While the guests of honor were being escorted to their places "I Love You, California," was played by an orchestra. "The Star Spangled Banner" was then sung, led by Irene Craigie. President May Powers introduced the following guests: Past Grand President Genevieve Watson Baker, who instituted the Parlor and for whom it was named; Mrs. Agnes Troy, the organizer, and who has been the district deputy for twenty years; Grand Vice-president Mae Himes Noonan; Grand Greene, Miss E. Douglas, Mrs. G. Bury, Mrs. E. Wilson; the little mascot of the drum and bugle corps, Aileen Taube, and Mrs. E. Schier of James Lick Parlor No. 220.

The tables were beautifully decorated and a silver souvenir was at each plate. The charter members were given silver and gold loving cups, inscribed with name, name of the Parlor and 1902-1927. During the banquet, piano selections were rendered by Miss Roberts, "A Welcome" was read by Ruth Echeverria, Mary Treub sang "Mother Machree," Bessie Sherman entertained with a classical piano number, a humorous recitation was given by Aileen Taube and specialties were given by Queenie La Salle and the Lawliss sisters. Grand Organist Troy and Agnes Troy sang "Genevieve" and led in old-time community songs. All of the guests of honor favored either with a toast or witty remarks. The following original poem, in honor of the occasion, was read by Past Grand President Baker:

Just take a little stroll with me,
Along the lane of memory,
And I will show you a little room
Where some pretty flowers began to bloom

This bouquet was one of buds,
Precious, yes and rare,
For some of our finest flowers
Began to blossom there.

Many of those buds are here tonight,
Developed into lovely flowers,
And I doubt if better we could sight
In many fine garden bowers

With tireless energy they pushed forth,
The highest honors to seek,
And in twenty five years they have brought
Genevieve Parlor close to the peak.

What though some days may have been dark!
Is it any wonder that they should win,
For they have ever kept alive the spark
Of enthusiasm, courage, vigor and vim.

For twenty five years they've stood the test,
The true and loyal little band,
Until Genevieve Parlor ranks with the best,
Its fame spreading on every hand

So, all hail to you, Native Daughters
Of this fair and golden land,
May good luck, success and happiness
Forever with you stand.

Pulling together you soon will reach the peak,
For ever before you is the pinnacle you seek
So, here's to the pretty flowers of nineteen hundred two,
And as Loyal Native Daughters I greet each one of you

March 10 Grand President Pearl Lamb will pay an official visit to Genevieve. At that time a California State (Bear) Flag, just purchased by the Parlor, will be used for the first time during the ritualistic work and Past Grand President Baker will present an American Flag, for the president's station, as a token of her love for the Parlor which bears her name.

SEVEN INITIATED.

February 10 Grand President Pearl Lamb paid an official visit to Keith Parlor No. 137 N.D.G.W. There was a large attendance, included among the visitors being Past Grand President May C. Boldemann, Grand Trustee May Edwards, Grand Inside Sentinel Evelyn I. Carlson, D.D.G.P. Lola Horgan.

Seven candidates were initiated and received hearty congratulations from President Helma Richter. Grand President Lamb spoke on the necessity of aiding the homeless children cause. Refreshments were served in a hall artistically decorated with valentine lanterns and hearts. The grand officers and initiates were presented with red hearts filled with candies as tokens of the Parlor's friendship.

UNITED EFFORTS BRING SUCCESS.

Officers of Linda Rosa Parlor No. 170 N.D.G.W. have been installed by D.D.G.P. Kate, Emily Taylor becoming president. A buffet supper closed the ceremonies. The Parlor mourns the recent passing of Mrs. Laura Fuller, one of its members. March 9, Linda Rosa will have a card party at its clubrooms, 2174 Market street. Handwork prizes will be distributed. Score cards are 25 cents.

"The prospects for 1927 are of the best," says Helen O'Connell, a trustee of Linda Rosa. "Our official family, under the leadership of Emily Taylor, is a well-selected staff of which any Parlor may be proud. What has the year in store for us? Just what the members put into it. The Parlor will be just what we make it. There is work to do, and it must be done. Only by uniting our efforts for the good of the Parlor will success be ours. Let us make 1927 the banner year of our Parlor. Let us stand ever ready to help the officers. Let us be up, and doing."

ANOTHER CHAPTER CLOSED.

January 25 was a big night for Castro Parlor No. 178 N.D.G.W. It was the Parlor's seventeenth institution, and was observed with a banquet—not of the hotel variety at so much per plate, but a real, home prepared turkey dinner, cooked and served by the members of a committee headed by Alice Lane. The table was prettily decorated, pink being the color scheme. Ninety members and D.D.G.P. Ella Teeling enjoyed the feast, and were unanimous in giving thanks to the capable committee.

A tempting and attractive birthday cake was the center of attraction upon the festal board. Its seventeen candles reminded that another chapter in the Parlor's book of fraternal life had been closed—a chapter with a marked upward trend in every direction—and the members look forward to the new year with still higher hopes. An impromptu program rounded out a very happy evening.

NATIVE SONS GUESTS.

Twin Peaks Parlor No. 185 N.D.G.W. entertained Twin Peaks Parlor No. 214 N.S.G.W. January 19. Most of the evening was given over to dancing and at 11:30 supper was served. Six candidates were initiated January 11. The following members contributed the talent for the excellent program: Frances Gellies, Marjorie Reid, Lillian Long, Margaret Blakely, Vera Gunn, Viola Paone, Ters Comsky.

TRAGEDY RECALLED.

Hattie Pittman, born at San Jose, Santa Clara County, in 1864, passed away in San Francisco February 6, survived by her husband, J. N. Pittman (Sacramento Parlor No. 3 N.S.G.W.), and four children.

Her parents, John and Catherine Brett, came from Ireland by way of Panama in 1858 and settled in San Jose. April 30, 1882, their home caught fire at night and they were burned to death while asleep.

PLANS ADVANCED FOR CALIFORNIA ALL-COAST HIGHWAY.

Plans for a California all-coast highway from the northern boundary to San Diego are being advanced with the idea of financing the project through a joint highway district, the California State Automobile Association reports, as the result of a recent meeting in San Francisco of supervisors from ten of the coastal counties.

George H. Rostron, chairman of the Santa Cruz County Board of Supervisors, who presided, made clear that it was not the plan of the supervisors to ask for inclusion of new sections of this route in the present state highway system. He declared that co-operation between the officials of the counties interested would secure the best results.

The California State Automobile Association has loaned the services of its highway engineer, C. C. Cottrell, to the supervisors to assist in perfecting plans for building the uncompleted portions of the proposed all-coast route. He says:

"Inspection of a California highway map shows a highway hugging the coast from the Oregon line to Eureka, from Carmel to San Simeon and from Las Cruces to the Mexican line. At other points the highway goes inland for ease of construction and to serve sections of greater population.

"In addition to the sections named, there are many short sections of roads, which if connected by other sections would form a continuous highway along the entire California coastline. The joint highway district plan provides the only practical means of getting these short sections improved.

"This proposed road would not only provide a through route along the coastline, but would open up many regions now inaccessible to the motorist, regions of unsurpassed scenic beauty. It was the consensus of opinion at the conference of supervisors that the project would be handled entirely as a supervisorial proposition and that no trail-marking or booster organization would be authorized to promote the formation of the joint highway district."

LONG BEACH'S ROMANTIC HISTORY DATES BACK 400 YEARS

A. A. Miller

(SECRETARY PUBLICITY DEPARTMENT, LONG BEACH CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

TO THE LOVERS OF HISTORY AND romance, Long Beach offers the setting for one of the most fascinating stories in all Southern California. Before the Spanish adventurers sailed their galleys into the quiet San Pedro Bay, Indians roamed the land—Indians of a fairer rank than inhabited other parts of the country and of a higher order of intelligence; Indians that built boats and navigated the coast and lived in homes instead of tepees.

The first historical record of Long Beach dates back to October 7, 1542, almost 400 years ago. On that date the Spanish explorer, Cabrillo, was proceeding up the California coast and he wrote: "We saw many valleys and much level land and many smokes, and in the interior Sierras we were at dusk near an island [now known as Catalina] which was about seven leagues from the mainland. On the following day we came near the mainland in a great bay [declared by Bancroft to be San Pedro] which we named 'Bahiade Los Fumos,' on account of the numerous smokes we saw upon it."

The smokes to which the writing referred, according to an account of this episode printed in "Ranchos of the Sunset," a booklet on the history of Long Beach, published by the Security Trust & Savings Bank, were made by Indians burning off the grass of the plains to facilitate their rabbit drives.

A half-century later another Spanish explorer, Vizcaino, put in at the bay, and not knowing that it had previously been named called it San Pedro. He later crossed to the island and named it Catalina. There he stayed a day or two and found the inhabitants to be fishermen and traders, with large, well-built canoes and homes.

It was a century and a half later, in the late 1700s, that Father Junipero Serra, the first White man in California, traveled over ground now covered by Long Beach and recorded the name of the Indian settlement here as Pubugna. This village came under the control of his mission. San Gabriel and the villagers were named after Gabrielenos. The mission cattle, it is related in this volume, were herded by the tens of thousands from Pasadena to the sea, and "no sweeter or more luxurious grasses were cropped by them than those that waved over the Long Beach plain."

In 1784, Governor Pedro Fages granted to Manuel Nieto all the land between the Santa Ana and the San Gabriel Rivers from the mountains to the sea. This was later divided into five smaller ranchos, two of which were Los Cerritos and Los Alamitos, upon which Long Beach is now located. They were owned jointly by Manuel's four heirs.

The next event of historical interest grew out of the arrival from around the Horn in windjammers of two New England Yankees, Able Stearns and John Temple, each unknown to the other. They liked the country so well they took out Mexican citizenship papers and married Spanish girls. Temple's wife and her brothers and sisters owned Los Cerritos Rancho and he later bought out the other heirs and built the hacienda which is now standing near the Virginia Country Club. Stearns bought the companion rancho, Los Alamitos, and built the hacienda now known as the Fred Bixby home.

These haciendas were built just before the Mexican War with the United States. The war came, and with it unusual incidents, because of the American ties that bound the country to the Spanish civilization. After the war the United States Government confirmed all the existing Spanish land grants.

Prosperity began to reign and Don Juan Temple pastured on Rancho Los Cerritos 15,000 cattle, 700 sheep and 300 horses. The rancho had an area of 27,000 acres. In the winter of '63 misfortune came. The cattle died, Rancho Los Alamitos losing 50,000 heads. Able Stearns lost his property to Michael Reese on a mortgage of $200,000 after he had been unable to redeem it for $154 in back taxes.

Three years later Los Cerritos Rancho was offered for sale at 80 cents an acre. It was bought for $20,000 in gold by Jotham Bixby, Dr. Thomas Flint and his brother, Benjamin, who had rounded the Horn in 1851 and who had been successful sheepgrowers and stagecoach operators in Northern California.

Jotham Bixby immediately took up his home in the Temple hacienda and stocked his ranch with 13,000 sheep, the fleeces of which yielded 200,000 pounds of wool yearly. One of his first undertakings was the sinking of ten artesian wells. As late as 1887 sheep were herded on the ocean bluff where Long Beach now stands.

In 1881 there was platted 10,000 acres of that part of the Los Cerritos Rancho fronting on the ocean on the site of the present Long Beach. It was known as the American colony and was offered for sale in ten- to eighty-acre lots for fruit ranches. Although excursions from the East were run by immigration promoters, the community cannot be said to have prospered.

Six houses were built and thirty-six lots were sold. A hard winter followed, with heavy floods. People would not come to the new project and owners had defaulted in two payments. In 1884 the property reverted back to the Bixbys.

Such is the history in brief of the ranches whose acres are now covered with a large city. The study to make a city out of the nucleus of the American colony, and its eventual success, is another story.

Long Beach's marvelous growth since those eventful days has been one of the greatest of the last century and, today, stands as a monument to those early Pioneers whose faith and courage made this development possible.

The year 1926 went forward in Long Beach at a uniform and continuous rate. The building program totaled approximately $8,500,000. Work in the harbor and in the harbor industries progressed throughout the year, and an evenly balanced expansion in the downtown and residential districts was carried out without showing any symptoms of abating. The building of stores and semi-public buildings kept pace with residences, duplexes, flats and apartments, while churches and schools and other public buildings serve to illustrate the broad development of the community.

One of the outstanding features of the building program for the year, as recorded in the office of Chief Building Inspector J. E. Mackie, was the number of single residences and their ratio of value to the city's general building total. The records show that during the year 915 private homes were constructed at an actual cost of $2,296,075. This represents a quarter of all the new construction in the city during 1926. This compares well with that of 1925, when the number of permits was 932 and the value was approximately the same.

Permits were issued in 1926 for 105 buildings in the classification of stores, offices and banks, representing a total building cost of $479,515 and an investment of fully twice that amount. During 1925 there were sixty-four buildings of this class erected—only half the number, but larger in size, the cost being $1,257,560.

To offset the fact that 1926's building, in actual total, was only $8,500,000 in value, as compared with $19,000,000 in 1925, is the figure of 5,300 permits, compared with only 4,768 for 1925. In spite of the small volume of building in 1926, compared with several of the previous years, all records were broken for the number of permits. The highest previous mark was during the record year of 1923, when 5,148 permits were issued for buildings of an aggregated value of $23,600,000. Other building permit totals were 4,861 in 1924 and 4,768 in 1925.

The $5,000,000 harbor program in 1925 helped swell the total for that year, as did also permits for such larger downtown construction as the Breakers hotel, the Pacific Coast club, the Stillwell apartments, the Scottish Rite Cathedral and the new $500,000 Y. W. C. A. building.

The year 1926 recorded the completion of the new $600,000 Woodrow Wilson high-school at Tenth street and Ximeno avenue and Saint Matthew parochial school at 2828 East Seventh street, costing $60,000; also another parochial school for Saint Anthony's parish, costing $80,000.

The outstanding public improvement of 1926 was the new Broadway bridge, 600 feet long, over the flood control, costing $197,000. Construction for the year just closed was $1,500,000 more than in 1919, when building permits leaped from $2,800,000 to $7,200,000 in value.

Twenty-two years ago the amount of Long Beach building was $122,147. Seven years later,

WOODROW WILSON HIGH SCHOOL DEDICATED BY NATIVE SONS.

Long Beach's newest educational institution, the beautiful Woodrow Wilson high-school, was formally dedicated January 28, the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West participating in the ceremonies.

W. L. Stephens, superintendent Long Beach schools, presided at the afternoon function and delivered the welcome address. Rev. T. F. Hedspeth invoked a blessing, vocal music was furnished by the school's glee clubs, Charlot Brecht director, and instrumental selections by the school's orchestra, George C. Moore director.

On behalf of Long Beach Parlor No. 239 N.S.G.W., Grand First Vice-president Charles A. Thompson presented the Flag of the United States and the California State (Bear) Flag to the school. They were accepted by Irma Underwood, governor of welfare, student body.

The chief speaker of the occasion was Judge Fletcher A. Cutler, Junior Past Grand President N.S.G.W., and it was generally conceded that he delivered one of the most masterful orations ever heard in Long Beach. In the course of his address, which centered around the history of the migration of the American people westward, Judge Cutler stressed these facts:

"The safety valves of the pulse of our government are the schools. . . . Youth, found in our schools today, constitutes the true wealth of our country. . . . Wealth and poverty meet upon a common footing at the door of education. . . . Out of the great Pacific will come a question of greater interest than commerce and travel, it will be the deadly sound of the war drum, for the supremacy of the White race. . . . May we always be inspired by the traditions of the past and the teachings of our forefathers."

At the conclusion of the program students and guests gathered at the main entrance of the Woodrow Wilson high-school administration building, where a bronze plaque, dedicating the institution to Truth, Liberty and Toleration, was placed by the Grand Parlor N.S.G.W. Participating in the impressive plaque-laying ceremonies were: Grand First Vice-president Charles A. Thompson, Junior Past Grand President Fletcher A. Cutler, Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Grand Trustee John T. Newell, Past Grand President Herman C. Lichtenberger.

In the evening, Long Beach Parlor N.S.G.W. entertained at supper representatives of the city's government, school department and Chamber of Commerce and of the Orders of Native Sons and Native Daughters. Dr. S. T. Luce was the toastmaster, and among the speakers were: W. L. Stephens, superintendent Long Beach schools; John L. Lounsbury, principal Woodrow Wilson high-school; George L. Buck, Long Beach city manager; Alexander Beck, Long Beach councilman and vice-mayor; A. A. Miller, representing the Long Beach Chamber Commerce; Mrs. Kate McFadyen and Mrs. Julia Arborn, representing the Native Daughters; Z. B. West (Santa Ana Parlor No. 265 N.S.G.W.), district attorney Orange County; William E. Durr, president Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 N.S.G.W. (San Pedro); Edgar McFadyen, past president Long Beach Parlor No. 239 N.S.G.W.; Grand First Vice-president Thompson, Grand Secretary Regan, Junior Past Grand President Cutler, Grand Trustee Newell, Past Grand President Lichtenberger of the N.S.G.W. Grand Parlor.

9. President Fanny McPherson presided, and among those present were three charter members: Kate McFadyen, Nora Martin and Mabel Emery. Mrs. Alpha Harper, another charter member, was unable to be in attendance, but was remembered with gifts. Messages of love were sent Mrs. Matilda Borden, who has taken up her home in Heber, Imperial county, and Mrs. Wilhelmina Curtis. Miss Mabel Emery, in recognition of her faithful services to the Parlor, was presented with a handsome vase, D.D.G.P. Bertha Hitt making the presentation address. For the past eight years Miss Emery has served as treasurer and during her long membership has officiated in numerous capacities.

A banquet was served at beautifully appointed tables, golden yellow being the color scheme. Nora Martin made the birthday cake, which was decorated in yellow, red and white. Reminiscences of early days in the Parlor were related by Secretary Clara Fay and Kate McFadyen. In charge of arrangements for the anniversary observance was this committee: Violet Henshelwood (chairman), Daisy Hansen, Lillian Whiting, Lillian Lasater.

Long Beach's California thimble club has elected Lucretia Coates president and Violet Henshelwood secretary. The members are busy making layettes for the Social Welfare Society. February 3 the club met at the home of Lillian Whiting, and February 17 at Winifred Young's home.

The Parlor drill team, under the management of Captain Lillian Lasater, sponsored a "Plunkett" luncheon, followed by a card party, February 23. Mrs. Marie McFadyen-Monroe, a member of No. 154, writes very interesting letters to her many friends from her new home at Hilgard, Oregon, telling of her enjoyment of the snow-clad mountains and the winter sports.

SCHOOL DAYS RECALLED.

Several members of Long Beach Parlor No. 239 N.S.G.W. and Long Beach Parlor No. 154 N.D.G.W. were among the many Natives who visited the battleship "California" at San Pedro February 6, as guests of Captain W. H. Standley. Dr. S. T. Luce was one of the numbers, and he was delighted to again see a schooldays' chum he had not seen for thirty-seven years—Captain Standley. In the days gone by they attended the same school at Ukiah, Mendocino County.

CALIFORNIA'S GROWTH INDICATED BY FEDERAL CENSUS ESTIMATES.

The Federal Census Bureau, January 31, made public figures of the estimated population of the United States and the several states as of July 1, 1927. For the whole country, the figures are: 1920 (census), 105,710,620; July 1, 1926 (estimated), 117,136,000; July 1, 1927 (estimated), 118,628,000.

For California, the figures are: 1920 (census), 3,426,861; July 1, 1926 (estimated), 4,316,000; July 1, 1927 (estimated), 4,433,000. If the bureau's estimates be correct, California's population increased 889,144 from 1920 to July 1, 1926, and an additional 117,000 will have been added by July 1 of this year.

In the 1920 census, California ranked eighth among the states in population. The July 1, 1927, estimates put it in seventh place.

N.D. BRIDES-TO-BE GUESTS.

Alturas—February 3 Alturas No. 159 entertained during the social hour at cards until refreshments were served. Two of the younger members were guests of honor. Miss Belva Smith, whose engagement to Marion Sloss was announced during the Christmas holidays, was the recipient of a kitchen shower. At the banquet table, beautiful mid appropriate decorations for Saint Valentine, the engagement of Miss Mildred Scott to Orville Boyd was announced. A six-piece orchestra supplied music for dancing, which followed the banquet.

Mrs. Julia Denson, Pioneer mother of Ella McGrath, passed away and a large concourse of Native Daughters attended the burial obsequies. The 13-year-old daughter of Lutie Flournoy passed away February 13.

Auditorium Dedicated—Sacramento's municipal auditorium, erected, at a cost of $1,500,000, to the memory of that city's war heroes, was formally opened and dedicated Washington's Birthday, February 22.

HOLLYWOOD, THE UNIQUE

The Beautiful Residential Section of Greater Los Angeles
Where Art, Science and Industry are Happily Combined

IMPORTANT DEVELOPMENTS IN HOLLYWOOD

Harry Barratt
(ASSISTANT SECRETARY, HOLLYWOOD CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

IMPORTANT DEVELOPMENT OF THE EAST Hollywood district is seen with the completion of the Hyperion avenue arterial project, as the first unit of the second major traffic plan in Hollywood. The project cuts through a section of Hollywood not much developed for commercial or residence purposes, but which is looked upon by executives of the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce as offering a particularly attractive opportunity for the expansion of this community in business, industrial and home life.

The Hyperion arterial project has already been presented to the Los Angeles City Council by the city engineer for ratification and has received a favorable report. Starting at Santa Monica boulevard it involves the opening and widening of Myra to eighty feet under Sunset boulevard to Fountain avenue, and the widening of Fountain avenue from its present sixty feet to eighty feet over all, connecting with Hyperion avenue, which is already a wide, beautifully paved street. The cost of this street improvement, it is said, will approach $200,000.

The bridge division of the city engineer's office reports the Waverly-Hyperion grade separation is about fifty percent completed and it is expected this part of the work will be finished in about ninety days. Plans for the main structure of the Glendale-Hyperion viaduct project were submitted to the Board of Public Works during February. The structure should be completed in about eighteen months.

This great traffic artery, in connection with Virgil avenue, will afford a short cut from downtown to Glendale, Pasadena and points eastward, and it is believed will result in great development in this territory. Improvements already planned include a new high-school on a eleven-acre tract at Tracy and St. George streets, important improvements by Warner Brothers on the old Vitagraph lot at Talmadge and Prospect avenues, and a great many single residences all through the district. The school board has declined to state when the high-school work will start, but it is expected to be some time this year.

At Linda and Myra avenues the Thomas Starr King junior high-school is already completed, as is the Franklin-avenue grade-school at Commonwealth and Franklin. Warners have laid out a program of improvements calling for the expenditure of more than $600,000 upon the old Vitagraph property. Completion of the paving on Talmadge avenue will give access to the new Franklin-avenue bridge, affording another artery into this district.

Within six months reports of appraisers, appointed to name prices for property in condemnation for the so-called "Five Finger" plan, will be ready for the courts for action.

Information to this effect has come from the office of Assistant City Attorney Stahl, who is in charge of all plans looking to condemnation of right-of-way property. The assistant city engineer predicts rapid work on the big major traffic project for Hollywood from this time on, and expects to see construction operations under way in about a year.

The "Five Finger" project, experts agree, is probably one of the most important traffic projects that could have been worked out for that section of Hollywood lying between Sunset boulevard and Melrose avenue on the south, with Highland avenue and Vine street as the west and east boundaries, respectively. The program proposes the extension of Cahuenga, Wilcox and Cole avenues from approximately Sunset boulevard to the southward, giving each completed street a heavy type of pavement on side roadways to the south, as well as offering other major and permanent traffic improvements.

Wilcox avenue is to be straightened where necessary, and Cole, which now ends at or near Santa Monica boulevard, will be pushed north, while the present Old Cahuenga will be widened from De Longpre and will be treated to a substantial pavement. Thus, when the "Five Finger" project is completed there will be three new, wide traffic arteries south from Sunset boulevard, which will carry much of the heavy

"A CHEQUER-BOARD."

By Robert Clay; J. B. Lippincott Company, Publishers, Philadelphia; Price, $2.00.

Paul Sleive-Emmet relaxed gratefully as he sank into a comfortable chair before the fireplace. A sudden twist of pain and a puff of smoke from the fire closed his eyes. The blood pounded in his ears. He heard the crash of a falling mast, the swish of a heaving sea. Opened eyes disclosed a bloody scene of carnage.

The two ships moving slowly in the current, drifted close—a moment more, they were together. The pirates gave an exultant shout. Snarling like a pack of wolves around their prey, they scrambled over the side of "The Vulture" onto the decks of the crippled merchantman. The mate strolled slowly in their wake, eyes contemptuous. Suddenly he paused and a flicker of interest lighted his eyes.

Directly in front of him, lashed to the stump of the mainmast, was a beautiful woman. She seemed indifferent to her fate, to the shouts around her and to the bestial stares of the men. She stared fixedly at the stiffened form of a grey-haired woman lying upon the deck some few feet away. The brawny figure of the captain hove over the rail of the merchantman. A moment, and he bent beside her.

"Well, mistress," he boomed, "still of the same mind?" "Yes," she whispered. So it was that lovely Johanna Sedley came to be on board the gory "Vulture," the unwedded bride of the captain and sharer in one-half the spoils taken aboard. Paul Sleive remained at first a bitter spectator, but no man could long withstand the charms of the woman. The romance of Johanna Sedley and Paul Sleive turned sordidness into splendor, bitterness into love—but it could not avert tragedy. Locked in each others arms, they met their fate valiantly. Weeks later, Paul Sleive-Emmet, recovering shattered health in a quiet room, understood the strangeness of his dream and fulfilled its ancient heritage.

"FRONTIER IN AMERICAN LITERATURE."

By Lucy Lockwood Hazard; Thomas Y. Crowell Company, Publishers, New York; Price, $2.75.

This remarkable treatise, written by a teacher of one of our own Californian colleges, throws a new light on American literature. Beginning at the earliest frontier of America, Plymouth Rock, and with the earliest of its frontiersmen, the Pilgrim Fathers, Miss Hazard shows that the history and literature of a country are bound up inseparably, one within the other. As that frontier advanced, as history was made, so advanced the literature of the people.

To each frontier belongs its own history, its own heroes, its own distinctive literature. So, for the Puritan frontier in literature, Hawthorne stands paramount as the representative of that period. The Southern frontier is naturally suitable for romanticism. Next come the heroes of the fur trade, with James Fenimore Cooper, Washington Irving and John G. Neihardt as the leading figures. Thoreau and Walt Whitman follow in "The Golden Age of Transcendentalism," Bret Harte and Mark Twain write of "The Frontier of '49," Theodore Dreiser of industrial pioneering, Frank Norris of "The Frontier and the Nestor."

Of the future, Miss Hazard believes that the coming age in literature is that of the spiritual, and in that realm we are but pioneers.

PROTECT CALIFORNIA'S FOREST AREAS

CHARACTERIZING CONSERVATION OF timber and watershed resources as "a problem of paramount importance, affecting both the present and future welfare of the state," Governor C. C. Young has accepted the chairmanship of the American Forest Week Committee for California, which will direct the forestry educational campaign scheduled for the week of April 24-30 inclusive. This is the first time in the history of forestry that a state executive has headed the committee.

"To California, American Forest Week has an unusual appeal," says Governor Young. "Probably no state in the nation is more vitally concerned in forestry conservation than California. The question assumes even greater importance in view of the fact that conservation of our water supply is closely related to protection of the state's watershed resources.

"California's timber losses by fire during the past three years were approximately half as great as the total amount of lumber cut for commercial purposes during the period. This fact alone should demonstrate to anyone the imperative need of properly protecting and conserving California's forest areas.

"The state's fire fighting organization will be materially augmented during the coming fire season and every possible precaution will be taken to safeguard our great timber belt. It is equally important, however, that the people be awakened to a personal realization of their obligation, and lend their co-operation in protecting the state's resources. To this end, individuals and organizations should co-operate in securing general observance of American Forest Week. I feel that this is a problem of paramount importance, affecting both the present and the future welfare of the state, and as such is deserving of the earnest consideration of every Californian."

American Forest Week will be set aside by proclamation of President Calvin Coolidge for the purpose of bringing before the people of the United States the necessity of better conservation of their timber and watershed resources. The week will be observed throughout the United States and the Dominion of Canada from April 24 to 30. In California, extensive plans are under way for the purpose of securing a widespread observance of the week in the schools, service clubs, fraternal organizations and other groups.

"Governor Young, by agreeing to head the California committee, has once more placed California in a position of leadership in the conservation movement," declares State Forester Merritt B. Pratt. "His action in this instance is in line with his forestry policies as outlined in his inaugural message and his budget message."

flow now passing south along congested Highland avenue and Vine street, and will make possible the acceptance of greater volumes of traffic expected to be thrown into Hollywood from the San Fernando Valley when the arterial plans from that section are completed and in operation.

The "Five Finger" plan contemplates drastic changes for the improvement of traffic movement along Cahuenga avenue from the Highland avenue intersection. Cahuenga avenue is to be materially widened and some of the avenues and streets tributary to it are to be similarly improved. The entire job will cost in the neighborhood of $3,000,000, it is said.

A BIT O' FARMING

PREPARED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY M. H. ELLIS

NATURE HAS DONE UTMOST FOR THE FARMER

NOT FOR MANY YEARS HAS A CROP season opened so auspiciously for California as this—plenty of moisture in the soil from rains that have been above normal in almost every section of the state, plenty of well-packed snow in the mountains to assure irrigation water next summer, and a winter that has brought through all the crops in splendid shape. Nature has done its utmost for the farmer; what the farmer does with the opportunity remains to be seen.

The prospects for crops and prices appear to be pretty close to normal. Livestock has ahead of it the best year the industry has known since the post-war deflation. Cattle began their improvement last year, and should continue. Hogs are definitely on an upward trend. Lambs had a fair season, and wool prices should remain steady. Poultry in this state has lots of competition, but the quality maintained in California gives the state a decided advantage.

Orchard crop prices cannot be expected to show much increase, with new acreages coming into bearing, but unless unforeseen circumstances arise there should be profits almost all along the line. New plantings cannot be recommended for any kind of fruit, however, until consumption catches up with production. Truck crops for local consumption and for early Eastern markets will be good business this year, in all probability.

While, of course, prices on California produce are regulated, to a great extent, by the production of the same crops in other parts of the country, severe winters in most sections give indications of yields under the normal.

MAINTAIN SOIL FERTILITY.

Texas plans to try to force prosperity on its farmers by legislation. Cotton, raised on the same land for many years, has so depleted the soil fertility that drastic steps, it is believed there, are necessary, so a bill to prevent the planting of cotton two years in succession on the same land has been framed. Promises by farmers to aid in a voluntary effort to restore the soil have been broken. The state claims to have established the right to force them to do what they will not otherwise practice.

The situation is not strange in California. Here, in the great valleys, grain was planted year after year, the straw even being burned, and nothing was added to the soil—everything was taken away. Consequently, thousands and millions of dollars are being spent for fertilizer that would not have been necessary had a rational plan of farming been practiced. The lesson is too plain to need pointing. Soil fertility must be maintained, if agriculture is to endure.

GIVE THE HORSE A CHANCE.

Give the horse a chance to break in gradually before the heavy work of the season starts. To take a horse from pasture and start him on grain rations and heavy work, is sure to get him out of condition and make him less efficient as a power plant for the farm. If he has not had grain during the winter, start it in his feed gradually. Lengthen the working day an hour at a time; see that he gets a chance to break in right. Ballplayers don't start at top speed the first day of a training season, neither should horses on the first day of spring work. If the clippers are used, the horse not only will be easier groomed, but he will sweat less and retain his strength in better shape.

TOMATO WEEVIL CREEPS IN.

Despite the unwearying vigilance with which the inspectors of the State Department of Agriculture watch every ship that docks at a California port, the Australian tomato weevil has crept in, and has been making itself at home in the truck gardens of the San Francisco Bay region. While the weevil gets its name from the tomato, it does not confine its activities to that plant, but eats into the crown and stem of carrots, the leaves of spinach and the stems of tomatoes and potatoes. It may show a liking for other vegetables, too, as it becomes more adapted to California conditions.

The adult is about three-eighths of an inch long. It is inactive in the summer and lays its eggs in October, so that its larvae are active during the winter, reaching the adult stage in time to do a lot of damage to tomatoes before retiring for the summer. Arsenate of lead has been found a control, but cannot of course be used on spinach. Whether it will develop into a major pest remains to be seen, but it apparently has possibilities.

IMPROVING THE FARM HOME.

While the farmer has been changing from a mere producer to a businessman whose efficiency is growing rapidly, the farm housewife has been adding to the comforts of her home, and to its efficiency as well. Figures for the United States show that about a third of the farm homes now have running water, a slightly larger percentage have washing machines and about 10 percent have electricity.

This percentage is low for California, particularly as regards lighting, for well over half of the farm houses in this state are wired for electricity. More than that, they use electricity for pumping in such quantities that electric stoves are more common on the farm than in the city. Add telephones, automobiles, radios, septic tanks, gas engines and other conveniences, and the old picture of the farm home is replaced by one that compares quite favorably in comfort and efficiency with the city residence.

SPRAY, FOR CODLING MOTH.

Watch for codling moth. And remember that it is the first, or calyx, spray that must be counted upon to control the pest. While the second brood does perhaps more damage than the first, the first must be controlled to stop the second from its depredations. Late sprays not only fail to control, but they leave an undesirable residue on the fruit.

Spray while the trees are in bloom, and use plenty of material and force. Use another spray if for any reason—such as wind, rain, etc.,—the first is unsatisfactory. Sprays at two-week intervals will aid in the control, although if the first is thoroughly done the later applications will be less necessary. Use two or three pounds of powder, or four to six pounds of paste, to 100 gallons of water.

TEMPERATURE AND EGGS.

While it is always well to guard against low temperatures eggs being held for hatching, yet it is unlikely that any normal temperature of the late winter or early spring in California will prove detrimental to the hatching qualities. There must be excepted, of course, mountain districts of high altitudes and unusually low temperatures. Professor J. E. Dougherty of the Poultry Husbandry Division of the University of California has shown that eggs subjected to nightly temperatures of 28 to 32 degrees Farenheit for three successive nights, with an added continuous period of thirty-eight hours, hatched with showing effects of the exposure. Four nights did make a difference, with the same temperature, but it is not at all likely that anywhere in the state will eggs be exposed to freezing temperature for fourteen hours a day, three days in succession, and then a day and a half continuously. Brief periods of low temperatures are not at all likely to impair the hatching qualities of eggs.

GET AFTER THE REDBERRY.

Redberry, a disease that has caused heavy loss among growers of blackberries, should be controlled now. It is caused by a mite, which feeds upon the berries, and causes them to remain immature, red and sour. For an immediate spray, use a 5 percent lime-sulphur solution. At blossom time, use wettable sulphur, five pounds to 100 gallons of water. More spraying will help, but may not be necessary. But if redberry is prevalent in the district, the grower will do well to get after the mite which causes it, right now.

SHEEP MAKE MONEY, SAVE LABOR.

Sheep may be used profitably around the farm, even if it be a small farm. In the first place, there's the lamb crop in the spring, worth good money even though the crop be small; and the wool clipped from the sheep adds another bit of cash to the farmer's account. And this is all pure profit, if managed right, for not only is there plenty of feed around the average farm for a small band of sheep, but there are weeds and grass that the sheep can and will eat, and the farmer is saved the money.

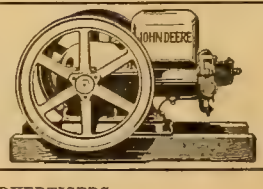
One farmer in California, who has the name of being one of the best in the state, just recently has looked over his ranch and finds he can support 150 sheep along his irrigation ditches, roads and fences, and while doing so be rid of the trouble of keeping down the weeds. This farmer does not have to get sheep to make his farm pay, but his farm does pay because he takes advantage of every sort of opportunity like this. There is money made and labor saved, in sheep.

GIVE THE YOUNG TREE ATTENTION.

The tree is planted now, and ready to start the summer's growth. When a tree is planted, the work is not done; nature won't just go ahead and raise that tree. Further, the first year is the most important for the tree. Don't head it back too severely; let it grow. Whatever else may be said of long pruning, it brings the crops more quickly, and when in fruit trees may be pruned to suit the grower.

Don't let superfluous growth develop all summer; pinch it out and keep the tree summer pruned. Whitewash won't hurt now; it will do good, although it is not as important at this season as in early winter. See that the tree gets enough water and that it is not deprived of food and drink by weeds or intercropping. Give the tree plenty of attention while it is young, and it will repay the trouble.

SWAT THE FLY.



Now comes spring, and the flies. There is little need of being bothered with them. They breed in filth, and their presence is no testimental of merit for the farm where they are found. If the stables are [illegible] and pens and chicken yards given a [illegible] and thorough attention and [illegible] the flies will be few this Expose it in saucers during the heat, and the flies will relish it in the morning. [illegible] thorough cleanup is followed by this poison campaign there won't be many flies this summer. Comfort will be secured and there will be less danger of sickness. Swat the fly!

BEES AS A SOURCE OF INCOME.

Another source of income that will need little outlay and less upkeep, is bees. A few hives, depending on the food supply available for them, will return enough honey to supply the family, at least, and more than likely some for the market. If there are fruit trees on the farm, and there should be, the increase in production through the activities of the bees in blossom time will repay many times over the little trouble required to care for the hives. Be sure, of course, that you get a clean swarm, and keep it clean.

USE HOME PRODUCTS.

Millions of dollars annually are being sent East by poultrymen of California for poultry feed, when there is just as good feed produced in California. Corn is not necessary for the laying mash or any other mash, according to Dr. W. F. Holst of the University of California, who has been making an exhaustive study of the subject. He has outlined a feed for hens that can be made up from California products, and that will produce as many eggs as any other. This will save much money for the poultry producers of California, if they follow his recommendations. It will mean, too, a big market for California grains.

WOOD ASHES GOOD FERTILIZER.

Don't waste the wood ashes, they are valuable fertilizer. They contain potash and lime in appreciable quantities, and the ashes will go a long way in loosening and mellowing the soil. As with other fertilizers, don't throw ashes in heaps on the ground, but scatter them evenly. Backyard gardeners will find wood ashes a big help in getting better yields and in making the soil more friable. Coal ashes have little, if any, value as fertilizer, but they do aid in loosening up a heavy soil, if not used in too great quantity.

HORNS AN ECONOMIC LOSS.

Now that the calves are coming, don't neglect to relieve them of their horns right at the start. When they are a few days old clip the hair from the buttons where the horns start and rub the buttons with a stick of caustic potash until the spots become quite red, but before blood starts. Wet the potash stick with water before the rubbing is done. Horns are an economic loss, viewed from any point. Cattle do better without them, and there is less danger from injury on the farm, the range and in the cattle cars when shipping.

TO CURE FEATHER PICKING.

Feather picking can be stopped by "the hair of the dog that bites," according to the Kansas Agricultural College, which says that feathers boiled down in water and fed to the hens will stop the practice. The hens feel a need for cystin, an element needed in the poultry ration, is the claim made, and when the feathers are boiled and the brew fed this deficiency is supplied. It will be well worth the while of the poultryman to give the remedy a trial, if he has experienced any difficulty from this source.

RELIEF FROM MEALYBUG.

House plants and shrubs that are troubled with mealybugs can be given a lot of help through the application of a 2 percent solution of the so-called summer oil. It is easy of application, and there are several reliable brands on the market now that will give relief from the mealybug and that will cause no damage at all to the plants.

CAPONS AS "MOTHERS."

Capons are being used quite extensively for brooders on small poultry farms. They make excellent "mothers" for the chicks, and can be used repeatedly if several hatchings are made. They protect chicks better than do hens, and after a season as brooders they find a ready market as meat.

AWAITING GRAND PARLOR'S COMING

MODESTO—OFFICERS OF MORADA No. 199 were installed by D.D.G.P. Lou McLeod January 26, Myrtle Sanders becoming president. Miss Mae Giovanetti, retiring past president, was presented with an emblematic pin. Past President Frances Bell presented each officer who served with her a dainty gift, in appreciation for co-operation during her term. A presentation was also made D.D.G.P. McLeod. Following the ceremonies a social hour was enjoyed in the banquet room, where the tables were made very attractive by the carrying out of a valentine scheme.

Mrs. Lena Browder was hostess to the Morada past presidents' club January 24. The club meets twice a month. Following an hour's study of California history, a social time and a general discussion for the good of the Order are enjoyed.

Morada's members are anxiously looking forward to the meeting of the Grand Parlor in Modesto in June, and will use every effort to make the session a great success and to entertain the delegates. A team of past presidents, under the leadership of Annie Sargeant, have been selected to exemplify the ritual during the gathering.

Co-operation Necessary.

Santa Ana—Officers of Santa Ana No. 235, with Mrs. Mamie Conn-Schonberg as president, were installed February 1 by D.D.G.P. Bertha Hitt, assisted by members of Long Beach No. 154. Addresses were made by D.D.G.P. Hitt and Mrs. Kate McFadyen, the latter stressing the necessity for co-operation between officers and members if the Order's ideals are to be perfected. Praise was bestowed by Mrs. Rankin on Mrs. Genevieve Hiskey, former marshal. Refreshments were served at the meeting's conclusion.

The Parlor conducted a fair February 15, when a jolly time was had. A committee has been named to confer with Santa Ana No. 265 N.S.G.W. on the matter of together hiring a hall, so that more joint social affairs may be featured. The thimble club of No. 235 met February 9 at the home of Mrs. Clara Gerken.

"Service" the Keynote.

Mountain View—The meeting place of El Monte No. 205 was crowded January 28, the occasion being the official visit of Grand President Pearl Lamb. Among the many in attendance were Past Grand President Mamie Pierce-Carmichael, Grand Marshal Josie Barboni, D.D.G.P. Nettie Richmond and delegations from San Jose No. 81, Vendome No. 100 and Palo Alto No. 229.

The hall was beautifully decorated with tall baskets filled with pink spring blossoms and asparagus fern; large bows of pink moline tied the handles and gave a pleasing effect. The ritual was exemplified in a faultless manner.

"Service" was the keynote of the splendid address given by the Grand President, in the course of which she highly complimented the Parlor on its wonderful progress and success. Presentations were made to Mrs. Lamb, Past Grand President Carmichael, Grand Marshal Barboni, D.D.G.P. Richmond and President Eileen Berryessa. Delicious refreshments were served in the beautifully decorated banquet room.

The dedication of the American Flag purchased by No. 237 was the main feature of the evening. Grand Trustee Sallie Thaler presided in a most capable manner and was presented with a basket of flowers. On the Parlor's behalf Past President Vesta A. Turley was presented a basket of yellow, white and red carnations, in appreciation of her faithful work, and an emblematic jewel was presented to Senior Past President Edith Zigenfuss by Junior Past President Turley. Following a few remarks by distinguished guests a bountiful supper was served.

The meeting hall and banquet room were appropriately decorated and suitable refreshments were served in unique style. All in attendance were attired in grotesque and antiquated costumes, and each was required to do a "stunt," adding to the jollity of the occasion. The Hollister girls presented San Juan Bautista with a basket of flowers as a birthday remembrance.

In Memoriam

MARY E. THORSON.

To the Officers and Members of El Dorado Parlor No. 186 N D G W — We the committee appointed to draft resolutions to the memory of our departed sister and charter past president beg to submit the following.

Whereas, The summons that awaits all mortals has deprived our Parlor of one of its most esteemed and loyal members, Sister Mary E. Thorson, whose sincere friendship and devotion to her Parlor endeared her to her sister members, therefore, be it

Resolved, That her family have our deepest sympathy and it is our prayer that they may find consolation in the fond memories that will ever live in their hearts and ours of her love and kindness to all, alike in sorrow or in joy in our Parlor there will be one more vacant chair, but in that Heavenly Parlor on High, she will sit at God's right hand awaiting the coming of those whom she loved and, if the power and privilege be granted her, she will greet each and every one with the same glad handclasp and cheery word that were accorded them in her own loved Parlor and home, resolved, that our charter be draped in mourning for a period of thirty days, that these resolutions be spread upon the minutes, and that a copy of the same be sent to her family and one to The Grizzly Bear for publication

Georgetown, January 22, 1927.

MAMIE CORTEZ.

We, the committee appointed by Manzanita Parlor No. 29 N D G W. to draft resolutions of respect for our deceased sister, Mamie Cortez, do respectfully submit the following:

"Not till each loom is silent
And the shuttles cease to fly
Will God unfold the pattern
And reveal the reason why.
The dark threads were as needful,
In the Weaver's skillful hands,
As the threads of gold and silver
In the pattern which He planned."

Whereas, It has pleased Divine Providence, in His boundless mercy and love, to call from her earthly work to scenes of greater usefulness our beloved sister, Mamie Cortez, and whereas, we reverently bow to the Divine will, yet we sorely miss our sister and deplore her passing, her noble qualities endeared her to us and her kindly smile and gracious manner were ever a lesson, teaching us to bravely do and smile as she did, therefore, be it

Resolved, That we extend our sympathy to her sorrowing family and urge them to remember that "Life is ever lord of Death, and Love can never lose its own," be it resolved that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this meeting and that a copy of these resolutions be sent to The Grizzly Bear Magazine for publication

LAVINA R. BARTLETT.

To Eltapome Parlor No 55 Native Daughters of the Golden West Dear Sisters: Whereas The Almighty Father, in His infinite wisdom, has called from our midst our beloved sister and charter member, Lavina R. Bartlett, be it

Resolved, That the charter of our Parlor be draped in mourning for a period of thirty days and be it further resolved that we extend our sincere sympathy to her sorrowing husband and relatives, and that these resolutions be spread upon the minutes, and that a copy be sent to the bereaved husband and one to The Grizzly Bear Magazine for publication.

May the California winds blow lightly,
May the California sun shine brightly,
May the California rain fall softly,
Where sleeps our sister, dear.

At the conclusion of the ceremonies a bountiful chicken pie supper was served. Addresses were made by Past Grand President Dr. Eva R. Rasmussen and D.D.G.P. Bradford of the Native Daughters, Grand Trustee John T. Skelton and D.D.G.P. Ring of the Native Sons. During the evening the drum corps of the Sacramento City Native Son Parlors entertained with vocal and instrumental selections.

Saint Patrick's Ball.

Manteca—Phoebe A. Hearst No. 214 will have its annual Saint Patrick's ball March 12. In charge of the arrangements is this committee: Mms. Marian Dye (chairman), Permelia Sullivan,, Roxie O'Leary, Edna Smith.

Joint Installation.

Hayward—About 200 members and their friends witnessed the public installation of officers of Hayward No. 122 and Eden No. 113 N.S.G.W. January 23. D.D.G.P. Augusta Huxsol and D.D.G.P. George Barron officiated, and Alice Gading and Harry Schilling became the respective presidents. Among the many visitors was Past Grand President Addie L. Mosher. A letter of greeting was read from D.D.G.P. Maud Wagner, who was unable to be present. Among the presentations was that of a past president's emblem to Carrie Krotzer. Dancing closed a very happy evening.

Wild Storm Braved.

Hollister—February 10 Copa de Oro No. 105 enjoyed a charming valentine party. Games appropriate to the occasion were played and prizes were awarded the fortunate guessers. At small tables prettily decorated in honor of Saint Valentine seasonable refreshments were served.

February 17 joint installation of officers of Copa de Oro and Fremont No. 44 N S G W. was held. D.D.G.P. Pearl Baker acted as installing officer for the former and Grand Inside Sentinel George Dethlefsen for the latter. A goodly delegation of loyal Native Sons from Watsonville braved the wild storm raging in order to enjoy the hospitality of the Hollister Parlors. A few short talks and the presentation of a gift to D.D.G.P. Baker were followed by dancing and the serving of refreshments.

SPRING COATS AFFECT STRAIGHT LINE

THE SPRING MATERIALS HAVE MANY indications of what we shall wear this spring. I am concerning myself only with sports costumes, the real and always advanced mainstay of the coming season. The summer tailor materials are extremely interesting and suggest long coat ensembles. The patterns are copied after men's suitings in the mixed grays, with sometimes a touch of color, such as a faint line of green. But the materials, while showing considerable coolness, are extremely light as to weight.

For trimmings, one sees buttons and bands of plain taffeta or satin.

Afternoon gowns are made of light-weight woolens, in tones and colors not at all sober. In fact, the color card is delightful. It presents, as a first choice, blues, particularly a light warm blue, almost a turquoise.

A garment is made of violet tones with variations of beige shades, and sometimes with a rose undertone. Much pure white and some green and yellow are shown, with brilliant effects for trimming.

The new jersey materials have stripes two inches deep running the narrow way of the material and have matching plain materials. The stripes are strong in tone, with much yellow and green and a new shade of magenta.

Coatings are loosely woven woolens that give the impression of weight and firmness, but which are, in reality, quite light. I like the kasha crepella, of pure wool, with a crepe surface. It drapes beautifully and promises a success in early spring ensembles.

The short jacket ensemble is expected to be one of the most important innovations of the spring mode. One sees these in kasha and jersey combined, with a blouse of silk crepe in harmonizing shades.

Coats for the spring will all affect a straight line. The collars are almost invariably fur trimmed, and for this the flat pelts are the preferred type.

For the tailored suits this spring, and these will be many, very ragged looking flowers of suede leather will be used. Large chrysanthemums, conventionally shaped roses and flat daisies are the favorite designs.

Early spring woolen costumes show interesting bindings of kid, finely manipulated leather suede and lizard skins. These are cut in scroll work and produce interesting color combinations. Skin-covered buttons are another novelty.

The square kerchief represents one of the most interesting details in neckwear. Practically no long scarfs are worn, but the printed squares of crepe, tub silk or surah are very well liked, especially with jersey dresses, where the color relation is carefully studied. These kerchiefs either bear allover patterns or else a border treatment.

The same idea is carried out in dresses, where the kerchief neckline is used. When the dress is of a woolen fabric, the kerchief is usually of silk. It is also used with tailored and sports frocks, so well established in popular favor for general wear.

The formal dress becomes even more important and betrays a tendency to elaboration. Georgette is frequently the chosen medium. Its styling remains simple, in most instances, with some variations in the shape of the neckline, and the bodice frequently affects moderate blousing.

The simpler evening frock of sheer fabric continues to gain interest through flowing lines, circular skirt treatments, panels and caped collars.

In dressy afternoon frocks, as a general rule, where versatility exists style is attained through new details, rather than through the silhouette. Color is a prominent factor in compose treatments or striking contrasts.

Tucks have been raised to a place of note by assuming all-over effects and appearing in motifs of different shapes. The yoke is a detail that appears again and again, sometimes cutting deeply into the frock at front or back, sometimes being broken at both sides or front or back, acting as means of introducing pleated panels in the blouse.

Pleats remain a frequent means of gaining skirt fulness, and they also make many appearances in the bodices for trimmings.

Embroideries play a leading role, while fringe and lace make a bid for a share of importance. Embroideries display great diversity, choosing soft or more brilliant colorings. Solid or eyelet effects are the most attractive for spring and now can be obtained in georgettes in all the pastel shades, with plain material to match.

The black satin coat is always a popular feature for early spring, and this year bids fair to outdo its own record. Black satin and faille usually accentuate a margie color scheme. Although there is no radical change in silhouettes, these coats are so elaborately constructed that the sense of simplicity felt in former years has gone.

The favored medium is crepe satin, satin poplin, or any of the satiny fabrics that have a dull and shiny side so that both surfaces may contribute to the decoration of the model. Sometimes it is difficult to say which side of the fabric makes the coat, so evenly are the stripings or sections divided.

Appliques of cashmere are also well thought of on satin coats. Some times these are done in straight or diagonal bandings, but frequently the cashmere is merely a band about sleeves or hem, connected with the satin by embroidery. Tiers afford the favored ways of breaking the tubular lines.

The loose neck scarf of fur is a spring favorite. Fur usually confines itself to collars for spring. Sleeves are generally trimmed either with fabric cuffs or buttoned on the outside like a dress. The most popular furs are baby fox, ermine in all dyes, squirrel and other soft-haired pelts.

Body straws show variety in weave for spring and summer hats. The large shape, which is called a straw body, will play the most important part in hat styles.

Hand-crocheted straws come in small sizes. These are shown in the original types in which they are hand woven and are then sized and developed by hand into the same little close effects as the pelts. Creases, tucks and pleats are pressed into them.

Choosing hosiery colors for the advance season promises to be very simple, since matching is again the prescribed method. There are five leather shades of major importance, four tans and one gray. Gunmetal hose with black heels has influenced the two-tone effects. A new heel decoration which gives a triple pointed effect is termed "twin heels." Ingenuity has devised ways of making it decorative and slenderizing.

"THE MYSTERY OF THE ASHES."
By Anthony Wynne; J. B. Lippincott Company, Publishers, Philadelphia; Price, $2.00.

Two pistol shots shattered the quiet of the night—two bodies dropped inert upon the floor. In the stilled hand of Patricia Keene a smoking revolver gave mute testimony of the willful crime. But in the years to come Patricia was to bitterly regret her wanton act, for the shots, instead of killing, merely wounded her fiance, Dr. Netherby, and disfigured her own beauty forever.

Four years later violence again shadowed the unhappy name of Keene. It was to clear up the mystery surrounding the murder of Patricia, and to exonerate the young doctor to whom circumstances pointed, that led Dr. Eustice Hailey to attempt the solution of a murder which was even too "deep" for the sleuth-hounds of Scotland Yard.

Murder follows murder in quick succession. Kidnaping and hair-breadth escapes become the order of the day. Nothing, however, swerves Dr. Hailey from his sturdy purpose to run down the fiend who was the perpetrator of such horrible atrocities. After endangering his life time and again, following endless clues painstakingly, he is at last rewarded. Strange and awful are the results of his search for the guilty one, but justice metes out fit punishment.

NATIVE SON'S GENEROUS GIFT IN MEMORY PIONEER FATHER.

Sacramento City—V. S. McClatchy has purchased and deeded to this, his native, city for the perpetual use of The People as a public park, a sixteen-acre tract of land known as Joyland Park.

The gift was made in memory of his father, James McClatchy, California Pioneer of 1849 and founder of "The Sacramento Bee." The park will be known as James McClatchy Park, and the city will place therein a granite boulder, with a bronze plaque inscribed to indicate the purpose of the gift.

V. S. McClatchy, now a resident of San Francisco and affiliated with Pacific Parlor No. 10 N S G W, of that city, long was prominent in the affairs of Sacramento. For many years he was the publisher of "The Bee."

"Some" Lemon—Charles Ashley recently exhibited in Napa City a two-pound lemon from his Browns Valley grove.

SENATE BILL 764 APPROVED

SAN FRANCISCO—THE BOARD OF Grand Officers met in Native Sons' Building February 9. In addition to Grand President Hilliard E. Welch, who presided, the following were in attendance: Grand First Vice-president Charles A. Thompson, Grand Second Vice-president James A. Wilson, Grand Third Vice-president Charles L. Dodge, Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Grand Trustees Frank I. Gonzalez, John T. Newell, Alfred H. McKnew, John T. Skelton, Emmet Seawell and Seth Millington. Suffering with inflammatory rheumatism, Grand Trustee Isadore H. Reuter was unable to be present.

Letters were received from: Father Augustine, thanking the Order for its contribution to the Santa Barbara Mission restoration fund; Principal John L. Lundsberry, thanking the board for co-operation in the dedication of the Woodrow Wilson high-school at Long Beach, January 28; Secretary John W. Edgemond of the Oakland Board of Education, thanking the board for conducting the dedicatory exercises at the Garfield school in that city January 23; from Secretary Robert G. Sproul of the University of California Board of Regents, thanking the Order for its gift of $3,000 in support of the N.S.G.W. history fellowship fund.

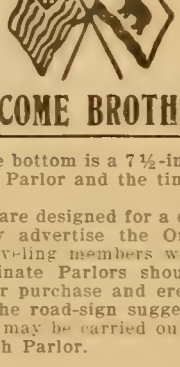
The California State Parks Committee was granted permission to use the Order's name as an endorser of bills before the State Legislature having to do with the activities and development of state parks.

In accordance with an agreement made at the time of the consolidation of Williams No. 164 with Colusa No. 69, a charge of $366.08 standing on the Grand Parlor books against the former Parlor was ordered canceled.

Grand First Vice-president Thompson reported that a State (Bear) Flag would be presented the Leland Stanford Junior University at Palo Alto before the next Grand Parlor, thereby carrying out the instructions of the last Grand Parlor.

Grand Secretary Regan advised that a report on the matter of insurance will be ready for consideration of the board at its next meeting.

A four-volume set of the recently issued "Palou's New California," edited by Dr. Herbert E. Bolton of the history department of the University of California, was ordered purchased.



Grand Secretary Regan was directed to communicate with the Subordinate Parlors and urge them to ask their representatives in the State Legislature to support Senate Bill No. 764, providing for the creation of a state historical association. [A similar bill was passed by the Legislature two years ago, but went to its death via the pigeonhole route.—Editor.]

The action of Grand President Welch in engaging Sidney B. Witkowski (Los Angeles Parlor No. 45) to work for the Order in the San Joaquin Valley field was approved.

The board accepted invitations to be represented at class initiations in Chico, February 16, in Los Angeles City, March 18, in San Francisco City, April 2, and in Santa Rosa, at a date to be fixed later.

The Santa Rosa Grand Parlor last year instructed the Board of Grand Officers to have prepared an appropriate sign, to be placed along the state highways, to advise traveling members of the Order of the places and times of Subordinate Parlors' meetings. The board has selected the design here illustrated.

The sign measures 20x30 inches, and is of enamel. The background is white, with the lettering and flag designs in red, blue and brown. At the bottom is a 7½-inch space for the name of a Parlor and the time and place of its meeting.

These signs are designed for a dual purpose—to generally advertise the Order and to supply the traveling members with information. Subordinate Parlors should give the matter of their purchase and erection attention, so that the road-sign suggestion, which is a good one, may be carried out at nominal expense to each Parlor.

The board adjourned until 1 p. m. of March 5, when the question of membership will be given consideration.

Old Timer Heard From.

From R. R. Harris, affiliated with Alder Glen No. 200 and now residing at the Masonic Home at Decoto, Alameda County, The Grizzly Bear received the following, dated January 30:

"Born in Monterey County in 1852. Am proud of my native state; I love every acre of it. I have seen all the great changes that have been made, from always good to better and now the best state in the union.

"I now love to remember of the days of old, when a man's word was as good as gold and a woman's chastity was as sacred as a mother's love. I am now enjoying life in one of the best homes in the United States."

Secretary Pens Appreciation Letter.

Santa Ana—H. Mel Head retired as the secretary of Santa Ana No. 265 the first of the year, but before doing so was jokingly requested by the Parlor to write a letter of appreciation to himself for his services. To the surprise of all, he did, under date of January 20. A member of the Parlor says it is worthy of a place in the Order's archives, so here it is:

"Mr. H. M. Head, Santa Ana, California—Brother: It gives me no pleasure to write this letter. It is just a tire some duty, for which the only compensation is a request to do better and a demand to do more. But I have been asked to write to you, expressing the appreciation of Santa Ana Parlor of Native Sons for the work you have done as the secretary for the past ten months. This I cannot do nor would I if I could. First, there is nothing you have done that deserves the slightest mention, let alone an expression of appreciation. Second, the request was to thank you for the work you have done; pray, tell me of any work you have ever done in your life! It can't be done, for the thought of work gives you a headache.

"But, to return to the way you filled the position of secretary: To say the least, it was terrible. When asked by the Parlor to write a letter, you considered the matter at an end, and the only thing the Parlor ever heard was that you had not received an answer. That might have gone over all o. k. but for the fact that everyone knows that the Grand Parlor officers are very prompt in answering letters from Subordinate Parlors. The way you collected dues cannot be mentioned, for you never collected any, and you always refused to answer when asked by a member how much he owed. One, and only one, member paid part of his dues that was eight months ago, and he is still trying to get a receipt.

"When Grand Trustee John T. Newell paid us his official visit you were afraid to come to the meeting. The report of the trustees to the Grand Parlor was made out by yourself, and you did not even extend the courtesy of offering the trustees your books to check the report.

"Your minutes of the meetings were terrible. They could not be corrected, for no one could understand them. The Parlor was never certain as to whether you were reading the minutes of a past meeting, or making a report of the latest movement of a new bolshevik uprising in Russia. If the Parlor had not been fortunate in having lots of men with diplomacy and broadmindedness, you would have started a religious war that would rival the medieval history of Europe.

"On one or two occasions you accompanied the Parlor on visits to Native Son festivities. We are still trying to redeem the good reputation of Santa Ana Parlor, which was shattered by the way you acted. The other Parlors got the idea that Santa Ana was a one-man Parlor, and you were it. This was due partly to the absence of Brother A. M. Stanley, but mainly to your presence. When we had visitors you disgraced us. You would begin an apology for our hall, and invite special attention of the visitors to its condition and location. Then you would interrupt everyone that tried to address the chair. Your remarks went over like a tent—that is, they went over everyone's head.

"For these reasons it is mere mockery to express anything as appreciation of you for the Parlor. But what has been lacking in you has been at least partly made up by the sterling qualities of our president. He must be wonderful to have been able to put up with a secretary like you. It was only by his good judgment and the grace of God that this Parlor ever continued as one unit through the last ten months.

"But we now have a new year to look forward to. And what a pleasure it is. We have a new set of officers. This was made necessary by the fact that the past officers were all worn out from constant friction with you. That is, they are all now but the trustees who are as good as new, for you never allowed them the privilege of doing anything.

"In ending, I must, in behalf of the Parlor, thank you for one thing, and no only. And that is for getting out and letting someone with the good of the Order in his heart act as secretary of this Parlor. May we never see you in office again.

"More truthfully than poetically yours,

"H. MEL HEAD, Sec'y."

Big Sum Paid on Debt.

Saint Helena—Saint Helena No. 53 received an official visit January 24 from Grand Trustee Emmet Seawell, associate justice of the California Supreme Court. In the course of an inspiring address he urged greater effort to enroll, as members of the Order, every worthy native-born man. Three candidates were initiated, following which officers were installed by D.D.G.P. Frank Pocai, Frank Harrison becoming president.

An important business matter was the distribution of $2,000 among several members who, some years ago, assisted in paying off the debt on the Parlor's building. But $1,000 is now owing the members, and that will be repaid in a short time.

Following the meeting a splendid banquet was served. President Frank Harrison was the toastmaster and brief addresses were made by D.D.G.P. Pocai, President William Coleman, Felix Salmina and C. A. Carroll of Calistoga No. 83, Past President Walter Metzner and Julius Goodman.

Thirty Past Presidents Come Out.

San Jose—Charles A. Hunt became president of Observatory No. 177 when D.D.G.P. R. E. Morgan installed the Parlor's officers January 25. Three candidates were initiated. The evening's feature was a turkey dinner, attended by eighty members, including thirty past presidents.

During the evening addresses were delivered by Grand First Vice-president Charles A. Thompson, Past Grand President Thomas Monahan, Past Presidents Noah Rogers, Joseph E. Hancock and Frank Benson, President Bert E. Hart of San Jose No. 22 and President Ruth of Santa Clara No. 100.

Boy Scouts Were There.

Fort Bragg—Accompanied by Grand President Hilliard E. Welch, Grand Trustee Alfred H. McKnew paid an official visit January 28 to Alder Glen No. 200. A chicken supper, largely attended, preceded the meeting. A feature of the evening was the presence of a troop of Boy Scouts of America sponsored by the Parlor.

During the meeting officers were installed by D.D.G.P. Henry Schoper, D. Bohn becoming president. Following the ceremonies interesting addresses were delivered by Grand President Welch and Grand Trustee McKnew.

Socials Well Attended.

Halfmoon Bay—Seaside No. 95 entertained Grand Second Vice-president James A. Wilson, members of Vista del Mar No. 155 N.D.G.W. and Redwood No. 66, and representatives of several San Francisco Parlors February 8. Miss Pauline Bernardo, accompanied by Miss Pauline Simmons at the piano, rendered several solos, and dancing and games were enjoyed. Refreshments were served. On behalf of the Parlor, Past President Edward Deeney was presented with an emblematic ring. Seaside gives these socials quite often; they are always well attended and a good time is enjoyed.

In Memoriam

HENRY S. HAYDEN.

Whereas, The Supreme Power of the Universe has, in His infinite wisdom, removed from among us one of our worthy brothers, Henry S. Hayden, and whereas, the long and intimate relation held with him in the Parlor makes it befitting that we record our appreciation of him, therefore,

NUMEROUS CHANGES PROPOSED IN STATE MOTOR VEHICLE LAW.

Amendments to the California Vehicle Act recommended to the State Legislature by the Motor Vehicle Conference, composed of representatives of the California State Automobile Association, Automobile Club of Southern California, County Supervisors' Association, Agricultural Legislative Committee, Highway Patrolmen's Association and other organizations interested in motoring and traffic matters, concern every motorist in the state. They are designed principally to promote safety upon the streets and the highways, and to protect the property interest of the motorist in his car. The proposed amendments include:

Authorizing the State Motor Vehicle Department to cancel all drivers' licenses which have been outstanding three years or more. Applicants for renewal of licenses are to be subject to examination at the discretion of the department.

Making it mandatory on the State Motor Vehicle Department to conduct an examination as to the fitness of all new applicants for licenses to operate a motor vehicle.

Requiring that the white certificate of registration be accompanied by a similar document which is to be carried in the car when the original certificate has been removed for transfer of the car or re-registration. Requiring the certificate or the copy to be displayed in the driver's compartment so as to be visible from the exterior of the vehicle.

Persons involved in accidents responsible for personal injuries or deaths may be required by the State Motor Vehicle Department to file reports on the same which are not to be used in any criminal or civil actions. The department is to keep a record of accidents in connection with safety studies.

Requiring county sheriffs or police departments to report to the State Motor Vehicle Department thefts of cars not recovered within seventy-two hours, the department not to transfer or register stolen cars.

Giving juries power to recommend punishment in convictions for driving while intoxicated, the court having no authority to impose a sentence greater than that recommended.

Making it unlawful after January 1, 1929, to use or equip a motor vehicle with a muffler cut-out.

More clearly defining business and residential sections for purposes of enforcing speed laws. Requiring that only main highways leading into fifteen- or twenty-mile speed-limit zones be signposted.

Repealing the requirement that signs at railroad crossings be posted 300 feet from tracks, and permitting their installation at a reasonable distance at the most favorable position for safety.

Making it a misdemeanor to refuse or neglect to deliver the pink certificate of ownership to the purchaser of a car who is entitled to the certificate. Requiring dealers to notify the State Motor Vehicle Department of cars sold or transferred, except to another dealer.

Doing away with the five-day citation notice on arresting persons for tampering with a vehicle or entering it with intent to commit malicious mischief, and permitting immediate arrest.

Exempting fumigating and spraying apparatus and dollies from registration.

For Yosemite's Betterment—The Federal Department of the Interior has let contracts amounting to $313,260 for road work in Yosemite National Park.

COMPANION MEASURES FOR SOLUTION HIGHWAY PROBLEMS

California's highway [illegible] and [illegible] administration problems will be [illegible] the second half of the 1927 [illegible] Legislature, which reconvened [illegible] February 2. Two companion [illegible] sponsored by the California State Automobile Association and the Automobile Club of Southern California were introduced during the first half of the legislative session. When these were introduced there prevailed, for the first time in many years, an absolute harmony between the two major sections of the state—the so called north and south.

Included in the two measures are certain fundamentals of administration and allocation of funds that should, it is contended, have been put into effect a long time ago. Their inclusion represents not only exhaustive study, but a careful analysis of dissatisfactions that have existed almost from the day the state highway system was first created. The fault is not chargeable to any one person nor to any one particular administration, but rather to a combination of circumstances and to a plan of administration that was not one hundred percent perfect.

To correct the situation, and as a basis for an equitable division of funds, it is proposed to classify the roads in the state system as primary and secondary. The former are to include those main trunk-line roads and county-seat laterals proposed in the original bond issue of 1909. All other highways now in the state system are correlating to the primary system and are secondary to it; consequently, they are so classified.

The aims sought to be attained are first, the immediate completion of the state highway system, and in doing that to insure initial consideration to the main trunk lines and interstate connections; second, an equitable division of construction funds as between the two major sections of the state and the two classes of highways, that the primary system may receive first consideration; third, an assurance of the proper maintenance of any and all highways regardless of where located; and fourth, a fair division of reconstruction money on the basis of highway mileage.

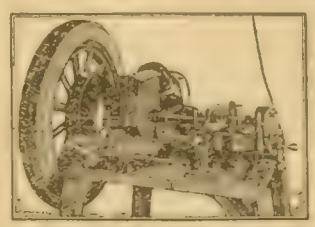
To finance the work of completion of the state highway system it is proposed to levy a one-cent additional gasoline tax, all of the net proceeds of which are to become available to the State Highway Commission for this specific purpose. Through the next ten- or twelve-year period this will raise an average of $10,000,000 per year, insuring as rapid a rate of progress as can be economically handled. That sum, together with federal aid, will, it is believed, complete the entire system within a twelve-year period.

HALF MILLION MOTOR TOURISTS IN CALIFORNIA LAST YEAR.

California was the fortunate host to more than 500,000 motor tourists from other parts of the country during 1926, according to recent compilations of the Automobile Club of Southern California. The tourist influx of 1926 is believed to have been the most prosperous in history, with the automobiles of a larger and more expensive type than in previous years.

Exactly 177,619 cars were counted last year as they crossed the borders of the state, more, by 23,015 cars, than the total of the year before. The State Department of Agriculture checked 158,866 cars entering through the eastern border, while the remaining 18,753 represented visitors' permits issued at stations on the highways near the northern border, the visitors' permits representing the only count on cars from the north. It is estimated that but 50 percent of the motoring visitors obtain permits immediately on entering the state, so the number of visitors is doubled in the estimated total.

Home of the Motor Vehicle—1,384,152 automobiles were registered last year throughout California. Of the number, 566,136 were in Los Angeles County, which was also the home of 86,771 additional registered motor vehicles—75,813 trucks, 2,168 motorcycles and 7,790



To Enforce Load Limit—Orders were issued February 2 by the chief inspector of the State Division of Motor Vehicles to all California traffic officers to begin immediate enforcement of the 22,000-pound maximum load limit for four-wheel trucks operating on the public highways.

Auto Races—Several internationally known racing pilots will start in the 250-mile Los Angeles national classic, for a $25,000 prize and championship honors, at the Culver City speedway, March 6.

CALIFORNIA WOMEN ADVOCATE APPLICATION OF COMMON SENSE.

"Common sense is nature's greatest gift, and if autoists and pedestrians would only apply a little more of it when using the streets and highways of California, the mounting toll of deaths and injuries would be greatly eliminated," says Mrs. D. E. F. Easton, chairman of the California Public Safety Conference, a subsidiary of the California Development Association.

"The obvious is so often overlooked, and lessons clearly taught a thousand times or more daily are not absorbed. Ninety percent of us, both as pedestrians and as motorists, are cognizant of the major transgressions, such as passing on blind curves, reckless speeding, cutting in and other crimes of the road, of this category.

"But one of the greatest offenders is the group that go jogging blissfully and daydreaming along the highway at the 'unsafe' speed of fifteen or twenty miles an hour. This 'safe' driver, as a rule, is entirely unconscious of the fact that he is a menace and a triple threat menace if he does not stay as closely to the right side of the road as possible. Such a driver is usually found in the middle of the road. It is obvious that he is wrong, but we get by him as best we can, happy that we are not one of his victims, and then proceed to forget about the incident. The education of this type of driver should be a prime objective in all safety work.

"Another obvious menace of the road is the man who stops his machine on the highway without making an effort to draw up to the right side, entirely away from the path of traffic.

"There is an obvious fault on the part of the pedestrian that we are inclined to overlook. Hundreds of incidents are revealed daily where the pedestrian of the highway walks on the right-hand side of the road with traffic, his back to approaching machines, giving neither himself nor the motorist a chance to cope with an emergency situation. It is obvious that he is wrong, but we pass him by as best we can and forget the incident. A pedestrian should, of course, walk on the left-hand side of the road against traffic."

CARBURETOR AIR INLET SHOULD FACE BACKWARDS.

A test, covering a period of three years, made by A. H. Hoffman of the University of California's engineering division of the Agricultural Experiment Station at Davis, Yolo County, gives results that would seem to show rather conclusively that the air inlet of the carburetor of an automobile should face backwards rather than forwards. The results of the test made are given by Hoffman as follows:

With the carburetor facing forward, in one year's time with a mileage of 3,646, the dust caught totaled 9.65 grams, or .00265 grams of dust per mile.

With the carburetor air inlet facing backward, in two years' time, with a mileage of 8,705, the dust caught totaled 6.553 grams, or an average of but .00075 per mile.

In other words, with the air inlet facing forward, three and one-half times as much dust was caught as when the inlet faced backward.

Safe Driving—Safe driving saves lives, is a slogan of the California State Automobile Association's public safety department. And it is well to remember that the death toll due to automobile operation in this country already exceeds the American Army losses during the world-war.

Huge Sum From Gas Tax—California collected $18,000,000 in gasoline taxes during 1926, and $16,150,387 in 1925. Since the two-cent tax became effective, October 1923, a total of $51,508,899.51 has been collected.

Brake Inspection — Motorists should have brakes inspected more frequently in the rainy season than at any other time of the year.

Signal Clearly—Signal carefully and clearly when driving in the rain, for better a wet arm than an injured one.

Los Angeles Harbor—Los Angeles County's habor exported $100,000,000 worth of merchandise in 1926, compared with only $748,788 worth in 1915. This was an increase of 40 percent in 1926 over 1925. The export tonnage for 1926 was in excess of 4,000,000 short tons, which places this harbor second to New York among American ports in tonnage of exports to foreign countries, according to federal figures.

FIFTIETH N. S. GRAND PARLOR

THE FIFTIETH GRAND PARLOR OF the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West will convene at San Pedro, Los Angeles County, May 9 for a week's deliberation. Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 of that place has charge of the housing of the delegates and the arranging of a program of entertainment. That the visitors will be well provided for in every way is assured. From time to time, in the San Pedro news section of The Grizzly Bear, has been outlined what Sepulveda has in store for its guests, and full details will, in time, be supplied through this medium.

This should be a most important Grand Parlor, and unless all signs fail it will be, for many important questions confront the Order and they must be satisfactorily adjusted during the silver anniversary session, if the Order's future is to be looked after and assured.

Grand President Hilliard E. Welch of Lodi, San Joaquin County, will preside throughout the San Pedro session. His successor in office, unless the unexpected happens, will be Grand First Vice-president Charles A. Thompson of Santa Clara City. Grand Secretary John T. Regan of San Francisco will probably be re-elected without opposition, and should be, if faithful, willing and competent service is appreciated.

Rumors of candidates for the various offices generally contested for are beginning to fill around. The Grizzly Bear has, by direct communication, endeavored to ascertain the intentions of the rumored candidates, but many have failed to respond. From the answers received, this information is passed on to the Order's membership, all of whom are, or should be, mightily interested in the selection of grand officers for the approaching new Grand Parlor year.

For Grand Third Vice-president, Grand Trustee John T. Newell (Los Angeles Parlor No. 45) of Los Angeles City, Grand Trustee Alfred H. McKnew (San Francisco Parlor No. 49) of San Francisco; Grand Trustee John T. Skelton (Sunset Parlor No. 261) of Sacramento City, Grand Trustee Seth Millington (Colusa Parlor No. 69) of Gridley, Butte County.

Grand Trustee (seven to be selected) Dr. Frank I. Gonzalez (Pacific Parlor No. 10) of San Francisco, incumbent; Grand Marshal J. Hartley Russell (Stanford Parlor No. 76) of San Francisco; Richard M. Hamb (Piedmont Parlor No. 120) of Oakland.

Grand Inside Sentinel—Grand Outside Sentinel A. W. Garcelon (Arcata Parlor No. 20) of Arcata, Humboldt County.

San Jose, Santa Clara County, will, it is predicted, ask for this year's Admission Day celebration, September 9, and Santa Cruz City, if the promises of its delegates at Santa Rosa last year are carried out, will ask for the 1928 (Fifty-first) Grand Parlor.—C.M.H.

NATIVE SON NEWS

was largely attended and proved a most pleasant occasion. It was arranged by a committee consisting of William Tonini (chairman), Albert Dusek and S. J. Damon.

Following a program whist was played, Mrs. E. A. Grinsell, George P. Haywood and Albert V. Goble being the prizewinners. At 11 o'clock hot chicken supper, prepared by Charles R. Kistner, was served. At the banquet board John Lund, on the Parlor's behalf, presented John V. Trigg with a past president's emblem. Dancing was then in order, until 3 a. m., and everybody had a most enjoyable time.

Joint Installation.

Livermore—Officers of Las Positas No. 96 and Angelita Parlor No. 32 N.D.G.W. were jointly installed January 20. D.D.G.P. Gertrude Morrison and D.D.G.P. William R. Crosby officiated and Mrs. C. G. Clarke became the president of No. 32 and W. H. Twisselmann the president of No. 96. Past President Helen Ruter was presented with a gift by Angelita. Following the installation a banquet was served and dancing, music for which was furnished by the high-school orchestra, was enjoyed.

Early History Recounted.

Santa Rosa—Two hundred card players attended the whist party sponsored by Santa Rosa No. 28 and Santa Rosa No. 217 N.D.G.W. for the benefit of the homeless children. Twenty-seven prizes were awarded.

At a recent meeting of the Parlor's luncheon club Mrs. E. C. Merritt related interesting incidents in Sonoma County's early history. She told of the laying of the cornerstone of the old court house here, when General M. G. Vallejo was one of the speakers, and she exhibited an old Russian saber from Bodega.

To Wake Up Lake County.

Lower Lake—In an endeavor to revive interest in the Order in Lake County, Grand President Hilliard E. Welch and Grand Trustee Alfred H. McKnew visited here January 27 and were greeted by a large outpouring of members of Lakeport No. 147, Lower Lake No. 159 and Kelseyville No. 219.

The opinions expressed and the enthusiasm shown indicated that the visit of the grand officers will have the desired effect. It was suggested that one big parlor be formed by the consolidation of the three small Parlors. Following the gathering an oyster "feed" was enjoyed.

Mariposa Meeting Planned.

Merced—To stimulate interest in the Order at old Mariposa and to initiate a class of candidates from that community, Yosemite No. 24 plans a special meeting at Mariposa some time in March. A. E. Daneri (chairman), A. D. Stevenot, W. W. Rodehaver, T. W. Fowler and L. J. Schroeder of Merced, along with John L. Dexter, J. C. Grosjean and L. T. Milburn of Mariposa, compose the committee having the arrangements in charge.

Native Daughters Entertained.

Placerville—Placerville No. 9 entertained Marguerite No. 12 N.D.G.W. February 8. Earle Laumann was chairman of the evening, a splendid program of vocal numbers was presented and addresses were made by George M. Smith and Ted C. Atwood. Dancing and card playing followed the program and a buffet supper was served at midnight. About two hundred enjoyed No. 9's hospitality.

Exclusive Natives' Resort Planned.

Palo Alto—A syndicate composed of local businessmen, members of Palo Alto No. 216, has purchased, and will develop as an exclusive resort for Natives, a 120-acre wooded tract along Alpine Creek in the mountains near La Honda. Officers of the syndicate are: Frank Raynor, president; Edward Waterman, vice-president; Howard Cobb, secretary; I. P. Vandervoort, treasurer; James Farmin, general manager.

The outlined plans provide for the sale of campsites to members of the Orders of Native Sons and Native Daughters. Each purchaser will [illegible] the privilege of [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] to the [illegible] by the [illegible] will be [illegible] to attend and look [illegible] over.

Hall Association Meets.

Santa Rosa—At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Native Sons Hall Association of Santa Rosa, [illegible] were elected as follows: [illegible] E. Pass, C. A. Rose, M. F. Trebilcox, H. B. Bergtold, L. J. Meyerfeld, M. S. Zarick, R. D. Dutton, J. C. Bond, E. H. Krauss, J. F. Dotson, Peter C. Wise.

The report of [illegible] receipts for 1926 totaled $20 [illegible] operating expenses $20,195.11. The lot [illegible] and ground are estimated to be worth $150,000 and $68,909.61, respectively, and among the liabilities is a $90,000 mortgage.

Service Extolled.

Oakland—Frank C. Merritt, recently promoted to the office of city clerk, was a guest of honor of Brooklyn No. 151 February 8. At an elaborate banquet, Toastmaster J. W. McNoble and other speakers extolled the eighteen years of meritorious service rendered the Parlor and the Order by Merritt, who for five years served the Grand Parlor as Historiographer and whose youngest daughter was officially named by the Santa Barbara Grand Parlor Barbara May Merritt.

Grand Trustee Elmer Seawell delivered a stirring address, pleading for extended effort in the Order's behalf. Other speakers included C. K. Townsend, J. J. Mulgrew, A. J. Dieves, G. T. Fieberling, L. J. Hicks, F. B. Perry. Plans for an active term were presented by President William Fraga and members present promised their support.

Newsy Paragraphs.

Grand President Hilliard E. Welch went to Washington, D. C., last month on private business.

Honey Lake No. 198 has moved its location to Standish, Lassen County, and is again on the active list. Grand Secretary John T. Regan visited the Parlor February 16 and assisted in getting business in motion.

Bay View No. 238 (Oakland) has been consolidated with Fruitvale No. 252 (Oakland).

Mountain No. 126 (Dutch Flat) has been consolidated with Auburn No. 59.

A movement is under way to consolidate Calaveras No. 67 (San Andreas) and Angels No. 80 (Angels Camp) with Chispa No. 139 (Murphys).

Government Land Available—Thirty-five sections of mountain land in Tulare County, south of the Tulare River Indian reservation, will be thrown open to entry by the Federal Government at the Visalia Land Office, March 28.

marketing. There are, within a radius of one hundred miles of Stockton, two million consumers, in addition to the markets afforded by other sections of the nation, to which vast quantities of products are shipped annually.

The fact should not be overlooked that Stockton offers unusual educational opportunities, from kindergarten to university degrees. One hundred and fifteen elementary schools, seven modern union high-schools, a commercial college, parochial institutions, and the College of the Pacific housed in its new beautiful buildings here, offer unusual opportunities for the growing generation. The College of the Pacific is a comparatively new educational institution for Stockton, having moved here from San Jose a couple of years ago, but ranks high among the colleges of the Pacific Coast. The present year there are 740 students enrolled, and provisions are being considered to enlarge facilities for a greater enrollment.

Stockton and San Joaquin County are also noted for their wholesome community spirit, high degree of culture and happy homes. Many beautiful stores, theatres, parks and libraries add to the attractiveness of this wonderful city. Mention must also be made of the beautiful new Civic Memorial Auditorium, centrally located, seating 5,000 persons. This auditorium adequately serves the community for its social and civic gatherings and the many conventions held here in Stockton. More than seventy-five churches of all denominations serve the spiritual needs of the community.

It should not be overlooked that Stockton has a climate varied enough to meet the fancy of the most fastidious. There are four distinct seasons—winter, with its tang of frost and rain; spring, the planting season, with its balmy atmosphere, blue skies and flowers; summer, the growing period, with its warmth and urge for the recreational facilities at hand in the nearby mountains and on the seashore; fall, with its environment and attendant harvesting and marketing of the various crops.

Verily, Stockton is a city of dreams and hopes fulfilled, where recreation, industry, agricultural possibilities, hospitality and the romance and true spirit of California exist in the fullest measure.

LOST BOUNDARY MARK FOUND

A LOST MONUMENT MARKING THE first boundary between Upper and Lower California, established by the king of Spain in 1773, a point of great historical significance, bearing upon the present international boundary between Mexico and the United States, has just been discovered, after 153 years of obscurity, by Professor George W. Hendry of the University of California.

The graven wooden cross which was set as a marker by the Franciscan monk, Palou, founder of Mission Dolores in San Francisco and once president of all the California missions, has long since disappeared, but the great cleft rock which supported it has been found, as a result of facts discovered by Professor Herbert E. Bolton, chairman of the Department of History of the university, in translating into English Friar Palou's diary written at the time the boundary was set. A cairn of rock, covering a sealed bottle containing suitable documents, has been erected upon the historic spot by the university expedition.

A detailed and illustrated account of the find has been prepared for the California Historic Society, pointing out that by the terms of the treaty of 1848 the boundary between the United States and Mexico was to follow the division line between Upper and Lower California—presum-nly Palou's boundary, although definite east nd west termini are fixed by the treaty, and ne present line in the vicinity of Tijuana is me thirty miles to the north of this original ivision line between Upper and Lower Califor ia.

"For some time we thought that these facts eemed to indicate," Professor Hendry says, hat the commissioners responsible for the enty intended that the boundary should be dentical with the Palou boundary, and that the iscrepancy came about through ignorance of ne true location of the original boundary mark- , but further researches in the original diplo- atic correspondence from which the injunction f secrecy has now been removed, reveal what e believe is the real explanation.

"James Buchanan, secretary of state, instruct- l an American commissioner, Nicholas P. Trist, ho opened peace negotiations with Mexico dur- g the armistice of April 1847, following the exican War, to offer the sum of twenty-five illion dollars for the entire peninsula of Lower alifornia, or failing in this to fix our boundary bout twenty miles north of parallel 32. This tter boundary passes just south of Palou's rock, nd was designed to provide access from the nited States to the Gulf of California. But the exican diplomats were unwilling to sell Lower alifornia, or to surrender all land connection ith it. Rather than see the negotiations fail rough Trist proposed another boundary with- t authority which surrendered San Diego and l sea coast below Del Mar to Mexico. For this reach of instructions Trist was recalled, but, ithout the approval of his government, he pro- eeded to negotiate still another treaty fixing the oundary as it now stands, which, curiously ough, was accepted and duly ratified by both overnments.

"This compromise boundary, then, our pres- t international boundary midway between ose proposed by the two governments, was the sult of a last desperate attempt upon the part Trist to reconcile the views of the two gov- nments, and doubtless this accounts for the nbiguous wording 'thence following the divis- n line between Upper and Lower California,' nnoting that the boundary desired by Buch- an was being followed to the Pacific, and unding as if the Palou boundary, the only vision line ever set on the land, was meant. ly careful measurements on the map could ve revealed the truth that Trist's proposal eant the loss of some thirty-three miles of ter- tory on the Pacific."

'DIAN ROCK CARVINGS AND PAINTINGS ARE BEING STUDIED.

An extensive study of rock carvings and rock intings made by Indians of California, of the cific Southwest and of certain sections of the rthern Pacific Coast is now in process of com- tion by Julian Stewart, graduate student of e University of California's department of an- ropology, and Duncan Strong, member of the aff of the Field Museum of Chicago.

The greatest center of pictographs has proved be along the Kern and Kaweah Rivers and Santa Barbara County. Carvings or petri- aphs are scattered through the desert regions defly. Outside of California, in Nevada, Ari- na and other states, forty-five sites have been und.

It is hoped that by a complete compilation and mparison of the carvings and paintings some kling of the meaning or purpose they orig- ally had will be hit upon. None of the present bes can offer any explanation of them, and any dition that might have been woven about em has been lost in the dim past. They are mplete mysteries, offering material only for esses. Eventually the pictures, maps and ex- natory writings will be published by the uni- rsity in book form.

Pedro Grand Parlor. The Parlor's officers have volunteered to exemplify the ritual anytime anywhere. They make up one of the most proficient ritual teams in the Order, and they have wonderful co-operation from the members in general. March 31 the good of the order committee will stage a dance, to which eligibles are especially invited.

BIRTHDAY PARTY.

The good of the order committee of Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W.—Ralph I. Harbison (chairman), Carl A. Mueller, Phillip McAnany—inaugurated a new, for that Parlor, line of sociables February 25 -a series of birthday parties. These will be featured the last Friday of each month, and the members whose birthdays occur in a particular month, along with the womenfolks, are especially urged to attend. A present is given each birthday-member, and Chairman Harbison promises a splendid program for every occasion. The next birthday party, for the March boys, is billed for March 25—and don't forget to bring along the women.

Ramona initiated a class of nine candidates February 18. It is sponsoring a troop of Boy Scouts of America; any one interested should get in touch with Municipal Judge Louis P. Russill. Basketball and indoor-baseball teams are being organized. March 11 the Parlor will nominate delegates to the San Pedro Grand Parlor, the election to be held April 1.

HOLLYWOOD DANCE MARCH 12.

Hollywood Parlor No. 196 N.S.G.W. has taken out a membership in the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce, several of the members subscribing the first year's dues. Allan Hansen was glad he attended the meeting February 7, when the "mysterious box's" contents went to him.

Louis S. Nordlinger, for a quarter-century treasurer of the Parlor, has resigned and will enjoy an extended European trip. Henry G. Bodkin has been elected to the office.

March 12, Hollywood will give a dance in the Hollywood Conservatory of Music Building, 5402 Hollywood boulevard. The good of the order committee—Carl Riley (chairman), S. R. Bell, Harry Jorder, Kenneth Green, Allan Hansen, W. R. Topham—is in charge.

Plans are shaping for the Parlor's institution anniversary banquet in April, and it promises to be an out-of-the-ordinary event. A baseball team is operating, and basketball and drill teams are in process of formation.

COMMUNITY SOCIABLE.

Vaquero Parlor No. 262 N.S.G.W. gave another of its enjoyable community affairs Washington's Birthday, February 22. Dancing was the main attraction. The Parlor's orchestra, present at all meetings, is a drawing card and is much in demand. President Gabriel Ruiz is training a group of members in Spanish dances.

GLENDALE DANCE MARCH 16.

Despite the inclement weather, the social dance of Glendale Parlor No. 264 N.S.G.W. February 16 was attended by many couples, who enjoyed the irresistible music. The broom dance was a feature of the evening and created considerable amusement. Another of these enjoyable dances will be conducted at the Parlor's meeting-place, 610-A East Broadway, March 16. Admission 75 cents, women free.

Glendale will have a number of candidates for the class initiation March 18.

BOTANIC GARDENS.

Los Angeles will become the botanical research center of the world through plans consummated for the establishment in Mandeville Canyon, near Santa Monica and adjoining the new Occidental College site, of an 800-acre botanical garden. H. C. Oakley, Dr. J. W. Oakley and Alphonzo Bell became interested in the project and made endowments sufficient for it.

After months of work the plans for the project have finally been approved and construction will start within a short time. A total of 3,500 acres of land constitute the endowment. Of this, 800 acres, including the beautiful tropical gardens of H. C. Oakley, will constitute the garden proper.

SAN DIEGO'S HISTORICAL PRE-EMINENCE

(FROM SMYTHE'S COPYRIGHTED "HISTORY OF SAN DIEGO.")

AS THE CITIZENS AND TOURISTS OF today look upon the crumbling adobe walls of Old Town, they naturally wonder in what order the houses were built, by whom they were inhabited in the early time, and what visitors from abroad mingled in the life of the place and went away to speak the name of San Diego in distant parts.

There is no record of the erection of any dwelling outside the presidio enclosure earlier than the year 1800. It seems likely that the first house at the foot of the hill was a very humble affair, and that it was built by Captain Francisco Maria Ruiz. The earliest authentic list of houses that has come down to us begins with 1821.

In December 1826 the American explorer and trapper, Jedediah Strong Smith, and party, who had crossed the desert, following down the Colorado River and reached San Gabriel, were brought to San Diego to be dealt with by Governor Echeandia. They had a somewhat unfriendly reception, but were allowed to secure supplies and depart. The accounts of this visit do not seem to include anything of interest regarding the town or people of San Diego.

The next visitor was the French captain, Duhaut-Cilly, who came in 1827 and liked the harbor better than the town. He writes that the port is "without doubt the best in all California," safer than that of San Francisco even, and that this is due to natural advantages rather than to artificial improvements. The American, James O. Pattie, claimed to have spent the greater part of the year 1828 in the presidio prison, and afterward published a narrative in which he described only his prison.

From 1830 onward, the town grew rapidly and was soon, for the time and country, an important commercial and social center. When William Heath Davis first came, in 1831, he found it quite a lively town. The next visitor, in order of time, was the well-known Richard Henry Dana, who was here in 1836. In 1838 there were nine foreigners in San Diego, among them Thomas Russell and Peter Weldon, who were concerned in a search for treasure supposed to be buried at the mission.

The decline of San Diego began about 1836 and continued steadily until the Mexican War. In 1840 the population was the smallest for fifty years. Late in 1841 the newly-appointed bishop of the diocese of Upper California, Garcia Diego, came with the intention of making San Diego his residence. He abandoned the idea, however, and located at Santa Barbara instead, chiefly on account of the poverty of the mission and town of San Diego. In 1844-6, in an effort to raise troops for the defense of the country in the pending American invasion, there were only about seventy men capable of bearing arms.

The foreign settlers living in San Diego in 1845, according to Crosthwaite's recollection, were: Himself, Henry D. Fitch; Don Juan Warner, Abel Stearns, John Forster, Captain John S. Barker, Thomas Wrightington, John Post, Peter Wilder, John C. Stewart, Thomas Russell, Caesar Walker, Captain Edward Stokes, an English carpenter known as "Chips," Enos A. Wall, Albert B. Smith and two Negroes named Allen B. Dight and Richard Freeman.

Frequent reference has been made to Alfred Robinson and William Heath Davis. Robinson was a native of Massachusetts who came here in 1829 as clerk of the ship "Brookline." He was baptized as Jose Maria Alfredo before 1833 and early in 1836 married at Santa Barbara Ana Maria, daughter of Captain Jose de la Guerra y Noriega. This wedding is the one described in Dana's book. The following year he and his wife went to Boston. He returned in the "Alert" in 1840 and remained two years. His employment in these days was as clerk and supercargo of different ships. In 1849 he returned to California as agent for the Pacific Mail Steamship Company and in later years was engaged in some real estate transactions in San Francisco. His "Life in California" is a standard work and one of the best of its kind. Robinson, although of a somewhat reserved disposition, was a competent man and his standing in California was good. He deserves to be remembered among the Pioneers who saw clearly and judged with common sense.

William Heath Davis was born at Honolulu in 1821 and came to California as a boy on the "Louisa" in 1831. In November 1847 he married Maria de Jesus Estudillo, daughter of Jose Joaquin Estudillo. His wife lived in San Diego when young and his book is full of information about the life here in early days. For many years he was one of the most prominent merchants in San Francisco and engaged in some of the largest trading ventures on the coast. He took little part in public affairs but was a thorough and successful businessman. He was one of the founders of New San Diego and built the first wharf there in 1850, a circumstance of which he was always proud although the venture was not a financial success. In 1889 he published his "Sixty Years in California," which is one of the most interesting and informative books ever written about California. In this book, like Alfred Robinson, he stands up manfully in defense of the Californians—that is, of the better families, such as that into which he married.

Whatever was lacking in Old San Diego, the social life was rich and beautiful. This is the testimony of all visitors and all the old residents who have lived to tell the tale. People did not take life too seriously in those days. They made the most of their opportunities for happiness, and collected large dividends of content, whether they had any other sort or not. The echo of their laughter still rings down the pathway of the years, and suggests to the nervous Americans of today that there might be some pleasant compromise between the extremes of energy and indolence which would result in forms of life peculiarly suited to the rare environment of this southern land.

The social customs which flourished in the midst of these conditions were so deeply marked with the spirit of common kindness that one can hardly escape the thought that something has been lost, as well as gained, in our present-day struggle to get ahead, as individuals and communities.

Incivility was absolutely unknown. Even t poorest peasant saluted you politely and was pr pared to carry a message or do any little cou tesy without charge and with an air of chee fulness and good humor. The kindness of t people was genuine and unaffected.

The better class of Californians were tempe ate, with few exceptions. They were fond smoking, however, and the habit was almo universal with them. The Mexican women we also fond of tobacco and brought the custom smoking cigaritos to California.

The frequent fiestas were one of the mo highly-prized features of the social life of ear days, and one which persisted after nearly a the other characteristic amusements had pass away.

With the coming of the Americans and t setting of the tide of business toward New En land all these things soon began to be affect and, in time, passed into complete eclipse. Ma ners and customs went with the tide, especial after the Mexican War, and left only lovi memories. It took some time to thaw the na ural reserve between two peoples who did n understand each other. This thawing proces marking the period at the beginning of whi Americans were regarded with distrust, if n dislike, and the time when they were receiv with marked favor, may be said to have o curred between 1830 and 1835. At the begi ning of this period intermarriages between t two raecs were rare and when they did occ created a sensation; at the end, they were t common to excite comment.

CALIFORNIA'S OLDEST BUILDING

(OLIVE LOPEZ.)

ORANGE COUNTY'S MOST-PRIZED landmark is the Mission San Juan Capistrano, called by historian and poet "the jewel of the missions" of California. Under the gentle and ambitious guidance of its present pastor, the Rev. St. John O'Sullivan, it is gradually being restored to its pristine beauty and importance.

Among the rare jewels of a former day contained in this ancient pile, which took form in the year 1776, is the reredos, the great ornamental decoration back of the altar in the church of Father Junipero Serra, the founder of the California missions, which was restored in 1922.

As the old church, erected on the spot where the venerable Franciscan said the first mass upon an altar fashioned under a rude arbor, was being restored, Father O'Sullivan thought seriously of the problem of an appropriate altar for the edifice, and one day, although not being cognizant of any special reason for doing so as he had no business to transact with him, he went to Los Angeles to visit the Right Rev. John J. Cantwell, bishop of the diocese of Los Angeles and San Diego.

The bishop recounted to the mission priest some incidents about various boxes which had been in storage for a long time and which necessitated the payment of a goodly sum each year. Included, he said, was an old altar, which had been destined to occupy a place in the new cathedral, planned to be built by the late Bishop Conaty in Los Angeles and which Bishop Cantwell intended to give to a mission church then being erected.

Father O'Sullivan asked to be permitted to look at the altar and was given leave to do so. He was thrilled when he saw what the boxes contained, as he immediately recognized a marvelous work of art, such as he had read of but never expected to see. The bishop granted him permission to take it for the Serra church, if he would give the other chapel an altar to take its place, which he did. The same night the retable was on its way to its new home, where it has been given a place of honor and where thousands of visitors from all over the world hear it described by the guides.

Artists, and specialists in curios and antiquities, who have come to examine the ancient carvings, value the reredos at $100,000 as a work of art and antiquity. It is very ornate, being twenty-four feet high and eighteen and one-half feet wide. It was too high for the church, so the upper arches were removed. The material used is Spanish cedar, with real gold leaf cover, and it is at least 250 years old. The style is Baroque, and connoisseurs who have been in Rome say that it is more ornate than any seen there.

At the top the Eternal Father is conceived by the artist as a venerable old man, enclosed in a triangle representing the Blessed Trinity. He holds in the left hand a globe, representing the universe, while the right is extended in blessing. Heads of beautiful angels are enshrouded in clouds about the statues, and about the whole reredos are carved fifty-two tiny angels' faces. The niches contain the statues of Saint Francis of Assisi and Saint Peter, the first pope, holding the key on the gospel side, and Saint Michael and Saint Clare on the epistle side. The central place of honor is occupied by the great soldier, saint and patron of the mission. The columns of the reredos differ from others of its kind in that they are double and beautifully convoluted.

Father Serra's church claims the honor of being the oldest building in California, only a part of it having been destroyed by earthquake. The records show that it was finished in 1778. The mission has as hallowed records books recording marriages and baptisms, the Father Presidente himself writing the title pages, containing a brief history of the founding of the mission, which he named San Juan Capistrano de Quanis-Savit, the latter word having later been canceled and written Sajivit.

The first child baptized was named Nanojibar, or Juan Bautista, December 19, 1776. Father Serra also confirmed in the chapel, and it is the only church remaining where he celebrated holy mass. He died at San Carlos August 28, 1874.

Another relic of the palmy days of the big stone church of the mission, destroyed in the quake of 1812, is the old iron railing, which was formerly in front of the sanctuary and is now in the choir loft of the Serra church, which was restored by the present pastor in 1922.

Father O'Sullivan went to San Juan Capistrano in such poor health that he thought he had not long to live, but God has blessed his labors so greatly that, although he still is not robust, he is gradually restoring the old mission, and when the new buildings which are now being erected are finished the grounds will be enclosed on three sides. The new edifices, harmonizing with the ancient pile, include a school building and a convent, to cost $50,000.

The old baptistry, which was also destroyed in the great earthquake, has been rebuilt upon the original site by the Santa Ana Parlors of Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West, and the ancient baptismal font, with its rude carvings, now reposes in the original resting-place.

Had it not been for the Landmarks Club of California, of which Charles F. Lummis of the Angel City was the president, San Juan Capistrano Mission would have been no more. The first restoration work of the club was done there, the buildings being re-roofed and the walls rebuilt. From one account of this work I quote: "If the club had not done the work it has done in the last seven years (before 1907) there would be practically nothing left of any of these four missions (San Diego, San Juan Capistrano, San Fernando and Pala, a branch of San Luis Rey). Aside from the looting of their tiles to roof neighboring pig pens, the decay of the sycamore branches which served as rafters caused the tile roofs to break down; and the adobe walls were melting into indistinguishable mounds. It is no exaggeration to say that human power could not have restored these four missions if there had been five years of delay in the attempt."

The work of restoration has mainly been accomplished through the donations of friends of the mission and tourists, who are charged a small admission to be shown through the ancient landmark and to view the interesting old records, vestments and Father Serra's church with the magnificent old reredos, the pride of Father O'Sullivan's heart.

A cavalcade of over a hundred men accompanied the Chico officers and prisoners to the Butte County jail at Oroville, where they were met in the jail yard by a crowd of several hundred citizens and a couple of hundred Chinamen. They at first feared it was a vigilance committee, but the crowd were there more from curiosity than design and the prisoners were not molested. F. E. Conway, two brothers named Slaughter, Thomas Steinbrook and Eugene Roberts, all young men near 20 years of age, were charged with committing the crimes. The excitement did not abate and additional arrests of members of the organization continued to be made during the month.

Napa City was experiencing a spasm of curiosity in the birth of a pig, in a litter of ten, that had the head of an elephant, with trunk and tusks, a tuft of hair on its chin like a billy goat, and feet like a camel's. It was said the sow was frightened by the menagerie display in a circus parade a few months previous.

WOMAN ROUTS BURGLARS.

T. Wallace Moore, a large landowner and extensive farmer near Santa Paula, Ventura County, was assassinated by five men the night of March 24. They first set fire to the barn, a short distance from his house and, after he and his foreman, Ferguson, in their nightclothes had rushed to the barn to save the horses in it, they were fired upon. Moore fell with four bullets in his body and one in his head and died immediately, but Ferguson escaped with a scalp wound. It was thought that the murder was done by settlers with whom Moore had had trouble over water rights, but nothing positive developed this month.

At San Jose, Santa Clara County, March 28 Joseph Mendoza engaged in a quarrel with Mrs. Spence over property rental. He made an assault and while she was defending herself her t, is not unknown to students of California hisy. This fact gives more than usual interest the record of his journey while crossing the ins and his first impressions upon reaching new land.

LORENZO SAWYER

At the time of the gold discovery Sawyer had eady been admitted to the bar in the State of io, had spent a year in Chicago in the law ice of James A. McDougal, later state attorey-general and United States Senator from Calinia, and had recently moved to Wisconsin, m which state he began his journey to Calinia.

Although Sawyer's journey came one year er the great migration of 1849 it nevertheless es us an excellent picture of that great movent of population. The value and interest of work is greatly enhanced by copious notes pared by Eberstadt from more than two-score other accounts. Most of these are contemporeous accounts, some of them still in manuipt form and widely scattered in libraries throughout the United States.

The Sawyer journal was first published in serial form as letters to an Ohio newspaper during the summer and fall of 1850, and were doubtless read with great interest by those contemplating the trip to California and by those whose relatives had already gone. Since they were published in this form the letters of Sawyer have until now been practically unknown to the student of California history. To Henry R. Wagner, whose bibliographic studies led to the discovery of the value and source of these letters and to the present editor and publisher, the student of western history is greatly indebted.

The Sawyer party left Saint Joseph, Missouri, early in May 1850 and arrived in Sacramento about the middle of the following July. They seem to have been well organized and so made excellent time all the way across. The account takes the form of a daily journal and when checked with a map gives an excellent idea of the Overland Route. The footnotes giving quotations from other accounts greatly help in making clear points otherwise less well defined. The route taken was the usual one up the Platte and the Sweetwater through South Pass; thence by Sublette's Cut-off to Soda Springs; thence by Hudspeth's Cut-off to the headwaters of the Humboldt River, which was followed to its Sink; thence across to the Sink of the Carson and up the Carson River, through Carson Pass to Sacramento. Three letters written after his arrival in California give Sawyer's early impressions of Sacramento and Nevada City.

The volume consists of 125 pages and is divided into chapters corresponding to the different stages of the journey. Four pages are devoted to a brief biography of Sawyer. An index would have added greatly to the value of the work, but the lack of this is made up in part by a rather full table of contents. There appears to be a typographical error, probably the omission of a line, at the bottom of page 96, but otherwise the printing appears to have been excellently done. It is a book which is worthy of a place in every library of Californiana.

"Way Sketches Across the Plains in 1850." Containing Incidents of Travel Across the Plains from Saint Joseph to California in 1850, with Letters Describing Life and Conditions in the Gold Region. By Lorenzo Sawyer, Later Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of California, with Historical Notes Compiled from Rare Sources and an Introduction by Edward Eberstadt. CALIFORNIA'S VERY EXISTENCE THREATENED

Arthur Richard Hinton

(SECRETARY LOS ANGELES COUNTY ANTI-ASIATIC ASSOCIATION.)

STRANGE, INDEED, IS THE FACT THAT in the present Oriental troubles, when the eyes of the world are centered upon the Chinese civil war, the resulting danger to foreigners in China, and the threat to commerce, missionary work and political influence in China, not a single voice is raised in Washington or throughout the entire nation, not even here in California, to warn of the appalling menace to us, not only in the matter of Oriental trade, not only in world prestige, not only in the Philippines, but right here in California and the adjoining states. This menace is to the very existence of California and the entire Pacific Coast as a White man's country.

Early in the history of the state, California was subject to an invasion of Chinese. Its menace grew to such proportions that exclusion laws became imperative to keep the state from being made an Asiatic colony. The law in effect today against the Chinese is effective; also, it is discriminatory, for while Japanese are now denied free admission to the United States, neither they nor any others are subject to the strict regulations and exactions that the Chinese are.

When the Chinese Exclusion Act was passed, China was under the rule of the effeminate Manchu emperors, a race distinct from the Cantonese, now so much in evidence in the present fighting, and from whose ranks came ninety-five percent of the Chinese immigrants to the United States. The entire mass of the Chinese people were still asleep, unaware of their power, European nations dominated the country, extra-territorial rights of Americans and Europeans were unquestioned, and the prestige of the Caucasian had never been disputed. The Chinese were then thorough pacifists, utterly despising the soldier and any suggestion of military power or resistance. At that time extra-territoriality existed not only in China, but also in Japan and all Asiatic nations. Its justice, propriety and permanence were never questioned. Japan obtained the abolition of extra-territoriality after defeating China in war.

Notwithstanding these conditions, China did not accept quietly and unprotestingly the enactment of the Exclusion Act. The diplomatic representatives of the Manchu government protested strenuously at Washington. When ordinary diplomatic procedure failed, they resorted to propaganda in the hope of bringing American public opinion to their aid. The activities along this line of Wu Ting Fang aroused severe criticism in Congress. Though failing to get permanent results, the Chinese were successful in getting a temporary respite from President Grover Cleveland in the enforcement of the law.

Can any thinking American, especially any Californian, doubt what will be the next step on the part of China, whenever it becomes a united nation with a strong, efficient government; with extra-territoriality abolished and its jurisdiction over White foreigners recognized throughout the country; with a real army, a fighting navy and an active, efficient air service?

Unquestionably, when these things come to pass there will be presented at Washington a diplomatic demand for the repeal of the Chinese Exclusion Act. Perhaps, modification will be asked at first, but when and if we grant that there will come a demand for entire repeal of any laws which discriminate against Chinese as compared with other nationals.

First, these demands will be diplomatic and courteous, accompanied by active propaganda among those far-too numerous Americans who always lend a ready ear to any suggestion from abroad. When these demands are refused, as they must be, they will become more determined and threatening of military action to enforce compliance.

While California has been able to have restrictions placed upon Japanese immigration, the military, naval and diplomatic strength of Japan has prevented any such policy as registration or anything approaching that which has been enforced for years against the Chinese, a fact highly suggestive of what may happen when China may have achieved like power.

Demands for the admission of Chinese to the United States may come jointly with like demands from Japan. While Japanese and Chinese are far from friendly, they may readily act together when they have a big common interest at stake. Many other unfriendly nations have done so. But whether the two nations act jointly or separately, the menace to California will be appalling, for pacifism, with accompanying contempt for and neglect of military training and preparedness, is gaining ground in many American circles at the very time that China is discarding such theories and practices and moving rapidly in the opposite direction.

Is it not time for California and the Pacific states, their Legislatures, their executives, their Senators and Representatives in the Federal Congress, their newspapers, their teachers and leaders, their businessmen and people to consider this phase of the present Oriental situation?

At this time, it looks as if the unification of China under stable government, the militarization of a large part of the Chinese people, the overthrow of extra-territoriality with the abandonment of foreigners to Chinese jurisdiction, and the abject surrender of the Caucasian to the Mongolian are inevitable. Neither our own nor any European statesman is taking a firm stand and it may be that such a course is impossible. This being the case, is it not time for Americans who want our Pacific Coast to remain a White man's country to begin operations for its defense? It will not be safe to trust everything to Washington, for the federal administration apparently is far more interested in destroying, than in strengthening, national defense.

There is considerable sentiment in the East that is anything but friendly to California's racial problems. There is every possibility that China and Japan may find European allies to attack the East coast when they move upon us. The Pacific Coast may yet have to fight alone against a virtual Pan-Asiatic combination. Ways and means to strengthen ourselves should receive immediate consideration.

FIRST STEP OF A RUSSIAN UPON CALIFORNIA SOIL

(CLARENCE M. HUNT.)

"THE REZANOV VOYAGE TO NUEVA California in 1806," is an English translation of the report of the voyage, from Sitka to San Francisco, of Count Nikolai Petrovich Rezanov. He left Sitka February 25, 1806, on the "Juno," and arrived at the entrance to Puerto de San Francisco March 27, 1806, landing the following day. He remained there six weeks, departing on the "Juno" May 10, 1806, and arriving at New Archangel June 8, 1806. His personal account of the voyage—"a report of the first step of a Russian on the soil of Nueva California," to use his own words,—was dated at Sitka June 17, 1806.

Rezanov was most observant of conditions during his sojourn in San Francisco, and became a privileged character. "If the Russian government," said his report, "had thought earlier of this part of the world, and estimated adequately its potentialities, and if it had pursued continuously the far-reaching plans of Peter the Great, who, with insignificant resources, dispatched the expedition commanded by Bering, it is safe to say that Nueva California would never have been Spanish territory, the Spaniards having only turned their attention to it since 1760, and it was only by the zeal and energy of the Franciscan missionaries that this incomparable territory was permanently incorporated into their kingdom. Even now there still is left an unoccupied intervening territory fully as rich, and if we allow it to slip through our fingers, what will succeeding generations say?"

Rezanov journeyed to Nueva California with the idea of furthering the interest of Russia here and of eventually bringing it under the domination of his country. "We must presume that the Spaniards, fanatical though they are," continued his report, "will proceed farther, and though I endeavored to divert suspicion, yet their officials are not likely to credit my amicable arguments. As decidedly as I am convinced of the success of this proposed undertaking, just as positive am I that if its merits are not recognized and embraced in the time of Alexander I, we never need expect to reap the potential benefits, missed by not being seized in time. . . . Pro Dios, gracious sire, consider with a spirit of patriotism the natural resources of this territory, which promises and offers such vast advantageous commercial opportunities to our country, of which your excellency is the only intermediary before the imperial throne, and present to the emperor my plans, the accomplishment of which will make his memory immortal."

While in San Francisco, Rezanov met, wooed, and won the love of Dona Concepcion Arguello—baptized Maria de la Concepcion Marcela Arguello—born there February 19, 1791, the daughter of Don Jose Dario Arguello and Dona Maria Ignacia Moraga. Referring to her, Rezanov's report said: "While awaiting the arrival of the governador we made visits daily to the residence of the hospitable Arguellos, and soon became on intimate terms with them. Loveliest of the lovely sisters of Don Luis, the comandante temporal, the Dona Concepcion is the universally recognized beauty of Nueva California. . . . Associating daily with and paying my addresses to the beautiful Spanish senorita, I could not fail to perceive her active, venturesome disposition and character, her unlimited and overweening desire for rank and honor, which, with her age of fifteen years, made her, alone among her family, dissatisfied with the land of her birth. She always referred to it jokingly; thus, as 'a beautiful country, a warm climate, an abundance of grain and cattle,—and nothing else.'

"I described Russia to her as a colder country, but still abounding in everything, and she was willing to live there, and at length I imperceptibly created in her an impatient desire to hear something more explicit from me, and when I proffered my hand, she accepted. My proposal was a shock to her parents, whose religious upbringing was fanatical. . . . They urged her to refuse me, but her brave front finally quieted them all. . . . Not being able to bring about the marriage, I had a written conditional agreement made, and forced a betrothal. . . . Should fate decree the completion of my romance,—not begun in hot passion, which is not becoming at my age, but arising under the pressure of conditions, remoteness, duties, responsibilities, perhaps also under the influence of remnants of feelings that in the past were a source of happiness in my life,—then, and in such case, I shall be in a position to serve my country once again."

Rezanov dispatched the report of his voyage to the Russian minister of commerce, and left

CALIFORNIA HAPPENINGS OF FIFTY YEARS AGO

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR)

SHOWERS ON SEVERAL DAYS DURING the month of April 1877 brought the season's rainfall up to 8.12 inches in the Sacramento Valley. It was a dry year, and the depressing effects of such a condition began to manifest themselves in different sections of California. Wheat advanced to $3 a cental.

An unexpected heavy rainfall during the first week of the month in California South assured that section an average crop of grain and hay.

One of the effects of the jejune year, and one that gave a shock to the commercial world, was the failure of I. Friedlander, the reputed "grain king" of California. He was a man seven feet high, with head, hands and feet as large in proportion, so that he was observed wherever he went. He was somewhat stoop shouldered, said to have become so from stooping to enter office doors and leaning a listening ear to hear what shorter men had to say. His business transactions were on as large a scale as his size, for he failed for over a million dollars. From his wealthy and commanding pinnacle he had fallen through unwisely chartering too many vessels to take grain cargoes that could not now be obtained to Liverpool and also through selling on time large tracts of land in the San Joaquin Valley to farmers who now, on account of crop failure, were unable to even pay the interest on the money due. A compromise with his creditors, at 25 cents on the dollar, was under consideration so as to let the "grain king" resume business at the end of the month.

There was a day of panic in the San Francisco Stock Market April 12 and prices tumbled and crumbled in a disastrous way. Overman, that sold for $120 a share in January, went begging at $17 a share and prices of other mining stocks tobogganed in more or less degree. The cause was attributed to the refusal of the commercial banks to lend money on mining stocks as collateral.

"Lucky" Baldwin was now called the "stock board Don Juan" by his fellow mining stock investors, because Miss Mary J. Donahue sued him for $100,000 for trifling with her affections.

Mrs. D. D. Colton, wife of General Colton, who was now a Southern Pacific magnate, presented to the Presbyterian church at Colton, San Bernardino County, an 800-pound bell.

A town called Gospel Swamp came into notice in California South.

The Spring Valley Water Company, on account of a controversy with the city officials about rates, shut off the supply of water in Portsmouth Square and other San Francisco parks April 1. Mayor Bryant immediately employed plumbers and turned the water on. Then followed injunctions and other court proceedings which the mayor had to obey until the dispute was adjudicated.

APRIL FOOLISHNESS EXPENSIVE.

The Star Oil Company near Ventura City brought in a flowing well at a depth of 180 feet. It flowed twenty-five barrels a day. Parties were in that district negotiating to lay a pipe line from the different oil centers to tidewater and this was expected to make of Ventura the refining center of that region.

Dr. Cunningham of Anaheim, Orange County, had made a manure incubator and was hatching 800 eggs by it.

Grasshoppers in swarms made their appearance in parts of Los Angeles County and flocks of hawks were feeding upon them.

The steamer "Alaska" arrived in San Francisco from China with 950 Chinamen and a dozen cases of smallpox aboard April 23. It was quarantined.

Governor Thomas H. Hendricks of Indiana visited California South this month and was given a rousing reception in Los Angeles. He was taken through the San Gabriel Valley in a barouche drawn by four white horses and was accompanied by a number of the leading citizens.

Charles Driscoll put an advertisement in the San Francisco papers April 1 offering employment to 1,000 laboring men with an attractive wage rate. They were to report at the entrance of ex-Senator Latham's bank at 10 a. m. A crowd of over 3,000 gathered there, to find it was a fake. For his April foolishness Driscoll was arrested for malicious mischief and fined $50.

Frank Leslie, publisher of "Leslie's Illustrated Weekly," with his wife and staff of artists and photographers arrived in California and toured the state, taking views of important points for making illustrations for the weekly.

Lizzie C. Adams sued Laura D. Fair for $1,200 she claimed to have given her in 1875 to invest in a pool "Lucky" Baldwin had formed in the stock of the Imperial mine on the Comstock Lode. She claimed the stock had been sold at a profit, but she had neither received her share nor her investment back. The jury awarded her a verdict for $1,200 and interest. Laura D. Fair soon after filed a petition in bankruptcy. She owed $21,000 and had a few hundred shares of Ophir and other mining stocks as assets.

The chief of a Mojave Indian tribe died in California South and the tribe attributed his death to the bewitchery of his squaw. They clubbed her to death and then cremated her body, spreading the ashes over the grave of the chief. They then slaughtered twelve horses to provide him with spiritual mounts in the happy hunting grounds and themselves with funeral baked meats.

KINDNESS REWARDED.

A man named Hartley got tired of living and went to the vicinity of the Cliff House to "shuffle off this mortal coil." To do so he carried a rope and fastened the end of the coil to an overhanging rock, looping the other end around his neck. He then took a dose of laudanum, set his clothing on fire and, placing the muzzle of a pistol in his mouth, pulled the trigger. It only snapped; then the poison made him sick; the fire he had set to his clothes burned the rope so that it broke, and he fell down the slope into the water, which extinguished the fire. He could have easily drowned then had he not been seen by people who rushed to his rescue and pulled him ashore in time to save his life.

Myron Thomas, near Scott Bar, Siskiyou County, on the road to the Klamath River April 1 was knocked down, with his horse, by the explosion of a meteor just above him. It was seen coming like a ball of fire, two feet in diameter. It completely vanished with the explosion as no pieces of it could be found.

Charles Bergot, an eccentric Frenchman who sold newspapers for many years and was a San Francisco character as well known as "Emperor Norton" although he worked for a living which the "Emperor" did not, died April 8, aged 8. He went to the city almshouse in his declining years, but paid for his keep. He left $25,000 on deposit in a savings bank and willed it to Mrs. Bayne, the wife of a newspaperman who had been kind to him during his last years.

James Corbin, a sporting man of Sacramento, attended a trap shoot near that city and laid his gun case upon the ground after taking the gun out. The case was about three feet long and opened at the end by raising a flap. At the conclusion of the shoot he placed his gun into the case, closed it with the flap and carried it to his room. Opening it there to take out the gun and clean it, out crawled a snake about three feet long that gave him the scare of his life. After the snake had crawled around the room several minutes and Corbin had collected himself, the reptile was dispatched.
